

NYPL RESEARCH LIBRARIES

3 3433 08157029 7

103
C. SALLUSTII CRISPI

OPERA:

ADAPTED TO THE HAMILTONIAN SYSTEM

BY A

LITERAL AND ANALYTICAL TRANSLATION.

BY

103 ✓
JAMES HAMILTON,

AUTHOR OF THE HAMILTONIAN SYSTEM.

A NEW AND MORE ACCURATE EDITION.

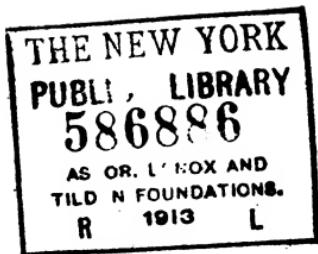

CAREFULLY REVISED, CORRECTED, AND OMISSIONS SUPPLIED; AND WHAT IS OBSCURE OR UNINTELLIGIBLE, IN HAMILTON'S TRANSLATION, EXPLAINED.

BY
THOMAS CLARK.

PHILADELPHIA:
CHARLES DESILVER,
No. 714 CHESTNUT STREET.

W. B. KEEN,
148 LAKE STREET, CHICAGO.

1860.

Entered, according to Act of Congress, in the year 1857, by CHARLES DESILVER,
in the Clerk's Office of the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.

THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY
586886 AS OR. L'NOX AND TILD N FOUNDATIONS.
R 1913 L

P R E F A C E.

THIS American edition of Hamilton's interlinear Sallust has been carefully revised, the errors corrected, and the omissions in the London edition supplied; for, without the greatest care on the part of the translator, such omissions often occur in interlinear translations. These omissions are indicated, in this edition, by placing the English words in brackets [] under the Latin, as, page 40:

Permixtum vino.
[Mingled with wine.]

Permixtum vino has, through oversight, been omitted in the text; so also in page 45:

Genere atque formâ præterea; [In lineage and beauty moreover.] and in page 50:

Pro magnitudine reipublicæ.
[For the greatness of the republic.]

Here are three important omissions in the space of ten pages; and these omissions occur nearly in the same proportion throughout the London edition.

By a strict adherence to the Hamiltonian plan of translating, many English sentences will be formed, not only very uncouth, but also often unintelligible.

This Hamilton has sometimes sought to obviate, by adding explanatory sentences in parenthesis (), as :

Quid reliqui habemus.

What of remaining have we. (What have we left).

But still he has left many sentences unintelligible, or nearly so. Such sentences the American editor has explained by adding words or sentences included in brackets [] instead of the parentheses () of Hamilton, as:

Ipse esse cum telo, item jubere alios;
He himself was with a weapon, also to order others; [he himself was armed.

Festinare dies que noctes.

and ordered others to be so]. To hasten days and nights. [He was actively employed day and night.]

In the following sentences, though explanatory words have been inserted by Hamilton, still the sentences are left obscure; and the American editor has found it necessary to explain them by sentences in brackets, [], as:

It was necessary to make similar explanations also in a great many other sentences throughout the book.

THOMAS CLARK.

TESTIMONIALS

AS TO

THE MERITS OF

The Interlinear Translation of the Classics.

Testimony of celebrated men in favour of the interlineary system of translations, as being best adapted for learning a language.

MILTON.—We do amiss to spend seven or eight years merely in scraping together as much Latin and Greek as might be learned easily and delightfully in one year.

If, after some preparatory grounds of speech by their certain forms got into memory, they were led to the praxis thereof in some chosen short book lessoned thoroughly to them, [that is, read and translated to them], which would bring the whole language quickly into their power. This I take to be the most natural and most profitable way of learning languages.

[Children] should begin with the chief and necessary rules of some good grammar, either that now used, or any better; and while this is doing, their speech is to be fashioned to a distinct and clear pronunciation, as near as may be to the Italian, especially in the vowels. Next, to make them expert in the usefulness points of grammar, some easy and delightful book should be read to them.

[By this, Milton means that the teacher should read some easy Latin book to his pupils, and translate and explain it repeatedly, until they understand such Latin book, and can themselves translate it.]

JOHN LOCKE, author of the "Essay on the Human Understanding."—When I consider what ado is made about a little Latin and Greek, how many years are spent in it, and what a noise and business it makes to no purpose, I can hardly forbear thinking that the parents of children still live in fear of the schoolmaster's rod, which they look on as the only instrument of education; as a language or two to be his whole business. How else is it possible that a child should be chained to the oar, seven, eight, or ten of the best years of his life, to get a language or two, which, I think, might be had at a great deal cheaper rate of pains and time, and be learned almost in playing.

[The first project of Locke] is to trouble the child with no grammar at all, but to have Latin as English has been, without the perplexity of rules, talked into him, for, if you will consider it, Latin is no more unknown to a child, when he comes into the world, than English; and yet he learns English without a master, rule, or grammar; and so might he Latin, too, as Tully did, if he had somebody always to talk to him in this language. And when we so often see a French woman teach an English girl to speak and read French perfectly in a year or two, without any rule of grammar, or anything else but prattling to her, I cannot but wonder how gentlemen have overseen this way for their sons. If, therefore, a man could be got, who, himself speaking good Latin, would always be about your son, talk constantly to him, and suffer him to speak and read nothing else, this would be the true and genuine way, and that which I would propose, not only as the easiest and best, wherein a child might, without pains or chiding, get a language which others are wont to be whipt for at school six or seven years together; but also as that wherein, at the same time, he might have his mind and manners formed, and be instructed in all other parts of knowledge of things that fall under the senses, and require little more than memory. But if such a man cannot be got who speaks good Latin, the next best thing is to have him taught as near this way as may be, which is by taking some easy and pleasant book, such as Aesop's Fables, and writing the English translation (made as literal as can be) in one line, and the Latin words which answer each of them, just over it in another. These let him read every day, over and over again, till he perfectly understands the Latin; and then go on to another Fable, till he is also perfect in that, not omitting what he is already perfect in, but sometimes reviewing that to keep it in his memory.

The formation of the verb first, and afterwards the declensions of the nouns and pronouns, perfectly learned by heart, facilitate his acquaintance with the genius and manner of the Latin tongue, which varies the signification of verbs and nouns, not as the modern languages do, by particles prefixed, but by changing the last syllable. More than this of grammar, I think, he need not have, till he can read himself Sanctii Minerva.

As he advances in acquiring a knowledge of words, he must advance, pari passu, in obtaining a thorough and critical knowledge of grammar. When by this way of interlining Latin and English one with another, he has got a moderate knowledge of the Latin tongue, he may then be advanced a little farther, to the reading of some other easy Latin book, such as Justin, or Eutropius; and, to make the reading and understanding of it the less tedious and difficult to him, let him help himself with the English translation. Nor let the objection, that he will then know it only by rote, fright any one. This, when well considered, is not of any moment against, but plainly for, this way of learning a language. For languages are only to be learned by rote; and a man who does not speak English and Latin perfectly by rote, so that having thought of the thing he would speak of, his tongue, of course without thought of rule or grammar, falls into the proper expression and idiom of that language, does not speak it well, nor is master of it. Languages were made, not by rules of art, but by accident, and the common use of the people; and he that speaks them well has no other rule but that, nor anything to trust to but his memory, and the habit of speaking, after the fashion learned from those that are allowed to speak properly, which, in other words, is only to speak by rote.

SYDNEY SMITH.—The Hamiltonian system, on the other hand: 1st. Teaches an unknown tongue by the closest interlinear translations, instead of leaving a boy to explore his way by the lexicon or dictionary. 2d. It postpones the study of grammar till a considerable progress has been made in the language, and a great degree of practical grammar has been acquired. 3d. It substitutes the cheerfulness and competition of the Lancasterian system for the dull solitude of the dictionary. By these means a boy finds he is making a progress, and learning something from the very beginning. He is not overwhelmed with the first appearance of insuperable difficulties; he receives some little pay from the first moment of his apprenticeship, and is not compelled to wait for remuneration till he is out of his time. The student, having acquired the great art of understanding the sense of what is written in another tongue, may go into the study of the language as deeply and as extensively as he pleases. The old system aims at beginning with a depth and accuracy which many men never will want, which disgusts many from arriving even at moderate attainments, and is a less easy, and not more certain road to a profound skill in a language, than if attention to grammar had been deferred to a later period.

In fine, we are strongly persuaded that, the time being given, this system will make better scholars; and, the degree of scholarship being given, a much shorter time will be needed. If there is any truth in this, it will make Mr. Hamilton one of the most useful men of his age; for, if there is anything which fills reflecting men with melancholy and regret, it is the waste of mortal time, parental money, and puerile happiness, in the present method of pursuing Latin and Greek.

~~~~~

Virgil, Horace, Cæsar, Cicero, and Sallust, have already been published on the interlinear plan, and will be succeeded by the other classics (Greek as well as Latin) as speedily as is consistent with accurate preparation, and the importance of the undertaking.

CHARLES DESILVER,
714 Chestnut Street, Phila.
KEEN & LEE,
148 Lake Street, Chicago.

SALLUSTII CATILINA. SALLUST'S CATILINE.

---

DECET omnis (omnes) homines, qui student It becomes all men, who study sese præstare cæteris animalibus, nisi themselves to excel to other animals, to endeavour with [their] summâ ope ne transeant vitam silentio utmost might (that) they may not-pass [their] life in silence veluti pecora, quæ natura finxit prona atque even-as cattle, which nature has formed prone and obedientia ventri. Sed omnis nostra vis est obedient to the belly. But all our force is sita animo et corpore. Utimur imperio animi, situate in mind and body. We use the command of the mind, magis servitio corporis. Alterum est more (than) the service of the body. The other (the one) is commune nobis cum Dîs, alterum cum belluis. common to us with the gods, the other with beasts.
Quo videtur mihi rectius quærere gloriam opibus By which it seems to me more-right to seek glory by the powers ingenii quam virium, et quoniam of the understanding than of forces (bodily strength), and since vita ipsa, quâ fruimur est brevis efficere the life self, which we enjoy is short to effect [make] memoriam nostri quam maximè longam. the memory (remembrance) of us as most long.

Nam gloria divitiarum et formæ [Endure most long.] For the glory of riches and of shape ( 9 )

est fluxa atque fragilis; virtus habetur (beauty) is fleeting and frail; virtue is had clara que æterna. Sed magnum certamen (accounted) bright and eternal. But a great contest fuit diu inter mortalis (mortales), ne militaris has been a long-time between mortals, whether military res procederet magis vi corporis, an thing (tactics) would advance more by force of body, or virtute animi. Nam et priusquam incipias by virtue of mind. For and (even) before-that thou mayest begin est opus consulto, et ubi (thou beginnest) (there) is need with (of) deliberation, and when consulueris facto thou mayest have deliberated (hast deliberated) of deed [need of doing] mature. Ita utrumque indigens per se, alterum seasonably. So either (is) defective by self, the other eget auxilio alterius. Igitur initio (the one) wants the aid of the other. Therefore in the beginning reges (nam id fuit primum nomen imperii in kings (for that has been the first name of government in terris) diversi pars exercebant the lands) (world) different (in disposition) part did exercise ingenium, alii corpus: etiam tum vita the understanding, others the body: also then the life hominum agitabatur sine cupiditate, sua of men was spent without covetousness, their-own satis placebant cuique. Verò postea quam were-sufficiently-pleasing [to] every-one. But after that Cyrus in Asiâ, Lacedæmonii et Athenienses Cyrus in Asia, (and) the Lacedemonians and Athenians in Græciâ, cœpere subigere urbes atque nationes; in Greece, began to subdue cities and nations; habere lubidinem dominandi causam to have [began to consider] the lust of ruling a cause belli, putare maxumam gloriam in of war, [and] to think [that] the greatest glory [was] in maximo imperio; tum demum compertum est the greatest command; then at length it was found periculis atque negotiis, ingenium plurimum posse by dangers and affairs, [that] the understanding to be most-powerful in bello. Quòd si virtus animi (could effect most) in war. But if the virtue of the mind regum atque imperatorum valeret, ita in of kings and of commanders might prevail, [equally] so in pace ut in bello, humanæ res haberent sese peace as in war, human things would have themselves æquabilius atque constantius; neque (would be) more-even and more-steady; neither cerneret aliud ferri aliò, neque wouldst thou perceive another (one thing) to be borne elsewhere, neither omnia mutari ac misceri. Nam imperium all (things) to be changed and to be mingled. For government retinetur facilè iis artibus, quibus initio is retained easily by those arts, by which in the beginning partum est. Verum ubi pro labore, desidia; it was-acquired. But when instead-of labour, idleness; pro continentia et æquitate, lubido atque instead-of continence and equity, lust and superbia invasère, fortuna immutatur simul pride came-in (seized), fortune is changed together cum moribus. Ita imperium transfertur semper à with manners. So authority is transferred always from minus bono ad quemque optumum. Quæ (the) less good (man) to each best. Whatever homines arant, navigant, ædificant, (things) men plough, navigate, build, (agriculture, navigation, architecture), all obey to virtue (mental powers). But multi mortales, dediti ventri, atque somno, indocti many mortals, addicted to the belly, and to sleep, untaught que inculti, transière vitam sicuti and unpolished, have passed life as (persons) peregrinantes: quibus profecto contra naturam travelling: to whom indeed [contrary to nature] (their) corpus fuit voluptati, anima oneri. Ego body has been for pleasure, the soul for a burden. I æstumo vitam que mortem eorum juxta, quoniam estimate the life and death of them equally, since siletur de utrâque. Verùm enimvero it is silent (nothing is said) concerning each. But truly is demum videtur mihi vivere et frui animâ, qui, he at length appears to me to live and to enjoy life, who, intentus aliquo negotio, quærerit famam præclari intent on some business, seeks the fame of illustrious facinoris aut bonæ artis. Sed in magnâ copiâ enterprise or of good art. But in the great abundance rerum, natura ostendit aliud iter of things, nature points-out another (different) journey (course) alii. Est pulchrum benefacere reipublicæ, to another (person). It is fair to do-well to the republic, etiam benedicere est haud absurdum. Licit also to speak-well is not absurd. It is lawful fieri clarum vel pace vel bello: et multi to be made illustrious either by peace or by war: and many laudantur, qui fecere, et qui scripsere facta are praised, who have done, and who have written deeds aliorum. Ac tametsi par gloria haudquaquam of others. And although equal glory by-no-means sequatur scriptorem et actorem rerum, tamen may follow (follows) the writer and actor of things, yet videtur quidem mihi in primis arduum scribere res it seems [indeed to me] particularly difficult to write things gestas: primùm, quod facta sunt exæquanda carried-on (history): first, because deeds are to-be-equalled dictis; dein quia plerique putant by sayings (language); afterwards because most think delicta, quæ reprehenderis, dicta the faults, which thou mayest have reproved, (to be) said from malevolentia et invidiâ; ubi memores de magnâ ill-will and envy; when thou mayest record of the great virtute bonorum; quæ quisque putet virtue of good (men); whatever (things) each may think facilia factu sibi accipit æquo (thinks) easy to be done to (by) himself, he receives with even animo; supra ducit pro falsis, veluti mind; beyond (that) he leads (deems) [all] for false, [or] as facta. Sed ego, adolescentulus, initio latus sum feigned. But I, a very-young-man, in the beginning was-borne studio* ad Rempublicam; que ibi multa by inclination to the Republic; and there many (things) fuere advorsa mihi. Nam audacia, largitio, have been adverse to me. For boldness, bribery, avaritia, vigebant pro pudore, pro abstinentia, covetousness, did flourish instead-of modesty, instead-of abstinence, pro virtute; quae tametsi animus instead-of virtue; which (things) although (my) mind insolens malarum artium, aspernabatur; unaccustomed of (to) bad arts, did despise; tamen imbecilla ætas, corrupta ambitione, tenebatur yet (my) weak age, corrupted by ambition, was held inter tanta vicia. Ac cum dissentirem ab among so-great vices. And when I would dissent from reliquis malis moribus, nihilominus eadem cupido the rest (others') bad manners, nevertheless the same desire honoris, quæ vexabat cæteros, fama et invidia of honour, which did harass the rest, fame and envy (vexabant) me. Igitur ubi animus requievit ex (did harass) me. Therefore when (my) mind rested from multis miseriis atque periculis, et decrevi many miseries and dangers, and I resolved [that] (my) reliquam ætatem habendam procul remaining age to-be-had [should] (be passed) at-a-distance à Republicâ, non fuit consilium from the Republic (public affairs), it has not-been (my) design conterere bonum otium socordiâ atque desidiâ; neque to consume good leisure in sloth and idleness; nor verò agere ætatem, intentum servilibus truly to act (spend) age (my life), intent on servile officiis, colendo agrum aut venando: sed offices, in cultivating field (land) or in hunting: but * Or, from study, which it appears is the author's meaning, from what follows; "sed à quo incepto studioque me mala ambitio," &c.

regressus èdem, à quo incepto que having returned to the same (pursuit), from which undertaking and studio, mala ambitio detinuerat me, statui study, bad ambition had detained me, I resolved perscribere res gestas Romani to write-through things carried-on (the achievements) of the Roman populi carptim, uti quæque videbantur digna people with-selection, as each did seem worthy (of) memoriâ: magis èd, quod animus erat memory: more on-this-account, because (my) mind was liber mihi à spe, metu, partibus Reipublicæ. free to me from hope, fear, [and the] factions of the Republic.
 Igitur absolvam paucis de Therefore I will acquit (dispose) in a few (words) concerning [I will conjuratione Catilinæ quâm relate in a few words] the conspiracy of Catiline as verissumè potero. Nam existumo id facinus most-truly [as] I shall be-able. For I think that enterprise in primis memorabile novitate sceleris atque particularly memorable from the novelty of (its) wickedness and periculi: de moribus cuius hominis pauca danger: concerning the morals of which man a few (things) sunt explananda, prius quam faciam initium are to-be-explained, before-that I may make (I make) a beginning narrandi.
 of relating.

Lucius Catilina, natus nobili genere, Lucius Catiline, born (descended) of a noble race, fuit magnâ vi et animi et corporis, was (a man) (of) great strength and (both) of mind and of body, sed malo que pravo ingenio. Intestina bella, but (of) a bad and depraved disposition. Intestine wars, cædes, rapinæ, civilis discordia fuere grata huic slaughters, rapines, civil discord were agreeable to this ab adolescentiâ; que ibi exercuit (man) from (his) youth; and there (in them) he exercised suam juventutem. Corpus patiens inediæ, his youth. (His) body (was) patient of hunger, algoris, vigilæ, supra quam est of cold, of watchfulness (want of sleep), beyond than (what) is credibile cuiquam: animus audax, subdolus, credible to any-one: (his) mind adventurous, crafty, varius, simulator ac dissimulator cujuslibet rei, changeable, a counterfeiter and dissembler of any thing, appetens alieni, profusus sui; ardens in desirous of another's (property), lavish of his own; ardent in cupiditatibus; satis eloquentiæ, parum sapientiæ; desires; (he had) sufficient of eloquence, little of wisdom; vastus animus semper cupiebat immoderata, (his) vast mind always did desire extravagant, incrædibilia, nimis alta. Post dominationem incredible, (and) too high (things). After the domination

Lucii Sullæ, maxima lubido republiæ (usurpation) of Lucius Sylla, a very-great lust (ambition) of the republic capiundæ invaserat hunc, neque to be-taken (of seizing the republic) had seized him, nor habebat quidquam pensi quibus had he any of thought [nor did he care] by what modis assequeretur id, dum pararet regnum means he might attain that, while he should procure the kingdom sibi. Ferox animus agitabatur magis que for himself. (His) fierce mind was agitated more and magis in dies, inopiâ familiaris rei, more daily, from want of familiar thing (private property), et conscientiâ scelerum; utraque que auxerat and a consciousness of crimes; both which he had increased his artibus, quas memoravi supra: by those arts (practices), which I have recorded above: præterea corrupti mores civitatis incitabant, moreover the corrupt manners of the state did incite (him), quos, luxuria atque avaritia, pessima mala, which (manners), luxury and avarice, the worst evils, ac diversa inter se, vexabant.

and different between themselves, did harass (did pervert).
Res ipsa videtur hortari, quoniam The thing (subject) self seems to exhort (me), since tempus admonuit de moribus civitatis, time (the occasion) has reminded (me) of the manners of the state, repeteret supra ac disserere paucis to retrace above [farther back] and discuss in a few (words) instituta majorum domi que militiæ, the institutions of (our) ancestors at-home and abroad [in war], quomodo habuerint rempublicam, in-what-manner they may have had (they managed) the republic, que quantam reliquerint, et disserere and how-great they may have left (they left it), and [to discuss] ut paulatim immutata, facta sit how by-degrees having been changed, it may have been made pessuma ac flagitiosissima ex (it became) the worst and most-disgraceful from (having been) pulcherrumâ.

 the fairest.

Trojani, sicut ego accepi, initio, The Trojans, as I have received (have heard), in the beginning, condidere atque habuere urbem Romam; (first) built and had (inhabited) the city Rome; qui, Æneâ duce, profugi vagabantur who, Æneas (being their) leader, [as] exiles did wander incertis sedibus; que cum his in uncertain seats (having no fixed habitation); and with these Aborigines, agreste genus hominum, sine legibus, the Aborigines, a rustic race of men, without laws, liberum atque solutum. Postquam hi free and loosed (unrestrained). After-that they convenere ibi in una moenia dispari assembled there into one (the same) walls (city) of different genere, dissimili lingua, viventes alias alio race, of dissimilar language, living one (each) in a different more, est incredibile memoratu, quam facile custom, it is incredible to-be-recorded, how easily coaluerint. Sed postquam they may have coalesced (they incorporated). But after-that res eorum aucta civibus, moribus, the thing (state) of them having been increased by citizens, morals agris, videbatur satis prospera, que (moral institutions), lands, did appear sufficiently prosperous, and satis pollens, invidia orta est ex opulentia, sufficiently powerful, envy arose out-of opulence, sicuti pleraque mortalium habentur. as most of mortal (things) are had (are conducted).

Igitur reges que finitimi populi Therefore kings and neighbouring peoples (people) (began) tentare bello. Pauci ex amicis esse auxilio. to-try (them) in war. A few of (their) friends to be for aid

Nam cæteri, perculti metu, aberant (brought them aid). For the rest, stricken with fear, kept-aloof à periculis. At Romani, intenti domi. que from dangers. But the Romans, intent at-home and militiæ, festinare, parare, alias of war (abroad), (began) to hasten, to prepare, the other (one) hortari alium ire obviam hostibus; tegere to exhort another to go towards the enemies; to protect libertatem, patriam, que parentes armis. liberty, (their) country, and parents with arms.

Post ubi propulerant pericula virtute Afterward when they had repulsed dangers by virtue (valour) portabant auxilia sociis atque amicis; que parabant they did carry aids to allies and friends; and did prepare amicitiæ magis beneficiis dandis quam (procure) friendships rather by favours to-be-given than acciundi.

to be received. [Rather by giving, than by receiving favours.] Habebant legitimum imperium, regium nomen They did have a legitimate government, a royal name imperii: delecti quibus corpus erat infirmum of government: chosen (men) to whom the body was weak annis, ingenium validum sapientia, by years, (their) understanding strong with wisdom, consultabant reipublicæ. Hi, vel did consult (legislate) for the republic. These, either from (their) æstate vel similitudine curæ, appellabantur age or from the similitude of (their) care, were called Patres. Post ubi regium imperium, quod Fathers. Afterwards when the royal government, which initio fuerat libertatis in the beginning had been (established) (for the sake) of liberty conservandæ, atque reipublicæ augendæ, convertit to-be-preserved, and of the republic to-be-increased, turned in superbiam que dominationem, more (itself) into pride and tyranny, (their) practice immutato, fecrē sibi annua impēria, having been changed, they made for themselves annual governments, binos imperatores: eo modo putabant humanum two rulers: by that means they did think the human animum posse minimè insolescere per licentiam. mind to-be-able least to-grow-insolent through excess-of-power.

 Sed eā tempestate coopēre quisque extollere But at that time they began each to extol se magis que magis, que habere (exert) himself more and more, and to have (his) ingenium in promptu: nam boni understanding in readiness: for good [and talented] (men) sunt suspectiores regibus quām mali; que are more-suspected to kings than bad [and stupid]; and aliena virtus est semper formidolosa his. strange (another's) virtue is always formidable to these.
 Sed est incredibile memoratu, quantum civitas But it is incredible to be recorded, how-much the state creverit brevī, libertate may have increased (increased) in a-short-time, liberty adeptā: tanta cupido gloriæ incesserat. having been obtained: so-great a desire of glory had come-in.
 Jamprimum juventus, simul-ac erat Now-first the youth, as-soon-as it was (they were) patiens belli, discebat in castris militiam able-to-endure war, did learn in the camps war usu per laborem; que habebat lubidinem from habit through exercise; and did have pleasure magis in decoris armis, et militaribus equis, quām rather in beautiful arms, and military horses, than in scortis atque conviviis. Igitur labos erat non in harlots and banquets. Therefore labour was not insolitus talibus viris, non-ullus locus asper aut unusual to such men, not-any place rough or arduus; armatus hostis non formidolosus: difficult (inaccessible); an armed enemy [was] not formidable: virtus domuerat omnia. Sed maxumum certamen virtue had subdued all (things). But a very-great contest gloriæ erat inter ipsos: quisque properabat ferire for glory was among them: each did hasten to strike hostem, ascendere murum, conspicere dum faceret the enemy, to scale the wall, to be-beheld whilst he might do tale facinus: putabant eas divitias, (did perform) such enterprise: they did think these riches, eam bonam famam, que magnam nobilitatem. that good fame, and great nobility (distinction).

 Erant avidi laudis, liberales pecuniæ; volebant They were desirous of praise, liberal of money; they did will ingentem gloriam, honestas divitias. Possem (wished for) great glory, honourable riches. I could memorare in quibus locis Romanus populus to relate in what places the Roman people fuderit maxumas copias hostium parva may have routed (routed) very-great forces of the enemies with a small manu; quas urbes munitas naturâ band; what cities fortified by nature (they) [the Roman people] ceperit pugnando, ni ea res may have taken (they took) in-fighting, unless that thing traheret nos longius ab incepto. Sed would draw us farther (too far) from (our) undertaking. But profectò fortuna dominatur in omni re; ea celebrat indeed fortune controls in every thing; she celebrates que obscurat cunctas res magis ex lubidine and eclipses (depresses) all things rather from caprice quam ex vero. Res gestæ than from truth (merit). The things carried-on (deeds) Atheniensium, sicut ego existumo, fuere satis of the Athenians, as I think, have been sufficiently amplæ que magnificæ; verùm tamen aliquanto ample (great) and magnificent; but however by somewhat minores quām feruntur famâ: sed quia less than they are borne (represented) by fame: but because magna ingenia scriptorum provenere ibi, great understandings (abilities) of writers sprang-up there, facta Atheniensium celebrantur per terrarum the deeds of the Athenians are celebrated through the whole orbem pro maxumis. Ita virtus eorum, qui world for the greatest. So the virtue of those, who fecere ea, habetur tanta, quantum have done those (things), is accounted so-great, as præclara ingenia potuere extollere the brilliant understandings (of their writers) have been able to extol ea, verbis. At ea copia nunquam them [by their writings]. But that abundance (of writers) never fuit Romano populo: quia quisque has been to the Roman people: because each prudentissimus erat maxumè negotiosus: nemo most-skilful (man) was most active: no-one exercebat ingenium sine corpore: quisque did exercise the understanding without the body: each optumus malebat facere quam dicere; best (man) did rather-wish to do than to say [and to have];

 sua benefacta laudari ab aliis, quam ipse narrare his-own good-deeds to be praised by others, than he to relate aliorum. Igitur boni mores (those) to others. Therefore good manners (practices) colebantur domi, que militiæ were cultivated [cultivated] at-home, and at-war (in the camp) (their) concordia erat maxima, avaritia minima, jus unanimity was very-great, (their) selfishness very-small, justice que bonum valebat apud eos non magis legibus and good did prevail among them not more by laws quām naturâ. Exercebant jurgia, than by nature. They did exercise (practise) contentions, discordias, simultates cum hostibus; cives certabant discords, feuds with the enemies; citizens did vie civibus de virtute. Erant with citizens concerning virtue [in deeds of valour]. They were magnifici in suppliciis deorum, parci magnificent in (their) worships (worship) of the gods, frugal domi, fideles in amicos. Curabant of (at) home, faithful toward (their) friends. They did manage que se que rempublicam his duabus artibus, both themselves and the republic by these two arts audaciâ in bello, æquitate, ubi pax (practices), by boldness in war, by equity, when peace evenerat. Quarum rerum ego habeo hæc maxima had happened. Of which things I have these very-great documenta, quod in bello vindicatum est proofs, that in war it was vindicated (punishment was sæpiùs in eos, qui pugnaverant in hostem visited) oftener on those, who had fought against the enemy contra imperium, que qui revocati, excesserant contrary-to command, and who having been recalled, had departed tardiùs prælio, quam qui more slowly (too slowly) from battle, than (on those) who ausi-erant relinquere signa, aut pulsi had-dared to leave-behind (their) standards, or having been repulsed cedere loco: vero agitabant imperium to retire from place (their post): but they did conduct the government in pace, magis beneficiis quam metu, injuriâ in peace, rather by kindnesses than by fear, an injury acceptâ, malebant ignoscere quam having been received, they did rather-wish to pardon than persequi. Sed ubi respublica crevit labore to avenge (it). But when the republic increased by industry atque justitiâ, magni reges domiti bello; and justice, [when] great kings (were) conquered in war; feræ nationes, et ingentes populi subacti savage nations, and great peoples (people) subdued vi, Carthago, æmula Romani imperii, by force, [when] Carthage, the rival of the Roman empire, interiit ab stirpe, cuncta perished from (its) stem, (was wholly destroyed), [when] all maria que terræ patebant, fortuna cœpit sœvire seas and lands did lie-open, fortune began to rage ac miscere omnia. Otium, dvitiae, and confound all (things). Peace, [repose] riches, (things) optandæ aliis, fuere oneri que to be wished to others, [for by some] were for a burden (a burden) and miseriae iis, qui facile toleraverant dubias wretchedness to those, who easily had endured doubtful (critical) atque asperas res. Igitur primò cupidó pecuniæ, and rough things. Therefore at-first the desire of money, dein imperii, crevit: ea fuere quasi materies then of command, increased: those were as-if the source omnium malorum. Namque avaritia subvertit fidem, of all evils. For avarice overturned faith, probitatem, que cæteras bonas artes; pro honesty, and other good arts (qualities); instead-of his edocuit superbiam crudelitatem, negligere these it taught (them) pride, cruelty, to neglect deos, habere omnia venalia; ambitio subegit the gods, to have all things venal; ambition compelled multos mortales fieri falsos; habere aliud many mortals to be made (become) false; to have one clausum in pectore, aliud promptum in (thing) shut-up in the breast, another ready on (the) lingua; æstumare amicitias que inimicitias non tongue; to estimate friendships and enmities not ex re, sed ex commodo; according to the thing (moral worth), but according to advantage; que habere bonum vultum magis quam and to have a good (fair) countenance rather than (an honest) ingenium. Hæc primò crescere paulatim, disposition. These at-first (began) to increase by-degrees, interdum vindicari. Post ubi contagio, quasi sometimes to be punished. Afterwards when the contagion, as-if pestilentia invasit, civitas immutata: a pestilence invaded (them), the state (was) changed: imperium factum crudele que intolerandum, the government (was) made cruel and intolerable, ex justissimo que optumo. Sed primò ambitio from the most-just and the best. But at-first ambition exercebat animos hominum magis quam avaritia: did exercise the minds of men more than avarice: quod vitium tamen erat proprius virtutem. which vice [of ambition] however was nearer-to virtue.

Nam bonus ignavus æquè exoptant sibi For the good (and) the indolent equally wish for themselves gloriam, honorem, imperium, sed ille glory, honour (preferment) authority, but he [the ambitious man] (the former) endeavours (for them) in the true way [by honourable means]; because good arts (qualities) are-wanting to this contendit dolis atque fallaciis. (the latter), [avarice], he strives (for them) by deceits and fallacies.

Avaritia habet studium pecuniae, quam nemo Avarice has a zeal [and desire] of money, which no sapiens concupivit. Ea, quasi imbuta malis wise (man) has coveted. It, as-if imbued with bad venenis, effoeminat corpus que virilem animum: est poisons, enervates the body and manly mind: is semper infinita, insatiabilis: neque minuitur always unbounded, insatiable: neither is [it] lessened copiâ neque inopiâ. Sed postquam Lucius Sulla, by plenty nor by want. But after Lucius Sylla, republicâ receptâ armis, habuit malos the republic having been recovered by arms, had bad (unsuccess- eventus ex bonis initiis; omnes rapere ful) results from good beginnings; all (began) to-plunder trahere: alius cupere domum, alius to-draw (to take away): another (one) to covet a house, another agros. Victores habere neque modum lands. [That] the conquerors to have [had] neither manner (bounds) neque modestiam: facere foeda que nor modesty (moderation): to do [and did] disgraceful and crudelia facinora in civis. Huc cruel crimes against (their) fellow-citizens. Hither accedebat quod Lucius Sulla, contra did come (to this was to be added), that Lucius Sylla, contrary-to morem majorum, habuerat exercitum, the custom of (our) ancestors, had (treated) the army, quem ductaverat in Asiâ, luxuriosè que nimis which he had often-led in Asia, intemperately and too liberaliter, quod faceret fidum sibi. liberally, in-order-that he might make (it) faithful to himself.

 Amœna, voluptaria loca facilè molliverant ferocis Pleasant, voluptuous places easily had enervated the fierce (feroces) animos militum in otio. Ibi primùm minds of the soldiers in peace. There first exercitus Romani populi insuevit amare, the army of the Roman people became-accustomed to love, potare, mirari signa, pictas tabulas, to drink, to admire signs, (statues), painted tablets (pictures), coelata vasa; rapere ea privatim et publicè, carved vases; to plunder those (things) privately and publicly, spoliare delubra, polluere omnia sacra que to rob shrines (temples), to pollute all (things) sacred and profana. Igitur hi milites, postquam adepti-sunt profane. Therefore these soldiers, after they obtained victoriam, fecere nihil reliqui a victory, made nothing of remaining (left nothing) victis. Quippe secundæ res fatigant to the vanquished. For [indeed] prosperous things fatigue (try) animos sapientium; ne illi temperarent the minds of the wise; much less could they-moderately-enjoy victoriæ, moribus corruptis. Postquam victory, (their) manners having been corrupted. After divitiae cœpere esse honori, et gloria, riches began to be for honour (an honour), and glory, imperium, potentia sequebatur eas: virtus cœpit authority, power did follow them: virtue began hebescere, paupertas haberi probro, to languish, poverty to be had (accounted) for a disgrace, innocentia duci pro malevolentia. Igitur ex innocence to be deemed for ill-will. Therefore out-of divitiis, luxuria, atque avaritia, cum superbiâ, riches, luxury, and avarice, with pride, invasere juventutem. Rapere, consumere, invaded the youth. (They began) to plunder, to consume, pendere sua parvi, cupere aliena; to esteem their-own (things) of little (value), to desire others; habere pudorem, pudicitiam, divina atque humana to have modesty, chastity, divine and human promiscua, nihil pensi, neque (things) promiscuous (undistinguished), nothing of regard, nor moderati.

of moderation. [They disregarded these things, and acted without re-

Est pretium operæ quum restraint]. It is a reward of labour (it is worth while), when cognoveris domos atque villas thou shalt have known (have viewed) houses and villas exædificatas in modum urbium, visere tempora built-up in the manner of cities, to visit the temples deorum, quæ nostri majores, religiosissimi mortales, of the gods, which our ancestors, most-devout mortals, fecere. Verùm illi decorabant delubra deorum made. But they did adorn the temples of the gods pietate, suas domos gloriâ; neque eripiebant with piety, their-own houses with glory; nor did they snatch quidquam victis præter licentiam any (thing) from the vanquished, except the privilege of (doing) injuriæ. At hi, contrà ignavissimi homines, injury. But these, on-the-other-hand, most-indolent men, adimere, per summum scelus, omnia ea (began) to take-away, through the utmost wickedness, all those sociis quæ fortissimi viri victores (things) from (their) allies which the bravest men (when) conquerors reliquerunt hostibus, proinde-quasi facere left to (their) enemies, just-as-if to do injuriam, id esset demum uti imperio. an injury, that might be at-length (truly) to use authority. Nam quid memorem ea, quæ sunt credibilia For why may I relate those (things), which are credible nemini, nisi his, qui videre; montes to no-one, unless to those, who have seen (them); [that] mountains esse subversos, maria constrata à [have] to be overturned, seas covered-over (built upon) by compluribus privatis? Quibus divitiæ videntur many private (persons)? To whom riches appear mihi fuisse ludibrio: quippe properabant abuti to me to have been for mockery: for they did hasten to abuse per turpitudinem, quas licebat habere through baseness. (the riches), which it was lawful to have honestè. Sed non minor lubido stupri, ganeæ, honourably. But no less a lust of impurity, debauchery, que cæteri cultūs, incesserat. Viri and [of] other-such habit, had invaded (them). Men (began) pati muliebria: mulieres habere to suffer (admit) womanish (practices): women to have pudicitiam in propatulo: exquirere omnia chastity in common: to search-out all (things) terrâ que mari, causâ vescendi, dormire priusquam by land and by sea, for-the-sake of feeding, to sleep before-that cupido somni esset: non opperiri famem inclination of sleep might-be (to them): not to-wait-for hunger aut sitim, neque frigus neque lassitudinem; sed or thirst, neither cold nor lassitude; but antecapere omnia ea luxu. Hæc incendebant to anticipate all those by luxury. These (things) did inflame juventutem ad facinora, ubi familiares opes the youth to crimes, when family (private) resources defecerant. Animus imbutus malis artibus, had failed (them). The mind imbued with bad arts (practices), haud facilè carebat lubidinibus: ed erat not easily did refrain-from lusts: on-this-account it was profusiùs deditus quæstui atque sumptui the more-lavishly addicted to acquisition and expenditure omnibus modis.

 in all manners.

In tantâ que tam corruptâ civitate, Catilina In so-great and so corrupted a state, Catiline habebat, (id quod erat facillimum factu), catervas did have, (that which was very-easy to-be-done), troops omnium flagitiosorum atque facinorosorum of all wicked and desperate (fellows) circum se, tanquam stipatorum. Nam quicumque around himself, as-if body-guards. For whatsoever impudicus, adulter, ganeo laceraverat unchaste (person), adulterer, debauchee had squandered (his) patria bona manu, ventre, pene; quique paternal goods by hand, belly (luxury), lust; whosoever conflaverat grande alienum æs, had swelled-up (contracted) a great other's brass (debt), quo redimeret flagitium aut by which he might redeem (purchase pardon for) wickedness or facinus; præterea omnes undique parricidæ, crime; besides all [from everywhere the] parricides, sacrilegi convicti judiciis aut timentes sacrilegious (wretches) convicted in trials or fearing judicium pro factis; ad-hoc quos trial for (their) deeds; to-this (moreover) (those) whom manus atque lingua alebat perjurio et civili (their) hand and tongue did support by perjury and civil sanguine; postremò, omnes quos flagitium, egestas, blood; lastly, all whom villany, want, conscient animus, exagitabat, hi erant proximi que a guilty mind, did harass, these were the nearest and familiares Catilinæ. Quòd si quis etiam vacuus familiar to Catiline. But if any-one even (yet) free à culpâ, inciderat in amicitiam ejus, efficiebatur from fault, had fallen into the friendship of him, he was made facile par que similis cæteris quotidiano usu atque easily equal and like to the rest by daily habit and illecebris. Sed appetebat maxumè familiaritates allurements. But he sought-after chiefly the intimacies adolescentium: animi eorum molles et fluxi ætate, of young-men: the minds of these soft and frail by age, haud difficulter capiebantur dolis. Nam uti not difficultly were taken (ensnared) by wiles. For as studium cujusque flagrabat ex æstate, the inclination of each did glow from age, (he began) præbere scorta aliis, mercari canes atque to afford harlots to others (some), to buy hounds and equos aliis: postremò, parcere neque sumptui horses for others: finally, to spare neither expense neque suæ modestiæ, dum faceret nor his-own modesty (character), provided he could make (them) • obnoxios que fidos sibi. Scio nonnullos fuisse, subservient and faithful to himself. I know some to have been, qui ita existumarent, juventutem, quæ who thus would think (thought), the youth, which frequentabat domum Catilinæ, habuisse pudicitiam did frequent the house of Catiline, to have-had modesty parùm honestè: sed hæc fama valebat magis little (not) honourably: but this report did prevail more ex aliis rebus, quam quòd id foret compertum from other things, than that it might be (it was) found-out cuiquam. Jamprimum Catilina, adolescens, (known) to any-one. First-of-all Catiline, a young-man, fecerat multa nefanda supra cum nobili had dono (committed) many abominable impurities with a noble virgine, cum sacerdote Vestæ, et alia virgin, with a priestess of Vesta, and other (things) hujuscemodi, contra jus que fas: postremò, of this-kind, against human-law and divine-law: lastly, captus amore Aureliæ Orestillæ, cujus bonus taken with love of Aurelia Orestilla, of whom a good-man unquam laudavit nihil præter formam; quòd ever praised nothing except (her) beauty; because ea, timens privignum adulteriæ æstate, dubitabat she, fearing a stepson (of) mature age, did hesitate nubere illi, creditur pro certo fecisse vacuam to marry to him, he is believed for certain to have made an empty domum, necato filio, scelestis nuptiis. Quæ house, [his son being killed], for the wicked nuptials. Which res quidem videtur mihi in primis fuisse causa thing indeed seems [to me] chiefly to have been the cause facinoris maturandi. Namque of the enterprise to-be-hastened (of hastening the conspiracy). For impurus animus, infestus diis que hominibus, (bis) impure mind, hostile to gods and to men, poterat sedari neque vigiliis neque quietibus: was able to be allayed neither by watchings nor by rests (rest): conscientia ita vexabat excitam mentem. Igitur his conscience so did harass (his) disturbed mind. Therefore color ei, exsanguis, oculi foedi, incessus complexion (was) to him pale, eyes foul, (his) gait modo citus, modo tardus: vecordia inerat prorsus now quick, now slow: madness was-in throughout in facie que vultu. in (his) appearance and countenance. [His features indicated fury and malignity]. Sed edocebat juventutem mala facinora, quam, ut diximus suprà, illexerat: ex crimes, which, as we have said above, he had allured: out-of illis commodare falsos testes que them (he began) to accommodate (to furnish) false witnesses and signatores; habere fidem, signers (forgers); [and to instruct them] to have (hold) faith, fortunas, pericula vilia. Post, ubi fortunes, dangers (as) insignificant. Afterwards, when attriverat famam atque pudorem eorum, he had worn-away (ruined) the character and shame of them, imperabat alia majora. Si caussa peccandi he did enjoin other greater (crimes). If an opportunity of sinning minùs-suppetebat in præsens, nihilominus did-not-offer for the present, nevertheless (he ordered circumvenire, jugulare insontes sicuti sontes. them) to beset, and to murder the innocent as-if guilty.

 Scilicet, ne manus aut animus torpesceret per Forsooth, lest the hand or mind might become-sluggish through otium; erat malus atque crudelis potiùs gratuitò. disuse; he was bad and cruel rather gratuitously

Catilina confisus his amicis (without a purpose). Catiline having relied to (on) these friends que sociis, simul quòd alienum aës and companions, at-the-same-time because others' brass (debt) erat ingens per omnis (omnes) terras; was great through all lands (throughout the et quòd plerique Sullani milites, whole country); and because [the greater part of] the Sullanian soldiers, usi suo largiùs, memores rapinarum et having used their-own too-freely, mindful of rapines and veteris victoriæ, exoptabant civile bellum; and of ancient victory, did eagerly-wish-for civil war; cepit consilium reipublicæ he took design (entered into a design) of the republic opprimundæ. Nullus exercitus to be oppressed (of oppressing the republic). No army (was) in Italâ: Cneius Pompeius gerebat bellum in in Italy: Cneius Pompey did carry-on war in extremis terris: magna spes ipsi petundi remotest lands: a great hope (was) to him of seeking consulatum; senatus sanè intentus nihil: the consulship; the senate indeed intent (on) nothing: omnes res tutæ que tranquillæ: sed ea all things (were) safe and quiet: but those (things) prorsus opportuna Catilinæ. Igitur circiter (were) altogether favourable to Catiline. Therefore about Junias kalendas, Lucio Cæsare et Caio the Junian kalends (first of June), Lucius Cæsar and Caius Figulo consulibus, primò appellare Figulus (being) consuls, (he began) first to address singulos, hortari alios, tentare alios; single (persons individually), to exhort some, to try others; docere suas opes, rempublicam to teach (to inform them of) his-own resources, [that] the republic imparatam, magna præmia conjurationis.

 [was] unprepared, [and] the great rewards of the conspiracy.
 Ubi quæ voluit explorata-sunt satis,
 When (the matters) which he willed were considered sufficiently, convocat omnis (omnes) in unum, quibus he convokes all into one (place), to-whom inerat maxuma necessitudo et there-was-in (who had) the greatest obligation-of-necessity and plurimum audaciæ.

 most of boldness. [Who were the most needy and bold].
 Edò convenere Senatorii ordinis, Publius Hither (there) assembled of the Senatorian order, Publius Lentulus Sura, Publius Autronius, Lucius Cassius
 Lentulus Sura, Publius Autronius, Lucius Cassius Longinus, Caius Cethegus, Publius et Servius Sullæ, Longinus, Caius Cethegus, Publius. and Servius Syllæ, filii Servii, Lucius Vargunteius, Quintus Annius, sons of Servius, Lucius Vargunteius, Quintus Annius, Marcus Porcius Læca, Lucius Bestia, Quintus Curius : Marcus Porcius Læca, Lucius Bestia, Quintus Curius : præterea ex equestri ordine, Marcus Fulvius moreover of the equestrian order, Marcus Fulvius Nobilior, Lucius Statilius, Publius Gabinius Capito, Nobilior, Lucius Statilius, Publius Gabinius Capito, Caius Cornelius; ad hoc, multi ex coloniis, Caius Cornelius; to this (besides), many out-of the colonies, et municipiis nobiles domi.
 and municipal (towns) noble (men of distinction) at-home. (There) Erant præterea complures paulò occultiùs were moreover many somewhat more-secretly participes hujusce consilii, quos spes dominationis partakers of this design, whom the hope of sway hortabatur magis quam inopia aut alia necessitudo. did encourage more than want or other obligation.
 Cæterùm pleraque juventus, sed maxumè nobilium, But most-of the youth, but chiefly of the nobles favebat inceptis Catilinæ. Quibus erat did favour to the undertakings of Catiline. To whom (there) was copia vivere in otio vel magnificè, (they who had) the opportunity to live in peace either magnificently, vel molliter, malebant incerta or softly (indulgently), they had-rather uncertain (things) pro certis, bellum quam pacem. Fuere item for certain, war than peace. (There) were likewise eâ tempestate, qui crederent Marcum in that time (some), who would believe (did believe) Marcus Licinius Crassus non fuisse ignarum ejus Licinius Crassus not to have been ignorant of that consilii: quia Cneius Pompeius, invisus sibi, design: because Cneius Pompey, odious to him, ductabat magnum exercitum; voluisse did often-lead a great army; to have willed (that he wished) opes cujusvis crescere contra potentiam illius: the resources of any-one to increase against the power of him: simul confisum, si conjuratio valuisset at-the-same-time having trusted, if the conspiracy might have prevailed se fore facile (had prevailed), himself to be about-to-be (that he would be) easily principem apud illos.

 chief among them.

Sed antea item pauci conjuravere in quibus But before also a few conspired in (amongst) whom Catilina: de quâ dicam quam (was) Catiline: of which (conspiracy) I shall speak as verissime potero. Lucio Tullo, Marco Lepido most-truly I-shall-be-able. Lucius Tullus, Marcus Lepidus (being) consulibus, Publius Autronius, et Publius Sylla, consuls, Publius Autronius, and Publius Sylla, consules designati interrogati legibus the consuls intended (elect) having been-questioned (tried) by the laws ambitûs, dederant poenas. Paulo-post of bribery, had given (suffered) punishments. A little-after Catilina reus pecuniarum repetundarum Catiline guilty (accused) of moneys to be re-demanded (of extor-erat-prohibitus petere consulatum; quod tion) was prevented to seek the consulate; because nequiverit profiteri intra he had not-been-able to declare (enter his name as candidate) within legitimos dies. Erat eodem tempore nobilis the legitimate days. (There) was at-the-same time a noble adolescens, Cneius Piso, summæ audaciæ, egens, young-man, Cneius Piso, of the utmost boldness, needing, factiosus, quem inopia atque mali mores factious, whom want and bad morals (principles) stimulabant ad rempublicam perturbandam.

did stimulate to the republic to-be-disturbed (to disturb the Consilio communicato, cum republic). (Their) design having been imparted (to each other), with hoc, Catilina et Autronius, circiter nonas this (youth), Catiline and Autronius, about the nones (the fifth) Decembris, parabant interficere Lucium Cottam et of December, did prepare to kill Lucius Cotta, and Lucium Torquatum, consules, in capitolio, kalendis Lucius Torquatus, the consuls, in the capitol, on the kalends Januarii; ipsi, fascibus correptis, (the first) of January; themselves, the fasces having been seized mittere Pisonem cum exercitu ad (by them), (prepared) to send Piso with an army to duas Hispanias obtinendas.

the two Spains to-be-possessed (to take possession of the two Eâ re cognitâ, rursus transtulerunt Spains). That thing having been known, again they transferred consilium cædis in nonas (deferred) (their) design of murder to the nones (the fifth) Februarii. Jam, tum machinabantur perniciem of February. Now, at-that-time they did plan destruction non modò consulibus, sed plerisque senatoribus. not only for the consuls, but most-of the senators.

Quodd, pessimum facinus foret patratum eo die But, the worst act would be committed on that day post urbem Romam conditam, since the city Rome having been built, [foundation of the city], ni Catilina maturâasset unless Catiline might have hastened (had not Catiline been too hasty) dare signum sociis pro curiâ. Quia to give the signal to (his) companions before the senate-house. Because armati nondum-convenerant frequentes, armed (men) had-not-as-yet assembled numerous (in numbers), ea res diremit consilium. Postea Piso that thing broke-off (their) design. Afterwards Piso missus-est quæstor pro Prætore was sent (as) treasurer for Pretor (with the authority of Pretor) in citeriorem Hispaniam, Crasso admittente; to hither Spain, Crassus exerting (using his inquod cognoverat eum infestum Cneio terest); because he had known him hostile to Cneius Pompeio: tamen, senatus neque invitus dederat Pompey: however, the senate neither reluctant had given provinciam: quippe the province: [the senate willingly gave him the province]: for volebat foedum hominem abesse procul it (they) did will a disgraceful man to be-absent at-a-distance à republicâ: simul quia complures boni from the republic: at-the-same-time because many good (men) putabant præsidium in eo, et jam-tum potentia did suppose a protection (to be) in him, and even-then the power Cneii Pompeii erat formidolosa. Sed is Piso, faciens of Cneius Pompey was formidable. But that Piso, making iter in provinciam occisus-est ab a journey (on his march) into the province was-killed by Hispanis equitibus, quos ductabat in exercitu.

 Spanish cavalry, whom he did lead-often in (his) army.

Sunt qui ita-dicant [That he had in his army]. (There) are (those) who thus may say barbaros nequivisse (who say) [that] the barbarians to have been-unable [were unable] pati injusta, superba, crudelia imperia to endure the unjust (unreasonable), proud, cruel orders ejus: autem alii illos equites, veteres que of him: but others (say that) those horsemen, old and fidos clientes Cneii Pompeii, aggressos faithful dependants of Cneius Pompey, having attacked (attacked) Pisonem voluntate ejus: præterea Hispanos Piso by the will of him (Pompey): moreover the Spaniards nunquam fecisse tale facinus, sed antea never to have done (did) such a crime, but before-this perppersos multa sæva imperia. Nos relinquimus having endured many harsh commands. We leave eam rem in medio that thing in the middle (undetermined). (It has been) said satis de superiori sufficiently (sufficient has been said) concerning the former conjuratione. conspiracy.

Catilina, ubi videt eos, quos memoravi antè, Catiline, when he sees those, whom I have mentioned before, convenisse, tametsi sæpe-egerat multa to have assembled, although he had-often-transacted many (things) cum singulis, tamen credens fore in with each (of them), yet believing to-be-about-to-be to rem appellare et cohortari universos the thing (purpose) to address and encourage all secessit in abditam partem ædium; (collectively), retired into a secret part of the houses atque, omnibus arbitris amotis procul, (house); and, all witnesses removed at-a-distance, habuit ibi orationem hujuscemodi:
had (delivered) there a speech of-this-kind:

Ni vestra virtus que fides foret satis Unless your valour and faith might be (were) sufficiently spectata mihi, opportuna res beheld (tried) to (by) me, (this) favourable thing cecidisset nequicquam: magna spes would have happened to-no-purpose: [the] great hope dominationis fuisset frustra in manibus: of ascendency would have been in-vain in (your) hands: neque captarem incerta pro certis, neither would I grasp-at uncertain (things) instead-of certain, per ignaviam aut vana ingenia. Sed quia through indolence or fickle dispositions. But because cognovi vos fortes que fidos mihi, multis et I have experienced you brave and faithful to me, on many and magnis tempestatibus; eò animus ausus-est great occasions; on-that-account (my) mind has dared incipere maxumum atque pulcherrimum to begin (undertake) the greatest and most-glorious facinus; simul quia intellexi eadem enterprise; at-the-same-time because I perceived the same (things) esse bona que mala vobis, quæ mihi. Nam, to be good and bad to you, which (are so) to me. For, velle idem, atque nolle idem, ea est demum to will the same, and not-to-will the same, this is finally firma amicitia. Sed omnes jam-antea diversi firm friendship. But (you) all already different audistis, quæ ego agitavi (separately) have heard (the things) which I have agitated in (my) mente. Cæterum animus accenditur magis in dies, mind. But (my) mind is inflamed more on days cum considero quæ sit futura conditio (daily), when I consider what may be the future condition vitae, nisi vindicamus nosmetipsos of (our) life, unless we vindicate ourselves (assert our rights) in libertatem. Nam, postquam respublica concessit to liberty. For, after the republic yielded in jus atque ditionem paucorum potentium, into the rule and authority of a few powerful (persons), reges, tetrarchæ esse semper vectigales illis: kings, [and] tetrarchs (began) to be always tributary to them: populi, nationes pendere stipendia: peoples (people), [and] nations to pay taxes [to them]: (we) omnes cæteri strenui, boni, nobiles atque ignobiles all the rest strenuous, good, noble and ignoble fuimus vulgus, sine gratiâ, sine auctoritate, have been a rabble, without favour (interest), without authority, obnoxii his quibus, si respublica valeret, subservient to those to whom, if the republic might prevail essemus formidini. Itaque omnis gratia, (prevailed), we should be for a terror. Therefore all interest, potentia, honos, divitiae sunt apud illos, aut ubi power, honour, riches are at (with) them, or where volunt: reliquerunt nobis pericula, repulsas, judicia, they will: they have left to us dangers, repulses, trials, egestatem. Quæ quousque-tandem, fortissimi want. Which (things) how-long, bravest viri, patiemini? Nonne-præstat emori per men, will ye endure? Is-it-not-better to die by virtutem, quām amittere miseram atque in honestam valour, than to lose a wretched and dishonourable vitam per dedecus, ubi fueris life by disgrace, when thou mayest have been (hast been) ludibrio alienæ superbiæ? Verūm for a laughing-stock to strange (another's) pride? But enimvero, prō fidem deūm atque hominum, victoria truly, o faith of gods and of men, victory est nobis in manu; ætas viget, is to us in hand, [in our possession]; (our) age flourishes, (our) animus valet: contrā omnia consenuerunt mind prevails: on-the-other-hand all (things) have grown-old illis annis atque divitiis. Est opus tantummodo to them in years and riches. (There) is need only incepito, res expediet cætera. for a beginning, thing (the matter itself) will prepare the rest.

 Etenim quis mortalium, cui est virile For who of mortals, to whom (there) is a manly ingenium, potest tolerare divitias superare illis, disposition, can endure riches to abound to them, quas profundunt in exstruendo [them to abound in riches], which they squander in building mari, et montibus coæquandis, (narrowing) the sea, and mountains to-be-levelled (in levelling moun-taines), private thing (property) to-be-wanting to us even ad necessaria.
 to (for) necessary (matters). [While we want the necessaries of life].
 Illos continuare binas domos aut (Who can endure) those to extend two (united) houses or amplius: ullum familiarem larem more [in one]: any private household-god (abode) nusquam nobis?
 no-where to-us? [While we have no where a home of our own].
 Cūm emunt tabulas, signa, toremata diruunt When they buy pictures, statues, chased-vessels (plate), pull-down nova, ædificant alia: postremò, trahunt, new (buildings), build others: finally, draw (consume), vexant pecuniam omnibus modis; tamen torture money [squander money] in all manners; yet nequeunt vincere suas divitias summâ lubidine. are-unable to exceed their riches by the utmost extravagance

At inopia est nobis domi, alienum-aes (of expenditure). But want is to-us at-home, debt foris, res mala, spes multo asperior. abroad, thing (our situation) bad, hope by-much rougher (worse).

Denique, quid reliqui habemus Finally, what of remaining have-we (what have we left) præter miseram animam? Quin igitur except a wretched life? But therefore experciscimini? En! illa, illa libertas, quam do ye awake? Lo! that, that liberty, which optâstis sæpe; præterea divitiae, decus, gloria, you have wished-for often; besides riches, honour, glory, sita-sunt in oculis: fortuna posuit omnia ea are-placed in eyes (view): fortuna has placed all those (as) præmia victoribus. Res, tempus, rewards to the conquerors. The thing (circumstance), time, pericula, egestas, magnifica spolia belli hortentur dangers, want, the magnificent spoils of war may exhort vos magis quam mea oratio. Ut emini me vel you more than my speech. Ye shall use me either (as) imperatore vel milite: neque animus neque general or (fellow) soldier: neither (my) mind nor corpus aberit à vobis. Consul agam, ut body shall be-absent from you. (As) consul I shall-do, as spero, hæc ipsa unà vobiscum: nisi fortè I hope, those very (things) together with you: unless by chance animus fallit me, et vos parati-estis (my) mind deceive me, and you have been prepared (disposed) servire magis quam imperare. to serve rather than to command.

Postquam homines accepere ea, After the men received (heard) those (things), quibus omnia mala erant abundè, sed neque res to whom all evils were abundantly, but neither thing neque ulla bona spes: tametsi videbatur (property) nor any good hope: although it did seem illis magna merces movere quieta; tamen to them a great reward to move quiet (things); notwithstanding plerique postulare uti proponeret, quæ many (began) to require that he would propose, what foret conditio belli: quæ præmia peterent would be the condition of war: what rewards they might seek armis: quid que ubi opis aut spei haberent. by arms: what and where of resource or of hope they might have.

Tum Catilina polliceri novas tabulas Then Catiline (began) to promise new tablets (a remission of proscriptionem locupletium, magistratus, debts), a proscription of the wealthy, magistrates, sacerdotia, rapinas, omnia alia quæ bellum priesthoods, rapines, all other (things) which war atque lubido victorum fert: præterea, and [the] lust of conquerors bears (brings): moreover, Pisonem esse in citeriore Hispaniâ, Publum [that] Piso to be (was) in hither Spain, Publius Sittium Nucerinum cum exercitu in Mauritaniâ, Sittius Nucerinus with an army in Mauritania, participes sui consilii: Caium Antonium partakers of his design: [that] Caius Antony petere consulatum, quem speraret to seek [sought] the consulship, whom he would hope (he hoped) fore collegam sibi, hominem et to-be-about-to-be [would be a] colleague to himself, a man and familiarem et circumventum omnibus (both) familiar and beset by all necessitudinibus:
obligations: [his familiar acquaintance, and under many obligations to him]: himself (Catiline) consul about-to-make (would make) initium agendi cum eo. Ad-hoc increpabat a beginning of acting with him. Besides he did revile maledictis        omnes        bonos:        nominans [with imprecations]        all        good (men):        naming unumquemque suorum,        laudare,        admonere each                of his own, (he began) to praise (him),        to remind alium        egestatis,        alium        suæ        cupiditatis, one        of (his) poverty,        another        of his        desire, | complures periculi aut ignominiae, multos        Sullanæ many        of danger or        disgrace,        many of the Syllanian victoriae,        quibus ea        fuerat prædæ. Postquam of victory,        to whom that        had been for booty. After videt animos omnium alacris (alacres);        cohortatus, he sees the minds of all        cheerful;        having exhorted ut        haberent        suam        petitionem (them),        that        they would have        his        petition (canvass) curse, for a concern, [that they would exert themselves in his canvass for the con-dimisit conventum.        Fuere        eâ tempestate, sulship], he dismissed the assembly. There have been at        that time, qui        dicerent        Catilinam,        oratione (those) who        might say (said) [that] Catiline,        the speech habitâ,        circumtulisse        in pateris having been delivered, to have carried-about [carried about] in goblets sanguinem humani corporis, permixtum vino cum the blood of a human body,        [mingled with wine] when adigeret        populares        sui        sceleris        ad he would force        the accomplices        of his        wickedness        to jusjurandum;        inde cùm omnes degustavissent an oath;        then when all        might have tasted (had tasted) post exsecrationem,        sicuti consuevit fieri in after the execration (oath), as        has been-wont to be done in solemnibus sacris,        aperuisse suum consilium; solemn        sacred-rites, to have disclosed [his] design; atque        dictitare        fecisse and        to say-frequently [that they frequently said]        to have done eo,        quò        forent magis (that he did it) for-this-purpose, in-order-that they might be more fidi inter se,        consciï alius alii        tanti faithful among themselves, (being) conscious one to another of so-great facinoris. Nonnulli existabant et hæc, a crime. Some did think and (both) these (things), et multa præterea ficta ab iis, qui credebant and many besides feigned by those, who did believe invidiam Ciceronis, quæ postea the envy (hatred) of (against) Cicero, which afterwards orta-est, leniri atrocitate sceleris eorum, arose, to be assuaged by the heinousness of the wickedness of those, qui dederant poenas. Ea res comperta-est who had given (suffered) punishments. That thing has been found-out nobis parùm pro [to us] little (insufficiently) for (in proportion to) (its) magnitudine.

greatness. [The proof seems not to us sufficient to decide in so weighty Sed Quintus Curius fuit in eâ an accusation]. But Quintus Curius was in that conjuratione, natus haud obscuro loco, conspiracy, born not in obscure place (honourably decoopertus flagitiis atque facinoribus; quem scended), overwhelmed with villanies and crimes; whom censores amoverant senatu gratiâ probri. the censors had expelled from the senate on-account of disgrace.

Non minor vanitas quam audacia No less vanity [and indiscretion] than boldness inerat huic homini: neque reticere was-in [appertained] to this man: [nor] to keep-secret quæ ipse audierat, neque [could he keep secret] what (things) he had heard, nor occultare suamet sclera; prorsus to conceal [nor could he conceal] his-own crimes; [nor in-short habebat quicquam pensi neque dicere neque facere. had-he any care neither to say nor to do.]

Vetus consuetudo [In short he cared not what he said or did]. An old habit stupri erat ei cum Fulviâ, nobili muliere, cui of intrigue was to him with Fulvia, a noble woman, to whom cùm esset minùs gratus, quòd minùs-potérat when he might be (he was) less agreeable, because he-was-less-able largiri inopiâ, repente gloriās, polliceri to bestow from poverty, suddenly boasting, (he began) to promise maria que montes, interdum seas and mountains, (to make great promises), sometimes minari ferro ni foret obnoxia to threaten with iron (the sword), unless she would-be compliant sibi: postremo, agitare ferociūs quām solitus-erat. to him: in-fine, to-act more-rudely than he had been-wont.

 At Fulvia, causâ insolentiae Curii cognitâ, But Fulvia, the cause of the rudeness of Curius having been known, habuit non occultum tale periculum reipublicæ: sed kept not secret such danger to the republic: but auctore sublato, narravit compluribus quæ, the author having been suppressed, *related to many what, quo modo, audierat de conjuratione (and) in what manner, she had heard of the conspiracy Catilinæ. Ea res imprimis accedit studia of Catiline. That thing chiefly kindled the zeals (zeal) hominum ad consulatum mandandum Marco Tullio of men to the consulship to-be-committed to Marcus Tullius Ciceroni. Namque antea Cicero. [To elect Cicero to the consulship]. For before pleraque nobilitas æstuabat invidiâ, et credebat most-of the nobility did boil with envy, and did believe consulatum quasi pollui, si novus homo the consulship as-if to be defiled, if a new man (a person not adeptus-foret eum. Sed ubi periculum noble) should have obtained it. But when danger advenit, invidia atque superbia post-fuere. approached, envy and pride were postponed (of secondary Igitur comitiis habitis, Marcus consideration). Therefore elections having-been-held, Marcus Tullius et Caius Antonius declarantur consules.
 Tullius and Caius Antony are declared consuls.
 Quod factum primò concusserat populares Which deed first had shaken the accomplices conjurationis. Tamen furor Catilinæ neque of the conspiracy. However the rage of Catiline neither minuebatur; sed agitare plura in-dies; was diminished; but (he began) to agitate more (things) every-day; parare arma opportunis locis per Italiam; to prepare arms in convenient places through Italy; portare mutuam pecuniam sumptam suā aut to convey borrowed money taken on his-own or fide amicorum, Fæsulas, ad quendam Manlium; the credit of friends, to Fæsulæ, to a certain Manlius; qui postea fuit princeps belli faciundi. who afterwards was chief of the war to-be-made (of making Dicitur eâ tempestate adscivisse plurimos war). He is said at that time to have attached very-many homines cujuscunque generis sibi; etiam aliquot men of every kind to himself; also some mulieres, quæ primò toleraverant ingentis (ingentes) women, who first had supported great sumptus stupro corporis; pòst ubi ætas fecerat expenses by prostitution of body; afterwards when age had made modum tantummodo quæstui, neque luxuriæ, a bound only to gain, and-not to luxury, conflaverant grande alienum-ses. Catilina they had contracted a great debt. Catiline credebat se posse per eas solicitare urbana did believe himself to be able through these to stir-up city servitia incendere urbem, vel adjungere slaveries (slaves) to burn the city, or to attach [them] sibi, vel interficere viros earum. Sed in his to him, or to murder the husbands of them. But among these erat Sempronia, quæ sèpe commiserat multa facinora was Sempronia, who often had committed many acts virilis audaciæ. Hæc mulier fuit satis fortunata of manly boldness. This woman was sufficiently happy genere atque formâ, præterea viro et liberis: in lineage and beauty, moreover in a husband and children: docta Græcis et Latinis literis: psallere, learned in Greek and Latin letters (literature): to sing, saltare elegantiùs quam est to dance [she could sing and dance] more-gracefully than is necesse probæ: multa ilia quæ necessary for a chaste (lady): (she knew) many other (things) which sunt instrumenta luxuriæ: sed omnia are instruments of luxury: but all (things) (were) semper cariora ei quam fuit decus atque pudicitia. always dearer to her than was honour and chastity.

Discerneret haud facilè an parceret minùs Thou couldst determine not easily whether she would spare less pecuniæ an famæ; sic accensa lubidine ut to money or character; so inflamed with lust that peteret viros sæpius quam peteretur. she would seek men oftener than she would be sought (by them).

Sed ea sæpè antehac prodiderat fidem, abjuraverat But she often before this had betrayed faith, had forsworn credidum, fuerat conscia cædis, abierat credit (trust), had been guilty of murder, had gone præceps luxuriâ atque inopiam. Verum headlong [into ruin] by luxury and by want. But ingenium ejus haud absurdum: the understanding of her (was) not foolish (despicable): posse facere versus, movere jocum; to be able [she could] to make verses, to move (excite) jest; uti vel modesto, vel molli, vel procaci sermone. to use either modest, or delicate, or wanton discourse.

Prorsus, multæ facetiae que multus lepos inerat Altogether, many pleasantries and much wit was in His rebus comparatis, Catilina nihilominus (her). Those things having been provided, Catiline nevertheless petebat consulatum in proximum annum; sperans, did seek the consulship for the next year; hoping, si foret designatus, se usurum facilè if he might be elected, [that] himself about-to-use easily Antonio ex voluntate.

(would easily manage) Antony according-to (his) will.

Neque interea erat quietus, sed parabat insidias Neither mean-time was he quiet, but did prepare snares Ciceroni omnibus modis. Tamen, dolus aut astutiae for Cicero in all manners. However, craft or wiles neque-deerant illi ad-cavendum. Namque à were-not-wanting to him to-beware. For from principio sui consulatūs, effecerat, pollicendo the beginning of his consulship, he had effected, by promising multa per Fulviam, ut Quintus Curius, de many (things) through Fulvia, that Quintus Curius, of quo memoravi paulò antè, proderet consilia whom I have recorded (spoken) a little before, might betray the designs Catilinæ sibi. Ad-hoc perpulerat suum collegam of Catilinæ to him. Besides he had forced his colleague Antonium pactione provinciæ, Antony by the agreement (promise) of a province, ne-sentiret contra rempublicam :

 that he would not-feel (entertain ill-will) against the republic : habebat occultè præsidia amicorum atque clientium he did have secretly guards of friends and dependants circum se. Postquam dies comitiorum venit, et about himself. When the day of elections came, and neque petitio Catilinæ, neque insidiae quas fecerat neither the suit of Catiline, nor the snares which he had made consuli cessere prosperè, constituit facere bellum for the consul resulted favourably, he resolved to make war et experiri omnia extrema, quoniam, quæ and to try all extreme (things), since, what (things) tentaverat occultè, evenerant aspera que foeda. he had tried secretly, had happened rough and disgraceful.
 Igitur dimisit Caium Manlium Fæsulas, Therefore he dismissed (sent) Caius Manlius (to) Fæsulæ, atque in eam partem Etruriæ, quemdam Septimium, and to that part of Etruria, a certain Septimius, Camertem in Picenum agrum, Caium Julium in a Camertian to the Picene land, Caius Julius to Apuliam, præterea alium alio, quem que ubi Apulia, moreover another to-another-place, whom and where credebat fore opportunum sibi. Interea he did believe to-be-about-to-be suitable to himself. Mean-time moliri multa Romæ simul : (he began) to contrive many (things) at Rome at-the-same-time :

tendere insidias consuli; parare incendia; to lay snares for the consul; to prepare burnings; obsidere opportuna loca armatis hominibus:
 to block-up convenient places with armed men:
 ipse esse cum telo, item jubere alios, himself to be with a weapon, also to order others, [he himself was hortari uti essent armed, and ordered others to be so], to exhort that they might be semper intenti que parati; festinare dies que always intent and prepared; to hasten days and noctes;
 vigilare;
 nights; [he was actively employed day and night]; to watch; fatigari neque insomniis (pl.) neque labore.
 to be fatigued neither by-want-of-sleep nor by labour.
 Postremo, ubi nihil procedit agitanti multa, Finally, when nothing succeeds [with him] projecting many rursus convocat principes coniurationis (things), again he assembles the chiefs of the conspiracy intempestâ nocte, per Marcum Porcium Læcam, in untimely night, through Marcus Porcius Læca, que ibi questus multa de ignaviâ eorum, and there having complained many (much) of the indolence of them, docet se præmisisse Manlium he informs (them) himself to-have-sent-before (despatched) Manlius ad eam multitudinem, quam paraverat ad arma to that multitude, which he had prepared to arms capiunda; item alios in alia opportuna to-be-taken (to take arms); also others to other convenient loca, qui facerent initium belli; que se places, who might make (to make) a beginning of war; and himself cupere profici ad exercitum, si to desire [that he desired] to-set-out to the army, if he might oppressisset Ciceronem priùs: eum have (had) destroyed Cicero before him (Cicero) officere multùm suis consiliis. to obstruct much to his designs. [If he could destroy Cicero before Igitur,
 he departed, as Cicero obstructed him much in his designs]. Therefore, cæteris perterritis ac dubitantibus, Caius the rest having been affrighted and hesitating, Caius Cornelius, Romanus eques, pollicitus suam operam, Cornelius, a Roman knight, having promised [his] assistance, et cum eo Lucius Vargunteius, senator, and with him Lucius Vargunteius, a senator, [they] constituere eâ nocte paulò post, introire cum appointed on that night a little after, to go-in with armatis hominibus ad Ciceronem, sicuti salutatum, armed men to Cicero, as [if] to salute et confodere de-improviso imparatum, [him], and to stab on-a-sudden (him) unprepared, suæ domi. Curius, ubi intelligit quantum at his-own house. Curius, when he understands how-great periculum impendeat consuli, properè enunciat danger may depend (impends) to the consul, hastily declares Ciceroni per Fulviam, dolum qui parabatur. Ita to Cicero through Fulvia, the plot which was prepared. Thus illi prohibiti januâ, suscepérant tantum they having been prohibited from the gate, had-undertaken so-great facinus frustrâ. Interea Manlius solicitare a crime in-vain. Mean-time Manlius (began) to solicit plebem in Etruriâ, cupidam (excite to insurrection) the commonalty in Etruria, desirous novarum rerum simul egestate, ac of new things (a revolution) at-the-same-time from want, and dolore injuriæ: quòd amiserat resentment of injury: because (the common people) had lost (their) agros que omnia bona dominatione Sullæ; lands and all (their) goods by the usurpation of Sylla; præterea latrones cujuscunque generis, quorum moreover robbers of every kind, of whom magna copia erat in eâ regione, nonnullos a great plenty (number) was in that region, [also] some ex Sullanis colonis, quibus lubido atque luxuria of the Syllanian colonists, to whom lust and luxury fecerant nihil reliqui ex magnis rapinis. made nothing remaining (left nothing) out-of great plunders.

Cum ea nunciarentur Ciceroni, permotus When those (things) might be (were) told to Cicero, much-disturbed anticipi malo, quod neque-poterat longius tueri by the double evil, because he was-not-able longer to protect urbem ab insidiis privato consilio, the city from stratagems by private contrivance, [vigilance], neque habebat satis compertum quantus exercitus neither had he sufficiently found-out how-great the army Manlii foret, aut quo consilio; of Manlius might-be (was), or with what design; [what was its derefert rem ad senatum, exagitatam sign]; he refers the matter to the senate, harassed (canvassed) jam antea rumoribus vulgi. Itaque senatus even before by the rumours of the mob. Therefore the senate decrevit quod solet plerumque in atroci negotio, decreed what is-wont generally in [an atrocious] business, consules darent operam, [in a dangerous emergency]. (that) the consuls should give exertion, ne res publica caperet quid detrimenti. Ea lest the republic should take any of injury. That maxima potestas permittitur very-great power is allowed to a (supreme) magistrate per senatum, Romano more, parare exercitum, by the senate, by Roman custom, to prepare an army, gerere bellum, coercere socios atque cives omnibus to carry-on war, to coerce allies and citizens in all modis: habere summum imperium atque judicium manners: to have the chief government and judgment domi que militiae. Aliter jus earum (civil rule) at-home and abroad. Otherwise privilege of those rerum est nulli consuli sine jussu populi. things is to no consul without command of the people.
 Post paucos dies, Lucius Senius, senator, recitabat After a few days, Lucius Senius, a senator, did read-aloud in senatu literas quas dicebat in the senate letters (a letter), which he did say (to have been) allatas sibi Fæsulis, in quibus erat scriptum, brought to him from Fæsulæ, in which was written, [that]

Caium Manlium cepisse arma cum magnâ Caius Manlius to have taken [had taken] arms with a great multitudine ante sextam diem kalendarum multitude before the sixth day of the calends

Novembbris. Simul id quod solet of November (27th October). At the same time that which is usual in tali re, alii nunciabant portenta atque in such thing (a case), some did announce omens and prodigia; alii conventus fieri, arma portari, prodigies; others assemblies to be made (held), arms to be conveyed, servile bellum moveri Capuae atque in Apuliâ. a servile war to be excited at Capua and in Apulia.

Igitur decreto senati, missi Quintus Marcius Therefore by a decree of the senate, were sent Quintus Marcius

Rex Fæsulas; Q. Metellus Creticus in Apuliam Rex to Fæsulas; Quintius Metellus Créticus into Apulia que ea loca circùm. Hi utriusque erant imperatores and those places around. These both were generals ad urbem; impediti ne triumpharent calumniâ to (near) the city; prevented lest they might triumph by the calumny paucorum, of a few, [both these were generals, without the walls of the city, prequibus vented by the calumnies of a few, from having their triumph], to whom mos erat vendere omnia, honesta atque custom was to sell all (things), honourable and inhonesta. Sed prætores Quintus Pompeius dishonourable. But the pretors (were sent) Quintus Pompeius

Rufus Capuam, Quintus Metellus Celer in Picenum Rufus to Capua, Quintus Metellus Celer to the Picene agrum: que permissum his, uti compararent land: and (it was) allowed to these, that they might levy exercitum pro tempore atque periculo. Ad-hoc an army according-to time and danger. Besides si quis indicâsset de (they decreed) if any-one should have informed (had informed) of coniuratione quæ facta-erat contra rempublicam, the conspiracy which was made against the republic, præmium, libertatem servo, et H. S. C. a reward, (viz.) freedom to a slave, and a hundred-thousand (centum sestertia); libero impunitatem ejus rei sesterces; to a free-man impunity of that thing et H. S. C. C. (ducenta sestertia); que item and two-hundred-thousand sesterces; and also decrevere, uti gladiatoriæ familiæ distribuerentur they decreed, that the gladiator families should be distributed Capuam, et in cætera municipia, pro to Capua, and into other municipal-towns, according-to opibus cujusque; vigilæ haberentur the resources (strength) of each; watches should be kept per totam urbem Romæ, que minores throughout the whole city of Rome, and the inferior magistratus præessent eis. Quibus rebus civitas magistrates should preside-over them. By which things the state erat permota atque facies urbis immutata: was disturbed and the appearance of the city changed: tristitia repente invasit omnis (omnes) ex summâ sadness suddenly invaded all after the utmost lætitia atque lascivia, quæ diurna quies rejoicing and sportiveness, which a long peace pepererat. Festinare, trepidare, neque had produced. (They began) to hasten, to tremble, neither satis credere cuiquam loco neque homini: neque sufficiently to trust to any place nor man: neither gerere bellum, neque habere pacem: quisque to carry-on war, nor to have peace: every-one metiri pericula suo metu. Ad-hoc mulieres, to measure dangers by his-own fear. Besides the women, quibus pro magnitudine reipublicæ insolitus timor to whom [for the greatness of the republic] an unusual fear belli incesserat, afflictare sese; tendere of war had attacked, (began) to afflict themselves; to stretch supplices manus ad cœlum; misereri parvos suppliant hands to heaven; to compassionate (their) little liberos; rogitate; pavere omnia, superbia children; to ask-frequently; to dread all (things), pride atque deliciis omissis, diffidere sibi que and refinements being left-aside, to distrust for themselves and patriæ. At crudelis animus country. [They distrusted every thing]. But the cruel mind Catilinæ movebat illa eadem, tametsi præsidia of Catiline did project those same (thinge), although guards parabantur, et ipse interrogatus-erat ab Lucio were prepared, and himself had been impeached by Lucius Paulus Plautiâ lege: postremò, venit in senatum, Paulus (on) the Plautian law: lastly, he came into the senate, causâ dissimulandi, et quasi sui by cause (for the sake) of dissembling, and as-it-were of-himself expurgandi; sicuti lacessitus-foret to be-cleared (clearing himself); as-though he might be provoked (was projurgio. Tum Marcus Tullius consul, sive timens voked) by defamatio. Then Marcus Tullius the consul, either fearing præsentiam ejus sive commotus irâ, habuit the presence of him or being excited by anger, had (delivered) orationem luculentam atque utilem reipublicæ, quam a speech brilliant and useful to the republic, which postea edidit scriptam. Sed ubi ille assedit, afterwards he published written. But when he sat-down, Catilina, ut paratus-erat ad omnia dissimulanda Catilina, as he had been prepared for all (things) to-be-dissembled demisso vultu que (to dissemble all things) (began) with down-cast countenance and supplici voce postulare à Patribus suppliant voice to request from the Fathers (senate) (that) ne-crederent temerè quid de se; they might not believe rashly any (thing) concerning him; ortum eâ familiâ, ita instituisse (being) sprung from that (such) family, so to have regulated (his) vitam ab adolescentiâ, ut haberet omnia bona life from adolescence, that he might have all good in spe: ne-existumarent opus esse sibi, (things) in hope: they should not-think need to be to him, patricio homini, beneficia cuius ipsius atque patrician man, the favours of whom self and (his) majorum essent plurima in Romanam ancestors might be (were) very-many toward the Roman plebem, republicā perditā; commons, (of) the republic destroyed (of destroying the republic); cùm Marcus Tullius, inquiline civis Romæ, when Marcus Tullius, an alien (adventitious) citizen of Rome, servaret eam. Ad-huc, cùm adderet alia would preserve it. Moreover, when he would add other maledicta; omnes obstrepere, vocare hostem revilings; all (began) to interrupt, to call (him) an enemy atque parricidam. Tum ille furibundus, inquit, and parricide. Then he raging, says, "Quoniam quidem circumventus agor præceps "Since indeed beset I am driven headlong ab inimicis, extinguam meum incendium by (my) enemies, I will extinguish my burning [destruction] ruinā." Dein proripuit se domum ex by (universal) ruin." Then he hurried himself home out-of curiā: ipse volvens multa secum ibi, the senate-house: he revolving many (things) with himself there, quòd neque insidiæ consuli procedebant, because neither the stratagems for [against] the consul did succeed, et intelligebat urbem munitam ab incendio and he did understand the city (to be) secured from fire vigiliis, credens optimum factu augere by watches, believing (it) best to be done to increase (his) exercitum, ac ante-capere multa quæ forent army, and to anticipate many (things) which might be usui bello prius-quām legiones scribebentur, to advantage for war before-that the legions should be levied, profectus-est intempestā nocte cum paucis in he set-out in untimely (very-late) night with a few into Manliana castra. Sed mandat Cethego, atque the Manlian camp. But he commands to Cethegus, and Lentulo que cæteris, promptam audaciam quorum Lentulus and others, the ready boldness of whom cognoverat, confirmation opes he had known, (that) they may strengthen (to strengthen) the resources factionis quibus rebus possent, maturent of the faction by what things they might be-able, may hasten insidias consuli, parent cædem, (to hasten) snares for the consul, may prepare (to prepare) slaughter, incendia, que alia facinora belli: sese burnings, and other cruel-deeds of war: himself (to be) accessusrum propediem cum magno exercitu about-to-approach shortly with a great army ad urbem. Dum hæc geruntur Romæ, to the city. Whilst these (things) are carried-on at Rome, Caius Manlius mittit legatos ex suo numero Caius Manlius sends ambassadors out-of his-own number ad Quintum Martium Regem cum mandatis hujuscetto Quintus Martius Rex with commands of this-modi.

 kind.

Testamur deos que homines, imperator, nos We attest gods and men, [O commander,] us cepisse arma neque contra to have taken (that we have taken) arms neither against [our] patriam, neque quò faceremus periculum aliis, country, nor in-order-that we might make danger to others, sed uti nostra corpora forent tuta ab injuriâ: but that our bodies might be safe from injury: qui miseri, egentes, plerique sumus expertes, who wretched, needing, most (of us) are deprived, violentiâ atque crudelitate foeneratorum, patriæ, by the violence and cruelty of usurers, (of) country, sed omnes famâ atque fortunâ: neque but all [from] of character and fortune: and licuit cuiquam nostrûm, more majorum has it been-lawful for any of us, in the manner of (our) ancestors uti lege, neque habere liberum corpus, to use the law, nor to have a free body (person), (our) patrimonio amisso: tanta fuit sævitia foenepatrimony having been lost: so-great has been the cruelty of the usuratorum atque prætoris. Sæpe majores rers and pretor (chancellor). Often the ancestors

- vestrūm miseriti Romanæ plebis, opitulati-sunt of you having pitied the Roman commonalty, relieved inopiaz ejus suis decretis: ac propter magnitudinem the want of it by their decrees: and on-account-of the magnitude • alieni-æris argentum solutum-est ære novissumè, of debt silver was-paid by brass very-lately, vestrâ memoriâ, omnibus bonis volentibus: in your memory, all good (persons) willing (assenting).
 Sæpe plebes ipsa, permota aut studio Often the commons themselves, influenced either by a zeal dominandi aut superbiâ magistratum, secessit of ruling or by the pride of the magistrates, seceded armata à patribus. At nos petimus non imperium armed from the fathers. But we seek not command neque divitias, causâ quarum omnia bella atque nor riches, on-account of which all wars and certamina sunt inter mortalis (mortales): sed contests are among mortals: but libertatem, quam nemo bonus amittit, nisi liberty, which no good (man) loses, unless simul cum animâ. Obtestamur te atque senatum, together with life. We conjure thee and the senate, consulatis miseris civibus; (that) you may consult (that you provide) for wretched citizens; restituatis præsidium legis, quod iniquitas may restore (restore) the security of the law, which the iniquity prætoris eripuit, neve-imponatis nobis of the pretor has taken-away, and (that) you impose-not on us necessitudinem, ut quæramus quonam modo the necessity, that we may seek (to seek) in what manner pereamus, ulti maxumè nostrum sanguinem. we may perish, having avenged-chiefly best) our blood [after having sold our lives dearly].

Quintus Martius respondit ad hæc, Si Quintus Martius answered to these (things), If vellent petere quid ab senatu, they would [wished] to seek any (thing) from the senate, descendant ab armis, proficiscantur supplices Romam: they may depart from arms, may-set-out suppliant to Rome [they should lay down their arms, and go as suppliants to Rome]:

senatum que Romanum populum (he answers) [that] the senate and Roman people fuisse semper eâ misericordiâ to have been always with (of) [always possessed] that pity atque mansuetudine, ut nemo unquam petiverit and gentleness, that no-one ever may have sought auxilium ab eo frustrâ. At Catilina ex (has sought) aid from it in vain. But Catiline on itinere mittît literas plerisque consularibus, (his) journey sends letters to most consular-men, præterea cuique optumo:

moreover to each most excellent [and distinguished] (person):

se circumventum falsis criminibus, quoniam himself being beset by false accusations, since nequiverit resistere factio[ni] he may have been-unable (was unable) to withstand to the faction inimicorum, proficisci Massiliam in exilium; of (his) enemies, to set-out to Massilia into banishment;

non quod esset conscientius sibi tanti sceleris, not because he might be conscious to himself of so-great a crime, sed uti respublica foret quieta; ve ne seditio but that the republic might be peaceable; or lest a sedition oriretur ex suâ contentione. Quintus Catulus might arise out-of his dispute. Quintus Catulus recitavit in senatu literas longè diversas ab read-aloud in the senate letters (a letter) far different from his; quas dicebat redditas sibi nomine these (this); which he did say (to be) delivered to him in the name Catilinæ. Exemplum earum scriptum-est infrâ. of Catiline. The copy of those (it) has been written beneath.

Lucius Catilina Quinto Catulo salutans. Tua egregia Lucius Catiline to Quintus Catulus greeting. Thy excellent fides, grata mihi, re cognitâ, faith (honour), [so] agreeable to me, the thing having been known tribuit fiduciam meæ [and known to me by experience], has afforded a confidence to my commendationi meis magnis periculis. Quamobrem recommendation in my great dangers. Wherefore statui non parare defensionem in novo I have resolved not to prepare a defence in (my) new consilio: decrevi proponere satisfactionem ex design: I have determined to propose satisfaction from nullâ conscientiâ de culpâ, quæ medius-fidius no consciousness of fault, which by Jove's-son (Hercules) licet recognoscas mecum vera. Concitus it-is-lawful you may recognise with me (to be) true. Provoked injuriis que contumeliis, quòd privatus by injuries and insults, that having been deprived [that have fructu laboris que meæ industriæ, deprived me] (of) the fruit of [my] labour and my industry, obtinebam non statum dignitatis, I did possess not the station of dignity [and which prevented me suscepit, pro from obtaining the dignity of consul], I have undertaken, according-to meâ consuetudine, publicam causam miserorum: my custom, the public cause of the wretched: non quin possem solvere alienum-æs meis not but I might be-able to discharge the debt in-my-own nominibus ex possessionibus; names (on my own account) out-of (my) possessions; cùm et liberalitas Aureliae Orestillæ persolveret when and (also) the liberality of Aurelia Orestilla would discharge aliis nominibus, (debt) under other names (the securities for his debts) [his suretysuis que copiis ship for the debts of others], from her-own and the resources of (her) filiæ: sed quòd videbam non-dignos homines daughter: but because I did see unworthy men honestatos honore, que sentiebam me dignified by honour (preferment), and did feel myself alienatum falsâ suspicione. Hoc nomine estranged by a false suspicion. With this name (consideration) secutus-sum satis honestas spes reliquæ dignitatis I have-followed sufficiently honourable hopes of remaining dignity conservandæ pro to-be-preserved (of preserving my remaining dignity) according-to meo casu. Cūm vellem scribere plura, nunciatum-est my condition. When I would to write more, it has been told vim parari mihi. Nunc violence to be prepared (that violence was designed) for me. Now commando Orestillam tibi, que trado tuæ fidei.

 I commend Orestilla to thee, and I deliver (her) to thy honour.
 Rogatus per tuos liberos defendas eam Entreated by thy children (that) thou mayest defend her ab injuriâ. Haveto. from injury. Farewell.

Sed ipse, commoratus paucos dies apud Caium But he, having delayed a few days with Caius Flaminium in Reatino agro, dum exornat armis Flaminius in the Reatine land, whilst he furnishes with arms vicinitatem antea solicitatam, contendit cum the neighbourhood before stirred-up, hastens with fascibus atque aliis insignibus imperii in castra the fasces and other ensigns of authority to the camps ad Manlium. Ubi hæc comperta-sunt Romæ, to Manlius. When these (things) were found-out at Rome, senatus judicat Catilinam et Manlium hostes; statuit the senate judges Catiline and Manlius enemies; appoints diem cæteræ multitudini, ante quam liceret a day for the other multitude, before which it might be lawful discedere ab armis, sine - fraude, præter to depart from arms, [without fraud] [with impunity], except condemnatis capitalium rerum. Præfor (those) condemned of capital things (crimes). Moreterea decernit, uti consules habeant over it (the senate) decrees, that the consuls may have (should hold) delectum; Antonius matureret persequi a levy; [that] Antony may (should) hasten to pursue Catilinum cum exercitu; Cicero sit præsidio Catiline [with] an army; [that] Cicero be for a protection urbi. Imperium Romani to the city [should protect the city]. The government of the Roman populi visum-est mihi multò maxumè miserabile people has appeared to me by much the most pitiable eà tempestate: cui cùm omnia ab ortu at that time: to which when all (things) from [the] rising ad occasum solis, domita armis, parerent; to the setting of the sun, subdued by arms, might obey (obeyed); otium atque divitiae, quæ mortales putant prima, leisure and riches, which mortals think the chief adfluerent domi; fuere, tamen, (blessings), might abound (abounded) at home; there were, however, cives, qui irent obstinatis animis perditum citizens, who would go (went) with obstinate minds to destroy que se que rempublicam. Namque neque both themselves and the republic. For neither quisquam omnium ex tantâ multitudine, duobus any one of-all out-of so-great a multitude, two decretis senati, inductus præmio, patefacerat decrees of the senate (existing), induced by reward, had discovered conjunctionem discesserat ex castris (pl.) the conspiracy, [or] had departed out-of the camp Catilinæ. Tanta vis morbi, atque utì tabes, of Catiline. So-great a violence of disease, and as an infection, invaserat plerosque animos civium. Neque mens had seized most the minds of the citizens. Neither the mind erat aliena solùm illis, qui fuerunt consciit was disaffected only to those, who were conscious (privy to) conjunctionis, sed cuncta plebes omnino probabat of the conspiracy, but all the common-people altogether did approve incepta Catilinæ, studio novarum rerum. the undertakings of Catiline, from a zeal of new things

Adeo videbatur facere (a revolution). Thus it (the common-people) seemed to do id suo more. Nam semper in civitate, that from their custom. For always in a state, (they) quibus nullæ opes sunt, invident bonis, extollunt to whom no resources are, envy the good, extol malos, odêre vetera, exoptant nova;

 the bad, have hated (hate) old (things), wish-for new;
 student omnia mutari odio suarum desire all (things) to be changed from a hatred of their-own rerum, aluntur sine curâ turba, atque things, are maintained without care in crowd (confusion), and seditionibus: quoniam egestas retinetur facilè sine seditions: since want is retained easily without damno. Sed verò ea urbana loss [poverty can lose nothing]. But indeed that city plebes ierat præceps de multis causis. Primùm commonalty had gone headlong for many causes. First omnium qui ubique maxumè præstabant probro of all (they) who [everywhere] chiefly did excel in infamy atque petulantia; item alii, patrimoniis amissis and impudence; likewise others, (their) patrimonies having been lost per dedecora; postremò, omnes quos flagitium aut through disgraces; lastly, all whom wickedness or facinus expulerat domo; hi confluxerunt crime had driven-out from home; these flowed-together Romam, sicuti in sentinam. Dein multi memores to Rome, as to a sewer. Then many mindful Sullanæ victoriæ, quòd videbant alios ex of the Syllanian victory, because they did see others (some) of gregariis militibus senatores; alios ita divites ut the common soldiers senators; others so rich that agerent æstatem regio victu atque they might spend age (their life) with royal food and cultu; quisque sperabat talia sibi ex dress; every-one did hope such (things) for himself from victoriâ, si foret in armis. Præterea juventus, victory, if he might be in arms. Besides the youth, quæ toleraverat inopiam in agris mercede who has supported poverty in the fields by the reward manuum, excita privatis atque publicis of hands (manual labour), excited by private and public largitionibus, prætulerat urbanum otium ingrato tribes, had preferred city ease to disagreeable labori. Publicum malum alebat eos atque omnis labour. The public calamity did maintain these and all (omnes) alios. Quod est minus mirandum, others (such). Wherefore it is less to-be-wondered-at, egentis (egentes) homines, malis moribus, [that] needy men, with bad principles, maxumâ spe consuluisse juxtâ reipublicæ ac with the greatest hope to have consulted equally for the republic and sibi.

themselves. [Had consulted their private interest as much as that of the Præterea parentes quorum republic]. Moreover (those) the parents of whom (were) proscripti victoriâ Sullæ, bona erepta, proscribed in the victory of Sylla, (their) goods snatched-away, [and] the] jus libertatis erat imminutum, exspectabant privilege of liberty was impaired, did await eventum belli haud sanè alio animo.

the issue of the war not indeed with other mind. [With like feelings].

Ad-hoc, quicumque erant aliarum partium atque Besides, whosoever were of other factions than (that) senatus, malebant rempublicam conturbari quam of the senate, had-rather the republic to be disturbed than ipsi valere minus: adeò id they to prevail less: [should have less influence]: so that malum reverterat in civitatem post multos annos. evil had returned to the state after many years.

Nam postquam tribunitia potestas restituta-est, For after the tribunician power was restored, Cneio Pompeio et Marco Crasso consulibus, Cneius Pompey and Marcus Crassus (being) consuls, adolescentes homines nacti summam potestatem, young men having obtained the highest power, quibus ætas que animus erat ferox, [the tribunician], to whom age and mind was fierce cœpere exagitare plebem criminando (ardent), began to harass [agitate] the commons by accusing senatum; dein incendere magis largiundo, the senate; then to inflame (them) more by bribing, atque pollicitando; ita ipsi and by promising-often; [by bribes and promises]; thus they (began) fieri clari que potentes. Pleraque nobilitas to be made conspicuous and powerful. Most the nobility nitebatur contra eos summâ ope: endeavoured against them with utmost might: [the greater part of the sub specie nobility strove against them with all their might]: under pretence senatûs, pro suâ magnitudine. Namque of (for) the senate, (but) for their own greatness. For uti absolvam verum paucis, quicumque that I may despatch true (the truth) in a few (words), whosoever agitavere rempublicam per illa tempora, harassed the republic during those times, (under) honestis nominibus, alii sicuti defenderent honourable names (pretences), some as-though they would defend jura populi; pars quò auctoritas senatûs the rights of the people; part in-order-that the authority of the senate foret maxuma, simulantes publicum bonum, might be the greatest, pretending the public good, [but] certabant quisque pro suâ potentia: neque did contend each for his-own power: neither modestia, neque modus contentionis erat illis: moderation, nor (limit) of dispute was to them: utrique [their contests with one another were carried on most violently]: both exercebant victoriam crudeliter. Sed postquam did exercise victory cruelly. But after Cneius Pompeius missus-est ad maritimum atque Cneius Pompeius was-sent to the maritime and Mithridaticum bellum, opes plebis Mithridatic war, the resources of the commons (were) imminutæ, potentia paucorum crevit. Hi impaired, the power of a few increased. These (began) tenere magistratus, provincias, que omnia alia: to possess magistracies, provinces, and all other (things): ipsi innoxii, florentes, agere aetatem sine they free-from-injury, flourishing, to-spend age without metu, que terrere cæteros judiciis, fear, and to affright others by judgments, [they free from danger, alarmed others by judicial investigations], in-order-that (when) in magistratu tractarent plebem placidiūs. in the magistracy they might manage the commons more-gently.

Sed ubi spes [And not excite commotions among them]. But when hope oblata-est dubiis rebus novandis, vetus was offered for [adverse] things to-be-renewed (changed), the old certamen arrexit animos eorum. Quid contest raised the minds of them. [Raised their courage]. But si Catilina discessisset superior if Catiline might have departed (had departed) (come off) superior primo prælio, aut æquâ manu, profecto magna in the first battle, or with an equal force, indeed a great clades atque calamitas oppressisset rempublicam, slaughter and calamity might have oppressed the republic, neque licuisset illis qui neither might it have been-lawful [permitted] for those who adæpti-forent victoriam uti eâ might have obtained (had obtained) victory to use it diutius; quin qui posset-plus extorqueret [longer]; but (the party) who might be more powerful would wrest imperium atque libertatem defessis et exsanguibus. authority and liberty from the wearied and exhausted.
Tamen complures fuere extra coniurationem, qui However many were without the conspiracy, who profecti-sunt initio ad Catilinam. In his set-out in the beginning to Catiline. Among these erat Fulvius, filius senatoris, quem parens jussit was Fulvius, the son of a senator, whom (his) father ordered retractum ex itinere, necari. Iisdem brought-back from (his) journey, to be-put-to-death. At the same temporibus Lentulus sollicitabat Romæ quoscumque times (time) Lentulus did stir-up at Rome whomsoever credebat idoneos, moribus aut fortunâ, novis he did believe fit, by morals or fortune, for new rebus, sicuti Catilina præceperat; neque things (a revolution), as Catilina had ordered; neither solūm cives, sed genus hominum cujuscumque only citizens, but a kind of men of any (whatever) modi, quod modò foret usui bello. Igitur description, which only might be for advantage to the war. Therefore dat negotium cuidam Publio Umbreno, he gives business a (commission) to a certain Publius Umbrenus, uti requirat legatos Allobrogum: que impellat that he may find-out the deputies of the Allobroges: and impel eos, si possit, ad societatem belli, existumans them, if he may be able, to an alliance of the war, thinking, eos oppressos publicè que privatim alieno-ære: those oppressed publicly and privately by debt: præterea quòd Gallica gens esset bellicosa moreover that the Gallic nation might be (was) warlike naturâ, posse facilè adduci ad tale by nature, to be able (might) easily be brought-over to such consilium. Umbrenus notus-erat plerisque principibus a design. Umbrenus had been known to most the chiefs civitatum, atque noverat eos, quòd negotiatus-erat of the states, and had known them, because he had trafficked in Galliâ: itaque sine morâ, ubi-primum conspexit in Gaul: therefore without delay, as-soon-as he beheld legatos in foro, percunctatus pauca the deputies in the market-place, [forum], having inquired a few de statu civitatis, et quasi dolens (things) concerning the condition of the state, and as-if bewailing casum ejus, coepit requirere quem exitum sperarent the lot of it, began to ask what issue they might hope tantis malis. Postquam videt illos queri to so-great evils. After he sees [that] them to complain de avaritiâ magistratum, accusare [they complain] of the avarice of the magistrates, to accuse senatum, quòd esset nihil auxilii in the senate, because there might be (was) nothing of redress in eo; exspectare mortem remedium suis it; [and] to await death (as) a remedy for their miseriis: "At ego," inquit, "ostendam rationem miseries: "But I," he says, "will-point-out a plan vobis, si modo-vultis esse viri, to you, if you-only-wish to be men, [if you would only be men], quâ effugiatis ista tanta mala." Ubi dixit by which you may escape those so-great evils." When he said hæc, Allobroges adducti in maxumam spem, these (things), the Allobroges led into the greatest hope, orare Umbrenum uti misereretur sui: (began) to entreat [Umbrenus] that he might pity themselves: [that] nihil esse tam asperum, neque tam difficile, nothing to be [was] so rough, nor so difficult, quod facturi-essent non cupidissimè, which they would-be-about-to-do not most-desirously, [but that they dum ea res liberaret civitatem would most willingly do], provided that thing might free the state alieno-ære. Ille perducit eos in domum Decii from debt. He leads them into the house of Decius Bruti, quòd erat propinquæ foro, neque aliena Brutus, because it was near to the forum, and not unacquainted consilii propter Semproniam, nam Brutus of the design (conspiracy) on-account-of Sempronia, for Brutus aberat tum ab Româ. Præterea arcessit was absent then from Rome. Besides he sends-for Gabinium, quòd major auctoritas inesset Gabinius, in-order-that greater authority might be-in to (his) sermoni; eo præsente, aperit conjurationem, discourse; he being present, he discloses the conspiracy, nominat socios, præterea multos innoxios names the associates, moreover many innocent (men) cujusque generis, quòd animus esset of every kind, in-order-that mind (courage) might be amplior legatis: dein dimittit eos domum, greater to the deputies: then he dismisses them home, pollicitos suam operam. Sed Allobroges habuere having promised their assistance. But the Allobroges had diu in incertum, for-a-long-time into uncertain (were in doubt), quidnam consilii what of counsel

caperent. In altera parte erat alienum-æs, they might take. In the other (one) part was debt, studium belli, magna merces in spe victoriæ; at zeal of war, great reward in the hope of victory; but majores opes, tuta consilia, certa præmia pro greater resources, safe counsels, certain rewards instead-of incertâ spe in alterâ. Illis volventibus hæc, uncertain hope on the other (side). They revolving these tandem fortuna reipublicæ vicit. Itaque (things) at-length the fortune of the state prevailed. Therefore aperiunt omnem rem, uti cognoverant, Quinto they disclose all the thing, as they had known (it), to Quintus Fabio Sangæ, patrocinio cuius civitas utebatur Fabius Sanga, the patronage of whom the state did use plurimùm. Cicero, consilio cognito per very-much. Cicero, the design having been known through Sangam, præcipit legatis, ut simulent Sanga, orders to (the) deputies, that they may pretend (to pre-vehementer studium conjurationis; tend) vehemently a zeal of (for) the conspiracy; may (to) adeant cæteros; go-to the rest [of the conspirators]; may (to) promise well, que dent operam, ut habeant eos and may (to) give exertion, [assurance], that they may have them quâm maxumè manifestos.

as most manifest (convicted). [As avowed participants Motus erat ferè iisdem in the conspiracy]. A commotion was almost in the same temporibus, in citeriore atque ulteriore Galliâ, times (time), in hither and farther Gaul, item in Piceno agro, Bruttio, Apuliâ. Namque also in the Picene land, in Bruttium, Apulia. For illi quos Catilina dimiserat. antea agere they whom Catiline had sent-off [before] (began) to do cuncta simul inconsultè, ac veluti all (things) at-the-same-time inconsiderately, and as-if per dementiam: effecerant plus timoris through madness: they had effected more of fear

quam periculi nocturnis conciliis, portationibus than of danger by nightly councils, by conveyances armorum atque telorum, festinando, agitando of arms and of weapons, by hastening, by agitating omnia. Quintus Metellus Celer, caussâ cognitâ, all (things). Quintus Metellus Celer, the cause being known, conjecerat complures ex eo numero in vincula, had cast many of that number [into prison], ex consulo senatus. Caius Murena item, according-to a decree of the senate. Caius Murena (did) likewise, in citeriore Galliâ, qui legatus praeerat ei in hither Gaul, who (as) lieutenant was-over to that provinciæ. At Lentulus cum cæteris, [presided over that] province. But Lentulus with the others, qui erant principes coniurationis, magnis copiis who were chiefs of the conspiracy, great forces paratis Romæ, uti videbatur, constituerat, having been prepared at Rome, as it did appear, had appointed, uti cum Catilina venisset cum exercitu that when Catiline might have come (had come) with an army in Fæsulanum agrum, Lucius Bestia, tribunus into the Fæsulan land, Lucius Bestia, tribune plebis, concione habitâ, quereretur de of the commons, an assembly being held, should complain of actionibus Ciceronis, que imponeret invidiam the proceedings of Cicero, and place the odium gravissimi belli optumo consuli; of (this) most-serious war to (on) the most-excellent consul; eo signo, proximâ nocte, cætera multitudo by that sign (signal), [the next night], the remaining multitude coniurationis exsequeretur quisque suum negotium.
 [of the conspiracy] should execute each his-own business (part).
 Sed ea dicebantur divisa hoc modo, But those (parts) were said (to be) divided in this manner, uti Statilius et Gabinius, cum magnâ manu, that Statilius and Gabinius, with a great band, incenderent duodecim opportuna loca urbis should set-fire-to twelve opportune places of the city simul, quo tumultu facilior aditus fieret at-the-same-time, in which tumult an easier access might be made ad consulem, que cæteros quibus insidiæ parabantur. to the consul, and the others for whom snares were prepared.

Cethagus obvideret januam Ciceronis, que [That] Cethagus should block-up the gate of Cicero, and aggrederetur eum vi; autem alias should attack him with force; but another (should attack) alium: sed filii familiarum, quorum maxima pars another: but the sons of families, of whom the greatest part erat ex nobilitate; interficerent parentes: was of the nobility, should murder (their) parents:

simul omnibus percursis cæde et incendio, at-the-same-time all being stricken by slaughter and by burning, erumperent ad Catilinam. Inter hæc they should burst-forth (sally) to Catiline. Among these parata atque decreta, Cethagus querebatur prepared (preparations) and determinations, Cethagus did complain semper de ignavia sociorum: illos always of the remissness of (his) associates: [that] those corrumpere magnas opportunitates to corrupt (mar) [did mar] great opportunities dubitando et prolatando dies; by hesitating and deferring days [and putting off the time for esse opus in tali periculo, facto executing the plot]; to be need in such danger, for deed non consulto: que se, si pauci not for deliberation: and [that] himself, if a few adjuvarent, aliis languentibus, facturum would assist, others being-remiss, about-to-make [would make] impetum in curiam. Erat naturâ ferox, an attack against the senate-house. He was by nature fierce, vehemens, promptus manu; putabat maximum vehement, ready in hand (action); he did think the greatest bonum in celeritate. Sed Allobroges convenient good (to be) in despatch. But the Allobroges assemble cæteros per Gabinium, ex præcepto (meet) the rest through Gabinius, according-to the direction

Ciceronis: postulant jusjurandum, quod perferant of Cicero: they require an oath, which they may carry signatum ad civis (cives), ab Lentulo, sealed to the citizens [of their state], from Lentulus, Cethego, Statilio, item Cassio: eos haud Cethagus, Statiilius, also from Cassius: [that] those not posse facilè impelli aliter ad tantum to be-able [could not] easily to be impelled otherwise to so-great negotium. Cæteri, suspectantes nihil, dant: Cassius an affair. The others, suspecting nothing, give (it): Cassius pollicetur semet venturum brevī eō, ac proficiscitur promises himself about-to-come shortly [there], and sets-out ex urbe paulò ante legatos. Lentulus mittit from the city a little before the ambassadors. Lentulus sends quemdam Titum Volturcium, Crotoniensem, cum his, a certain Titus Volturcius, a Crotonian, with these, ut Allobroges confirmarent societatem cum Catilina, that the Allobroges might strengthen the alliance with Catiline, priusquam pergerent domum, fide before-that they might proceed home, faith (pledges of honour) datâ atque accepta. Ipse dat literas having been given and received. He gives letters (an epistle) Volturcio ad Catilinam, exemplum quarum est to Volturcius for Catiline, a copy of which is scriptum infrâ. written beneath.

Cognosces ex eo, quem misi ad te, Thou wilt know from him, whom I have sent to thee, qui sim. Fac cogites who I may be (I am). Do thou mayest consider (take care to consider) in quantâ calamitate sis, et memineris to in how-great calamity thou mayest be, and remember thee esse virum: consideres quid to be a man: (take care) thou mayest consider (to consider) what tuæ rationes postulent; petas thy plans [circumstances] may require; thou mayest seek (to seek) auxilium ab omnibus, etiam ab infimis. aid from all, even from the lowest.

Ad-hoc; dat mandata verbis: quo consilio Besides, he gives commands in words: with what design repudiet servitia?

(reason) he may reject slaveries (slaves)? [why should he reject slaves?] cum judicatus-sit hostis ab senatu: since he may have been judged (has been judged) an enemy by the senate:

quæ jusserit esse parata in (the things) which he may have (has) ordered to be prepared in urbe:

the city: [the things which he had ordered to be done in the city, are ipse ne-cunctetur acce-prepared]: himself may not-delay [that he should not delay] to ap-dere propius. His rebus actis ita, constitutâ proach nearer. These things having been done so, on the appointed nocte quâ proficiscerentur, Cicero edoctus night on which they should set-out, Cicero having been instructed in cuncta per legatos, imperat prætoribus, all (thing) by the ambassadors, orders to the pretors,

Lucio Valerio Flacco et Caio Pomptino, ut deprehendant Lucius Valerius Flaccus and Caius Pomptinus, that they may seize comitatus Allobrogum, per insidias, (to apprehend) the attendants of the Allobroges, by ambushes (ambush), in Mülvio ponte: aperit omnem rem on the Mulvian bridge: he discovers [to them] all the thing gratiâ cujus mittebantur: agant by cause (for the sake) of which they were sent: they may do (to do) cætera, uti sit opus facto. the rest, as (there) may be need for deed. [He allows them to execute Militares

 the rest of the affair as occasion may require.] (These) military homines, præsidiis collocatis sine tumultu, obsidunt men, the guards being arranged without tumult, beset pontem occultè, sicuti præceptum-erat. Postquam the bridge secretly, as it had been ordered. After legati venêre cum Volturcio ad id loci, the ambassadors came with Volturcius to that of place, clamor exortus-est simul utrimque. Galli, a shout arose at-the-same-time on-both-sides. The Gauls, consilio cognito, citò tradiderunt se the design being known [to them], quickly delivered themselves sine morâ prætoribus. Volturcius primò, cohortatus without delay to the pretors. Volturcius first, having encouraged cæteros, defendit se à multitudine gladio: the rest, defends himself from the multitude with a sword: dein ubi desertus-est à legatis, obtestatus then when he was deserted by the ambassadors, having conjured

Pomptinum priùs multa (having first entreated) Pomptinus before many (things) de suâ salute, quòd notus-erat ei, [earnestly] concerning his safety, because he had been known to him, postremò, timidus ac diffidens vitæ, dedit sese finally, fearful and distrusting for life, he surrenders himself prætoribus velut hostibus. Quibus rebus confectis, to the pretors as to enemies. Which things being finished, omnia declarantur properè per nuncios consuli. all are declared speedily by messengers to the consul.

At ingens cura atque lætitia, simul, occu-But great anxiety and gladness, at-the-same-time, occu-pavere illum. Lætabatur, intelligens civitatem esse pied him. He did rejoice, understanding the state to be ereptam periculis, coniuratione patefactâ; autem rescued from danger, the conspiracy having been exposed; but porro erat anxius quid esset opus facto moreover he was anxious what might be necessary for deed tantis civibus, deprehensis in maxumo (to be done) so-great citizens, being discovered in the greatest scelere; poenam illorum fore oneri wickedness; the punishment of them to-be-about-to-be for a burden sibi, impunitatem reipublicæ perdundæ. to him, (their) pardon (the cause) of the republic to be destroyed.

Igitur animo con-[Of the destruction of the republic.] Therefore (his) mind having been firmato, jubet Lentulum, Cethegum, Sta-strengthened (made up), he orders Lentulus, Cethegus, Sta-tilium, Gabinium, que Ceparium Tarracinensem, qui tius, Gabinius, and Ceparius the Tarracinian, who parabat proficisci in Apuliam ad servitia concitanda, did prepare to set-out into Apulia to slaveries to-be-excited vocari ad sese. Cæteri veniunt (to excite the slaves), to be called to himself. The rest come sine morâ. Ceparius egressus domo paulo without delay. Ceparius having departed from home a little antè, indicio cognito, profugerat ex urbe. before, the discovery having been known, had fled out-of the city.

 Consul ipse, tenens Lentulum manu, quòd erat The consul self, holding Lentulus by the hand, because he was prætor, perducit in senatum; jubet reliquos pretor, leads (him) into the senate; he orders the rest venire cum custodibus in ædem Concordiæ. Advocat to come with guards into the temple of Concord. He summons senatum eò, que introducit Volturcium cum the senate thither, and introduces Volturcius with legatis magnâ frequentiâ ejus ordinis; the ambassadors in a great fulness (attendance) of that order; jubet Flaccum, prætorem, adferre eòdem he orders Flaccus, the pretor, to bring to the-same-place scrinium, cum literis, quas acceperat à the writing-desk, with the letters, which he had received from legatis. Volturcius interrogatus de itinere, the ambassadors. Volturcius being questioned concerning the journey, de literis, postremò, quid consilii habuisset, concerning the letters, finally, what design he might have had aut de quâ causâ, primò fingere (he had), or about what cause, at-first (began) to feign omnia alia, dissimulare de coniuratione; all other (things), to dissemble concerning the conspiracy; pòst ubi jussus-est dicere publicâ fide, after when he was ordered to speak on the public honour, [being given aperit omnia, ut gesta him for his safety], he discloses all (things), as they had been erant; se ascitum-(esse) carried-on; [that he] himself to have been attached (as) [was admitted] socium paucis diebus antè à Gabinio et Cepario; an associate a few days before by Gabinius and Ceparius; scire nihil amplius quam legatos; to know [that he knew] nothing more than the ambassadors; tantummodo solitum audire ex Gabino, only (being) accustomed to hear from Gabinius, [that] Publum Autronium, Servium Sullam, Lucium Var-Publius Autronius, Servius Sylla, Lucius Vargunteium, multos præterea esse in eâ conju-ganteius, [and] many besides to be [were] in that conspiratione. Galli fatentur eadem, at coarguunt Lenracy. The Gauls confess the same, but they convict Lentulum dissimulanten, præter literas sermonibus, tulus dissembling, beside the letters (letter), by discourses, quos ille solitus-erat habere, regnum which he had been accustomed to have [with them, that] the kingdom Romæ portendi tribus Cornelii ex Sibylof Rome to be foreboded [was foretold] to three Cornelii out-of the Silinis libris: Cinnam atque Sullam antea; se bylline book: Cinnam and Sylla (possessed it) before; himself esse tertium, cui fatum foret to be the third, to whom fate would be [whose fate it would be] potiri urbis; præterea illum esse vigesimum to be master of the city; moreover that to be the twentieth annum ab Capitolio incenso, quem year from the Capitol being burned, which (year) haruspices sæpè respondissent ex the soothsayers often might have answered (had answered) from prodigiis fore cruentum civili bello. Igitur prodigies to be-about-to-be bloody by civil war. Therefore literis perfectis, cum omnes the letters (letter) having been read-through, when all cognoviscent sua signa, senatus might have known (had admitted) their own signs (seals), the senate decernit, ut Lentulus, magistratu abdicato, que decrees, that Lentulus, the magistracy being resigned, and item cæteri, habeantur in liberis custodiis. likewise the rest, may be kept in free custodies Itaque traduntur, (in the custody of private persons). Therefore they are delivered (thus),

Lentulus Publico Lentulo Spintheri, qui erat tum Lentulus to Publius Lentulus Spinther, who was then ædilis; Cethegus Quinto Cornificio; Statilius Caio edile; Cethegus to Quintus Cornificius; Statilius to Caius Cæsari; Gabinius Marco Crasso; Ceparius (nam is Cæsar; Gabinius to Marcus Crassus; Ceparius (for he retractus-erat paulò antè ex fuga) Cneio had been brought-back a little before from flight) to Cneius Terentio, senatori. Interea plebes, coniuratione Terentius, a senator. Mean-time the commons, the conspiracy patefactâ, quæ primò cupida novarum rerum, being discovered, who at first (being) desirous of new things favebat nimis bello, mente (a revolution), did favour too-much to the war, (their) mind mutatâ, exsecrari consilia Catilinæ, tollere, being changed, (began) to execrate the designs of Catiline, to raise Ciceronem ad coelum; velut erepta ex servitute Cicero to heaven; as-if rescued from slavery (they) agitabat gaudium atque lætitiam. Namque did agitate (display) joy and gladness. For putabat alia facinora belli fore (the common people) did think other exploits of war to-be-about-to-be prædæ magis quam detrimento, verò for booty rather than [to themselves] injury, but incendium crudele, immoderatum, ac maxume burning (to be) cruel, immoderate, and chiefly calamitosum sibi; quippe cui omnes calamitous to themselves; because (an order) to whom all copiæ erant in quotidiano usu et cultu corporis. supplies were in daily use and dress of body.

[Since all their property consisted of things in daily use, and of clothing].

Post eum diem, quidam Lucius Tarquinius After that day, a certain Lucius Tarquinius adductus-erat ad senatum, quem aiebant had been brought-up to the senate, whom they did say retractum ex itinere, (to have been) brought-back from (his) journey, (when) proficiscentem ad Catilinam. Cùm is diceret setting-out to Catiline. When he might say (said) se indicaturum de himself about-to-inform [that he would inform] concerning conjuratione, si publica fides data-esset, the conspiracy, if the public faith might have been given [to him]. jussus à consule edicere quæ sciret, for safety], being ordered by the consul to declare what he might know, edocet senatum ferè eadem quæ Volturcius, he informs the senate almost the same (things) which Volturcius (did), de incendiis paratis, de cæde bonorum, of burnings having been prepared, of the murder of good (men), de itinere hostium: præterea, se missum à of the march of the enemies: moreover, himself being sent by Marco Crasso, qui nunciaret Catilinæ, Marcus Crassus, who might tell (to tell) to Catiline, (that) Lentulus, et Cethegus, que alii ex conjuratione, Lentulus, and Cethegus, and others of the conspiracy, deprehensi ne-terrerent eum; que having been apprehended should not-affright him; and properaret magis eò accedere ad urbem, he should hasten the more therefore to-approach to the city, quod et reficeret animos cæterorum, in-order-that and (both) he might refresh the minds of the rest, et illi eriperentur facilius è periculo. Sed and they might be rescued the more-easily from danger. But ubi Tarquinius nominavit Crassum, nobilem hominem, when Tarquinius named Crassus, a noble man, maxumis divitiis, summâ potentia, alii with the greatest riches, the highest power, some rati rem incredibilem, pars, tametsi having supposed the thing incredible, a part, although existumabant verum, tamen, quia tanta vis they did think (it) true, yet, because so-great influence hominis videbatur leniunda magis quam of the man did seem to-be-softened rather than exagitanda to-be-provoked [a man of such great influence ought to be soothed rather in tali tempore, plerique obnoxii than provoked] in such a time, many subservient Crasso ex privatis negotiis, conclamant, to Crassus from private affairs, cry-out, [that] indicem esse falsum, que postulant util the informer to be [was] false, and require that referatur de ea re. Itaque, it may be referred (to the senate) concerning that thing. Therefore, Cicerone consulente, frequens senatus Cicero consulting (presiding), a crowded senate decernit, indicium Tarquinii videri decrees, the information of Tarquinius to be seen (to seem) falsum, que eum retinendum in vinculis; false, and him [to be] kept in bonds [prison]; que potestatem ne amplius faciundam, and power (of divulging) not more to-be-made, [and that nisi indicaret he be not allowed to proceed in his testimony], unless he might inform de eo, consilio cuius mentitus-esset of him, by the advice of whom he might have (had) forged tantam rem. Erant eo tempore, qui so-great a thing. There were at that time, (persons), who existumarent illud machinatum à Publio might think (thought) that plotted by Publius Autronio, quod Crasso appellato, potentia illius Autronius, in-order-that Crassus being named, the power of him tegeret reliquos facilius, per societatem might screen the rest more-easily, by (his) share periculi. Alii aiebant Tarquinium of (in the) danger. Others did say Tarquinius immissum à Cicerone, ne Crassus, suo sent-in (suborned) by Cicero, lest Crassus, by his more custom [as was his custom] conturbaret rempublicam, patrocinio malorum suscepto. Ego postea the patronage of the bad being undertaken [by him]. I afterwards audivi Crassum ipsum prædicantem illam tantam heard Crassus [himself] openly declaring that so-great contumeliam impositam sibi à Cicerone. an insult (to have been) placed to (on) him by Cicero.

Sed iisdem temporibus, Quintus Catulus et Caius But at-the-same times, Quintus Catulus and Caius Piso potuere impellere Ciceronem neque gratiâ, Piso were able to impel Cicero neither by interest, neque precibus, neque pretio, utl Caius Cæsar nor by prayers, nor by price, that Caius Cæsar nominaretur falsò per Allobroges aut alium indicem. might be named falsely by the Allobroges or other informer.
Nam uterque exercebant gravis (graves) inimicitias For each (both) did exercise dreadful enmities cum illo; Piso oppugnatus in judicio with him; Piso having been assailed in a trial repetundarum (pl.), propter injustum supplicium of extortion, on-account-of the unjust punishment cujusdam Transpadani; Catulus incensus odio of a certain Transpadanian; Catulus being inflamed with hatred ex petitione pontificatûs, quod usus from (since) his canvass of the high-priesthood, because having enjoyed maxumis honoribus (abl.) extremâ ætate discesserat, the greatest honours (now) in extreme age he had departed, victus à Cæsare, adolescentulo. Autem res conquered by Cæsar, a young man. But the thing videbatur opportuna, quòd is debebat grandem did seem opportune, because he [Cæsar] did owe great pecuniam egregiâ liberalitate privatim, money (a great debt) by extraordinary liberality privately, maxumis muneribus publicè. Sed ubi by-very-great presents (exhibitions) publicly. But when nequeunt impellere consulem ad tantum facinus, they are-unable to impel the consul to so-great a crime, ipsi conflagraverant magnam invidiam illi themselves had-contracted great odium for him [had excited great odium against him] circumeundo singillatim, atque by-going-about individually, and ementiendo quæ dicent audisse ex by forging what they might-say (they said) to have heard from Volturcio, aut Allobrogibus; usque adeò, uti Volturcius, or the Allobroges; until to this (so far), that nonnulli Romani equites, qui erant cum telis some [Roman] knights, who were with weapons [armed] circum ædem Concordiæ, causâ præsidii, about the temple of Concord, by cause (for the sake) of guard, impulsi seu magnitudine periculi, seu being impelled either by the magnitude of the danger, or mobilitate animi, quò suum studium in by levity of mind, in-order-that their zeal toward rempublicam esset clarius, minitarentur the republic might be more-conspicuous, might threaten (threatened) gladio Cæsari egredienti ex senatu. Dum with a sword to Cæsar going-out from the senate. Whilst hæc aguntur in senatu, et dum præmia these (things) are done in the senate, and whilst rewards decernuntur legatis Allobrogum et Tito are decreed to the ambassadors of the Allobroges and to Titus Volturcio, indicio eorum comprobato; Volturcius, the information of them having been approved; liberti et pauci ex clientibus Lentuli, the freed-men and a few of the dependants of Lentulus, solicitabant, diversis itineribus, opifices atque did stir-up, in different directions, the mechanics and servitia in vicis ad eum eripiendum: slaveries (slaves) in the streets to him to-be-rescued: [to rescue partim exquirebant duces multitudinum, him]: partly (some) did search-out the leaders of multitudes qui soliti-erant vexare rempublicam (mobs), who had been accustomed to harass the republic pretio. Autem Cethegus orabat per nuncios, for hire. But Cethegus did entreat through messengers, familiam atque suos libertos exercitatos in (his) household and his freed-men exercised in audaciam, uti grege facto irrumperent boldness, that a flock (band) having been formed, they would break-in ad sese cum telis. Consul, ubi cognovit ea to himself with weapons. The consul, when he knew those parari, præsidiis dispositis, uti res (things) to be prepared, guards being arranged, as the thing atque tempus monebat, senatu convocato, refert and time did advise, the senate being convoked, refers quid placeat fieri de his, qui (asks) what it may please to be done concerning those, who traditi-erant in custodiam. Sed frequens senatus had been-delivered into custody. But a crowded senate judicaverat paulò antè eos fecisse had judged a little before [that] them to have acted [had acted] contra rempublicam. Tum Decius Junius Silanus against the republic. Then Decius Junius Silanus primus rogatus sententiam, quòd eo tempore first being asked (his) opinion, because at that time erat consul designatus, decreverat supplicium he was consul elect, had decreed punishment sumendum to-be-inflicted [gave it as his opinion that punishment ought to be in-de his, qui tenebantur in custodiis; et flicted] on those, who were detained in custodies; and præterea de Lucio Cassio, Publio Furio, Publio moreover on Lucius Cassius, Publius Furius, Publius Umbreno, Quinto Annio, si deprehensi-forent: Umbrenus, Quintus Annius, if they might have been apprehended: que is postea permotus [should they be apprehended]: and he afterwards affected oratione Caii Cæsaris, dixerat se iturum by the speech of Caius Cæsar, had said himself about-to-go pedibus on feet [that he was about to go into a division of the senate on the in sententiam Tiberii Neronis, question] (without a speech) into the opinion of Tiberius Nero, quòd censuerat referendum because he had thought (it ought) to-be-referred (to the senate) de eâ re, præsidiis additis. concerning that thing, [for further investigation], guards being added, Sed Cæsar, ubi

 [The prisoners being kept under guard]. But Cæsar, when ventum-est ad eum, rogatus it was come to him (to his turn), having been asked (his) sententiam à consule, locutus-est verba opinion by the consul, spoke words hujuscemodi :

of this-kind :

Conscripti patres, decet omnis (omnes) homines, Conscript fathers, it becomes all men, qui consultant de dubiis rebus, esse who deliberate-often concerning doubtful things, to be vacuos ab odio, amicitiâ, irâ, atque misericordiâ. free from hatred, friendship, anger, and pity.
Animus haud facilè providet verum, The mind (does) not easily foresees (perceives) true, (truth) ubi illa officiunt: neque quisquam omnium where those [things] obstruct [it]: neither any-one of-all paruit lubidini et usui simul. Ubi has obeyed to lust (passion) and to utility at-the-same-time. When intenderis ingenium, valet; si thou mayest have applied (you apply) the understanding, it prevails; if lubido possidet, ea dominatur, animus valet nihil. passion takes-possession, that rules, the mind prevails nothing.
Conscripti patres, est mihi magna copia Conscript fathers, there is to me a great opportunity memorandi, qui reges aut qui populi of relating, [supply of examples], what kings or what peoples impulsi irâ aut misericordiâ, consuluerint (people) impelled by anger or by pity, may have consulted (perf. sub.) malè: sed malo dicere ea, (have consulted) badly: but I had-rather mention those (things), quæ nostri majores fecere rectè atque ordine which our ancestors have done rightly and in order contra lubidinem sui animi. Macedonico bello, against the passion of their mind. In the Macedonian war, quod gessimus cum rege Perse, magna atque which we carried-on with king Perses, the great and magnifica civitas Rhodiorum, quæ creverat magnificent state of the Rhodians, which had increased opibus Romani populi, fuit infida atque adversa by the resources of the Roman people, was faithless and adverse nobis: sed postquam, bello confecto, consultum-to us: but after-<sup>that</sup>, the war having been finished, it was delibe-est de Rhodiis, nostri majores dimisere eos rated concerning the Rhodians, our ancestors dismissed them impunitos, ne quis diceret bellum unpunished, lest any-one might say the war (to have been) incepsum magis divitiarum, quam undertaken rather (on-account-of) of riches, than of (repelling) injuriæ. Item in omnibus Punicis bellis, cum injury. Likewise in all the Punic wars, when Carthaginenses saepe fecissent multa the Carthaginians [often] might have done (had done) many nefanda facinora et in pace et per inducias, abominable acts both in peace and through truces, ipsi nunquam fecere talia per occasionem; they never did such (things) through opportunity quærebant magis quod foret [though opportunity offered]; they did seek rather what might be dignum se, quam quod posset fieri jure worthy themselves, than what might to be done with right in illos. Conscripti patres, hoc est item providendum unto them. Conscript fathers, this is likewise to be-provided-for vobis, scelus Publpii Lentuli et to (by) you, (that) the wickedness of Publius Lentulus and cæterorum ne-valeat plus apud vos, quam the rest may not-prevail more among (with) you, than vestra dignitas, neu consulatis vestræ iræ your-own dignity, nor (that) you may consult to your anger magis quam famæ. Nam si digna poena more than to character. For if worthy punishment reperitur pro factis eorum, approbo novum consilium: is found for the deeds of them, I approve the new counsel: sin magnitudo sceleris exsuperat ingenia but-if the magnitude of the wickedness exceed the understandings omnium; censeo utendum iis of all; I think to-use (we must-use) those (punishments), quæ comparata-sunt legibus. Plerique eorum, qui which have been provided by the laws. Most of those, who dixerunt sententias ante me, miserati-sunt have expressed (their) opinions before me, have bewailed casum reipublicæ compositè atque the misfortune of the republic elegantly (in fine language) and magnificè: enumeravere quæ esset sævitia belli: magnificently: they have enumerated what might be the cruelty of war: quæ acciderent victis; virgines, pueros rapi; what might befall to the conquered; virgins, boys to be dragged-away; liberos dñelli à complexu parentum; matres children to be torn from the embrace of parents; mothers familiarum pati, quæ collibuisserent victoribus; of families to suffer, what might have pleased to the conquerors; fana atque domos expoliari; cædem, incendia temples and houses to be pillaged; slaughter, burnings fieri; postremò, omnia compleri armis, to be made; lastly, all (places) to be filled with arms, cadaveribus, cruento, atque luctu. Sed, per dead-bodies, gore, and grief. But, by (in the name of) immortalis (immortales) deos, quò illa oratio the immortal gods, where that speech pertinuit? An uti has tended? [what was the object of that speech]? Whether that faceret vos infestos conjurationi? Scilicet, oratio he might make you hostile to the conspiracy? Forsooth, a speech accendet eum, quem tanta atque tam atrox res shall inflame him, whom so-great and so heinous a thing non-permovit! Est non ita: neque suæ injuriæ has not-affected! It is not so: neither their-own injuries videtur parvæ cuiquam mortalium: multi habuere seem small to any of mortals: many have had eas gravius æquo. Sed, conscripti (accounted) them more-severely (than) just. But, conscript patres, alia licentia est aliis. fathers, another (difference) license is to different (persons).

Qui demissi [There is a difference in the freedom of action.] (They) who cast-down agunt vitam in obscuro, si delinquere spend (their) life in obscure (obscurity), [if they] have offended quid, iracundiâ pauci sciunt: fama (in) any (thing) [by anger] few know (it): the fame atque fortuna eorum sunt pares: cuncti mortales and fortune of them are equal: all mortals novere facta eorum qui, prædicti magno have known (know) the deeds of those who, endowed with great imperio, agunt ætatem in excelsô. Ita authority, spend (their) life in lofty (station). Thus minima licentia est in maxumâ fortunâ. the least license [of action] is in the greatest fortune.

 Decet neque studere, neque odisse, sed It becomes neither to favour, neither to have hated (to hate), but minime irasci. Ea quæ dicitur iracundia apud least-of-all to-be-angry. That which is called anger amongst alios, appellatur superbia atque crudelitas in others (some), is called pride and cruelty in imperio. Evidem, conscripti patres, ego sic existumo authority. Indeed, conscript fathers, I thus think omnis cruciatus esse minores quam facinora illorum. all tortures to be less than the crimes of them.
 Sed plerique mortales meminere postrema, But most mortals have remembered (remember) the last et oblii sceleris eorum, disserunt (occurrences), and having forgotten the crime of them, discuss de poenâ in impiis hominibus, si ea of punishment in (the case of) impious men, if it fuerit paulò severior. Scio certè may have been a little more-severe (too-severe). I know surely Decium Silanum, fortē atque strenuum virum, Decius Silanus, a brave and strenuous man, dixisse, quæ dixerit (perf. sub.) studio reipublicæ:
 to have said, what he may have said (has said) from zeal for the republic: neque illum exercere gratiam neither him to exercise [that he neither exercised] favour aut inimicitias tantâ re: cognovi eos or enmities in so-great a thing: I have known these (to be) mores, eam modestiam viri. Verum sententia the principles, that the moderation of the man. But the opinion ejus videtur mihi non crudelis (enim quid potest of him seems to me not cruel (for what can fieri crudele in talis (tales) homines?) sed aliena be done cruel against such men?) but foreign à nostrâ republica. Nam prolecto, (averse) from our republic (constitution). For indeed, Silane, aut metus aut injuria subegit te consulem Silane, either fear or injury compelled thee a consul designatum, decernere novum genus poenæ. Est elect, to decree a new kind of punishment. It is supervacaneum disserere de timore, cum tanta useless to discuss concerning fear, when so-great præsidia sint in armis præsenti diligentia guards may be (are) in arms by the prompt diligence clarissimi viri, consulis. Evidem possum dicere of a most-renowned man, the consul. Indeed I can say id de poenâ, quod res habet: that of punishment, which the thing has (imports): [that] mortem esse requiem serumnarum, non death to be [is] a rest of (from) toils, not cruciatum, in luctu atque miseriis; eam a torture, in grief and miseries; [that] it (death) dissolvere cuncta mala mortalium; locum to dissolve [dissolves] all [the] evils of mortals; a place esse ultra neque to be beyond (it) neither [that there is no place beyond it either] curæ neque gaudio. Sed per for care neither [or] joy. But by (in the name of) immortalis (immortales) deos, quamobrem addidisti the immortal gods, why hast thou added non in sententiam, uti animadverteretur prius in not to the opinion, that it might be animadverted before against eos verberibus? An, quia them (they should be the first punished) with stripes? Whether, because Porcia lex vetat? At aliae leges item jubent vitam the Porcian law forbids? But other laws also order life non eripi condemnatis civibus, sed exsiliū not be snatched from condemned citizens, but exile permitti. An quia est gravius verberari quam to be allowed. Whether because it is severer to be scourged than necari? Autem quid est acerbum aut to be put-to-death? But what is bitter or nimis grave in homines convictos tanti facinoris? too severe against men convicted of so-great a crime?

 Sin, quia est levius, quī convenit But-if, because it is more-light (too light), by what (how) is-it-consistent observare legem in minore negotio, cum negotio to observe the law in a less business, when thou mayest lexeris (perf. sub.) eam in majore? At, have-neglected it in a greater? But, (some will say) enim quis reprehendat quod [why all this debate] for who may reprove what decretum-erit in parricidas reipublicæ? shall have been decreed against the parricides of the republic? (I answer), Tempus, dies, fortuna, lubido cuius time, days (occasion), fortune, the pleasure (caprice) of which moderatur gentibus. Quidquid evenerit, acci-rules to nations. Whatsoever shall have occurred, will hap-det meritò illis: cæterū, conscripti patres, pen deservedly to them: bnt [for the rest], conscript fathers, vos-considerate quid statuatis in alios. Omnia consider-ye what you may resolve against others. All mala exempla orta-sunt ex bonis initiis: sed ubi bad examples have arisen from good beginnings: but when imperium pervenit ad ignaros, aut minus bonos, authority comes to the ignorant, or less good, illud novum exemplum transfertur ab dignis that new example (precedent) is transferred from the worthy et idoneis, ad indignos et non-idoneos. Lacedæmonii, and fit, to the unworthy and unfit. The Lacedemonians, Atheniensibus devictis, imposuere triginta the Athenians having been conquered, placed-over (them) thirty viros, qui tractarent rempublicam. Hi primò cœpere men, who might manage the republic. These at-first began necare quemque pessumum et invisum omnibus, to put-to-death every-one most-base and odious to all, indemnatum: populus lætari eo, et dicere uncondemned: the people (began) to rejoice in that, and to say fieri meritò. Post ubi licentia crevit, (it) to be done deservedly. After when misrule increased, paulatim interficere bonos et malos lubi-[by degrees] (they began) to kill the good and bad capridinosè, terrere cæteros metu. Ita civitas, oppressa ciously, to affright others by fear. Thus the state, oppressed servitute, dedit poenas stultæ lætitiae. Cùm by slavery, gave punishments of foolish gladness. When victor Sulla, nostrâ memoriâ, jussit Damasippum the conqueror Sylla, in our memory, ordered Damasippus et alios hujusmodi, qui creverant malo and others of this kind, who had increased by the misfortune reipublicæ jugulari, quis laudabat non factum of the republic to be strangled, who did praise not the deed ejus? Aiebant, scelestos et factiosos homines, of him? They did say, wicked and factious men, qui exagitaverant rempublicam seditionibus who had harassed the republic by seditions (to be) meritò necatos. Sed ea res fuit initium magnæ deservedly put-to-death. But that thing was the beginning of great cladis. Namque uti quisque concupiverat domum slaughter. For as every-one had desired a house aut villam, postremò aut vas aut vestimentum or a villa, finally either the vase (plate) or clothing alicujus, dabat operam, ut is esset in of any-one, he did give exertion, that that (person) should be in numero proscriptorum. Ita illi, quibus mors the number of the proscribed. Thus they, to whom the death Damasippi fuerat lætiæ, ipsi trahebantur of Damasippus had been for gladness, themselves were dragged (to execution) paulò pòst, neque fuit finis jugulandi, a little after, neither was an end of strangling, priusquam Sulla explevit omnes suos before-that Sylla filled all his-own (friends) divitiis. Atque ego vereor non hoc in Marco Tullio, with riches. And I fear not this in Marcus Tullius, neque his temporibus. Sed multa et varia neither in these times. But many and various ingenia sunt in magnâ civitate. Aliquid falsum dispositions are in a great state. Some (thing) false potest credi pro vero, alio tempore, can to be believed for true, in another time, (under) alio consule, cui item exercitus sit in manu. another consul, to whom also an army may be in hand Ubi consul eduxerit gladium per [entrusted]. When the consul shall have drawn the sword by decretum senatûs, hoc exemplo, quis statuet a decree of the senate, from this precedent, who shall assign finem illi, aut quis moderabitur? Conscripti a limit to him, or who shall restrain (him)? Conscript patres, nostri majores neque unquam egiuere consilii fathers, our ancestors neither ever wanted of counsel neque audacizæ: neque superbia obstabat, quò nor of boldness: neither pride did oppose, that minus-imitarentur aliena instituta, si modo they would less-imitate (not imitate) foreign institutes, if only erant proba. Sumpserunt arma atque militaria they were good. They took arms and military tela ab Samnitibus: pleraque insignia magis- weapons from the Samnites: most ensigns of magis- tratum ab Tuscis: postremò exsequebantur trates from the Tuscan: finally they practised summo studio domi, quod videbatur idoneum with the utmost seal at home, what did seem fit ubique apud socios aut hostis [and best for their use] every-where among allies or enemies: (hostes): malebant imitari, quām invidere bonis. they had-rather to imitate, than to envy to the good.

Sed imitati [They preferred imitating to envying what was good.] But having imitated morem Græciæ illo eodem tempore, animadvertebant the custom of Greece in that same time, they did animadvert verberibus in civis (cives), sumebant (punish) with stripes against citizens they did take summum supplicium de condemnatis. Postquam the utmost punishment of the condemned. After respubica adolevit, et factiones valuere the republic grew-up (flourished), and factious prevailed multitudine civium, innocentes cœpere circumveniri, by the multitude of citizens, the innocent began to be beset, alia hujusmodi fieri: tunc Porcia lex, que other (things) of this kind to be done: then the Porcian law, and aliae leges, paratæ-sunt, quibus legibus exsiliū other laws, were prepared, by which laws exile permisum-est damnatis. Conscripti patres, ego was allowed to the condemned. Conscript fathers, I puto hanc causam in-primis magnam, quod think this reason particularly great, in-order-that minùs-capiamus novum consilium. we may less (not) take a new counsel. [Deviate from the counsel Profectò, virtus atque sapientia and usages of our forefathers.] Indeed, virtue and wisdom fuit major in illis, qui fecere imperium tantum has been greater in those, who have made the government so-great ex parvis opibus quam in nobis, qui vix retinemus from small resources than in us, who scarcely retain ea benè parta. Igitur placet eos those (things) well acquired. Therefore does it please (me) them dimitti, et exercitum Catilinæ augeri? to be dismissed, and the army of Catiline to be increased?

 Minumè: sed censeo ita: pecunias eorum By-no-means: but I think thus: the moneys (property) of them publicandas, ipsos habendos in vinculis per to-be-confiscated, themselves to-be-kept in bonds through municipia, quæ maxime-valent opibus, neu the municipal-towns, which are-most-strong in resources, nor quis postea referat ad senatum, any-one afterwards may refer to the senate [nor may any one here-afte* refer their case to the senate], neve agat cum nor may act (treat) with populo de his: senatum existumare eum, qui the people concerning them: the senate to think him, who fecerit aliter, facturum contra rempublicam et shall have done otherwise, about-to-do against the republic and salutem omnium.

the safety of all.

Postquam Cæsar fecit finem dicendi, cæteri After Cæsar made an end of speaking, the others assentiebantur variè verbo, alius alii. did assent variously in word, another (one) to another.

[The others gave merely their verbal assent variously to the opinion of each of those who had spoken.] At Marcus Porcius Cato rogatus sententiam, habuit orationem being asked (his) opinion, had (delivered) a speech hujuscemodi.
of this kind.

Conscripti patres, mens longe alia est mihi, Conscript fathers, a mind far other (different) is to me, cùm considero res atque nostra pericula, et cùm when I consider things and our dangers, and when ipse reputo mecum sententias nonnullorum.
(I my) self revolve with me the opinions of some.

Illi videntur mihi disseruisse de pœnâ eorum, They seem to me to have discussed of the punishment of those, qui paravere bellum patriæ, parentibus, who have prepared war to (against their) country, parents, suis aris atque focis: autem res monet magis their altars and hearths: but the thing advises rather cavere ab illis, quâm consultare, quid statuamus to beware from them, than to deliberate, what we may determine in illos. Nam persequare alia maleficia against them. For thou mayest persecute (punish) other crimes tum, ubi facta-sunt: nisi provideris, ne then, when they have been done: unless thou shalt have provided, lest hoc accidat, implores judicia frustra, ubi this may happen, thou mayest implore judgments in-vain, when evenit. Urbe captâ, nihil reliqui it has happened. The city having been taken, nothing of remaining fit victis. Sed per is made (nothing is left) to the vanquished. But by (in the name of) immortalis (immortales) Deos, ego appello vos, qui the immortal Gods, I address you, who semper fecistis pluris vestras domos, always have made of more (have valued more) your houses, villas, signa, tabulas, quâm rempublicam: si vultis villas, statues, pictures, than the republic: if you will retinere ista cujuscumque modi sint, quæ to retain these (things), of whatever kind they may be, which amplexamini; si præbere otium you embrace; [are so fond of] if [you wish] to afford leisure vestris voluptatibus; aliquando expurgescimini, to your pleasures; sometime (at length) arouse, et capessite rempublicam. Non-agitur and take-in-hand [and defend] the republic. It is not acted de vectigalibus, non de injuriis (we are not treating) of taxes, not of the injuries sociorum: nostra libertas et anima est in dubio. of allies: our liberty and life is in a doubtful Conscripti patres, sæpenumero feci multa (state). Conscript fathers, oftentimes I have made many verba in hoc ordine:

 words in this order (house): [I have often spoken in the senate:] sæpè questus-sum de luxuriâ atque avaritiâ often I have complained of the luxury and avarice nostrorum civium: que habeo multos mortalis (mortales) of our citizens: and have many mortals adversos eâ causâ: qui fecissem adverse (to me) from that account: (I) who might have made (had made) unquam gratiam nullius delicti mihi atque meo ever indulgence of no fault to myself and to my animo, haud mind, [I who never granted indulgence to myself for a fault,] not facilè condonabam malè-facta lubidini alterius. easily did pardon bad-deeds to the passion of another.

Sed tametsi vos pendebatis ea parvi, But although you did esteem those (things) of little (consequence), tamen respubica erat firma: opulentia tolerabat yet the republic was strong: opulence did support negligentiam. Vero nunc id agitur non, ne negligence. But [nòw] that is treated not, whether vivamus bonis an malis moribus; neque we may live (we live) with good or bad morals; neither quantum aut quām magnificum imperium Romani how-great or how magnificent the government of the Roman populi sit; sed an hæc, cujuscumque modi people may-be; but whether these (things), of whatever kind videntur, sint futura nostra, an unā nobis-cum, they appear, may-be about-to-be ours, or together with-us, hostium.

of (belonging to) the enemies. [Whether all these things may belong to Quisquam us, or together with ourselves belong to the enemy]. (Does) any-one hīc nominat mihi mansuetudinem et misericordiam? here name [to me] mildness and mercy?

Jampridem equidem amisimus vera vocabula rerum; Long-since indeed we have lost the true titles of things; quia largiri aliena bona vocatur liberalitas; because to bestow another's goods is called liberality; audacia malarum rerum, fortitudo; eò boldness of (in) bad things, fortitude; therefore respubica est sita in extremo. Quoniam the republic is situate in extreme (danger). Since mores habent se ita, sint sanè liberales manners have themselves so, let (them) be indeed liberal ex fortunis sociorum; sint misericordes out-of the fortunes of (our) allies; let (them) be compassionate in furibus ærarii: ne illis largiantur towards the thieves of the treasury: not to them may they bestow nostrum sanguinem, our blood, [let them only not bestow our blood on them], et dum parcunt paucis (dat.) sceleratis, eant and whilst they spare a few wicked (men), they may go perditum      omnis (omnes) . bonos.      Caius Cæsar to destroy      all      the good.      Caius Cæsar disseruit      paulò antè, in hoc ordine,      bene et has discussed      a little before, in this order (house), well and compositè de vitâ et morte; credo, existumans elegantly      about life and death; I bélieve,      thinking ea      falsa, quæ memorantur de inferis, those (things) false, which are related of the low (regions), [that] malos habere      tetra, inulta, fœda, atque the bad to have (inhabit) noisome, waste, filthy, [and] formidolosa loca, diverso itinere à bonis. dreadful      places, in a different way (direction) from the good.

 Itaque      censuit      pecunias      eorum Therefore      he has decided      the moneys (property) of them publicandas,      ipsos habendos in custodiis to-be-confiscated,      themselves to-be-kept in custodies (prison) per      municipia; videlicet, ne, si sint Romæ, through the municipal-towns; forsooth, lest, if they may be at Rome, eripiantur      per vim, aut à popularibus they may be rescued through force, either by the accomplices coniurationis, aut à conductâ multitudine. Quasi of the conspiracy, or by a hired multitude. As-if verò mali atque scelesti      sint (sub.) tantummodo indeed bad and wicked (men) may be (are)      only in urbe,      et non per totam Italianam; aut in the city, and not through the whole Italy; or audacia non-possit      plus ibi, ubi      sunt boldness may not-be able (to do) more there, where (there) are minores opes ad-defendendum.      Quare less resources to-defend [means of defence]. Wherefore equidem hoc consilium est vanum, si metuit periculum indeed this advice is vain, if he fears danger ex illis. Sin      solus timet non in tanto metu from them. But-if (he) alone fears not in so-great fear omnium,      refert me timere magis mihi, atque of all, it concerns me to fear the more for me, and vobis.      Quare cùm      statuetis      de Publio for you. Wherefore when you shall determine concerning Publius Lentulo que cæteris; habetote pro certo, vos Lentulus and the others; have (it) for certain, [that] you simul decernere de exercitu Catilinæ, at-the-same-time to decree [decree] concerning the army of Catiline, et de omnibus conjuratis. Quanto and concerning all the conspirators. By how-much attentiùs agetis ea, tanto the more-attentively (vigorously) you shall do those (things), by so-much animus erit infirmior illis: si viderint mind (spirit) shall be weaker to them: if they shall have seen vos languere modò paululùm, aderunt feroce. you to languish only a-little, they will be-present fierce.

[The more vigorously you act, the more you will dispirit them; the more remissly you act, the more you will encourage them.] Be-unwilling existumare nostros majores fecisse remto think [that] our ancestors to have made [made] the re-publicam magnam ex parvâ armis. Si public great from (being) small by arms [alone]. If res esset (imp. sub.) ita, nos haberemus eam the thing might be (were) so, we might have it multò pulcherrumam: quippe major copia by-much the most-fair (splendid): for a greater abundance sociorum atque civium, præterea armorum atque of allies and of citizens, moreover of arms and equorum, est nobis quâm illis. Sed alia of horses, is to us than to them [our ancestors]. But other fuere, quæ fecere illos magnos, quæ sunt (things) were, which made them great, which are nulla nobis: industria domi; none to us [which we have not]: industry of (at) home; justum imperium foris; animus liber in consulendo; just government abroad; a mind free in deliberating; neque obnoxius delicto, neque lubidini. Pro his neither subservient to crime, nor to passion. Instead-of these nos habemus luxuriam atque avaritiam: egestatem we have luxury and avarice: want publicè, opulentiam privatim: laudamus divitias, publicly, opulence privately: we praise riches, sequimur inertiam: nullum discrimin inter we follow sloth: (we make) no difference between bonos et malos; ambitio possidet omnia præmia the good and the bad; ambition possesses all the rewards virtutis. Neque mirum, ubi vos capit is consilium of virtue. Nor (is it) wonderful, when you take counsel separatim, quisque sibi; ubi domi servitis separately, every one for himself; when at home you are slaves voluptatibus, hic pecuniae aut gratiae; eò fit, to pleasures, here to money or to interest; therefore it is made ut impetus fiat in vacuam (happens), that an attack may be made against the empty (defenceless) rempublicam. Sed ego omitto hæc. Nobilisrepublic. But I omit these (things). Mostsumi cives conjuravere incendere patriam; noble citizens have conspired to burn (their) country; arcessunt ad bellum gentem Gallorum, infestisthey invite to war the nation of the Gauls, most-sumam Romano nomini; dux hostium est hostile to the Roman name: the leader of the enemies is supra caput cum exercitu: Vos over head (is close at hand) with an army: (Do) you etiam nunc cunctamini et dubitatis, quid faciatis even now hesitate and doubt, what you may do hostibus deprehensis intra moenia? Censeo miseto enemies apprehended within the walls? I suppose you may reamini; adolescentuli homines delinquere per pity (them); the very young men have erred through ambitionem: atque dimittatis etiam armatos! ambition: and you may dismiss (them) even armed!

 Næ ista mansuetudo et misericordia vertet in Truly that mildness and mercy will turn into miseriam vobis, si illi ceperint arma. Scilicet, ruin to you, if they shall have taken arms. Forsooth, res ipsa est aspera, sed vos timetis non the thing itself is harsh [dangerous], but you fear not eam ! Immo, verò maxume ; sed expectantes, alias it ! Nay, indeed very-much ; but awaiting, one alium, cunctamini inertiam et molitiam animi, another, you hesitate from indolence and effeminacy of mind, videlicet confisi immortalibus diis, qui sæpè servavâre forsooth trusting to the immortal gods, who often have preserved hanc rempublicam in maxumis periculis. Auxilia this republic in the greatest dangers. The aids deorum parantur non votis, neque muliebribus of the gods are procured not by vows, nor womanish suppliciis ; omnia cedunt prosperè vigisupplications ; all (things) yield (occur) prosperously by watchlando, agendo, consulendo benè. Implores ing, by acting, by consulting well. Thou mayest implore deos nequicquam, ubi tradideris (perf. sub.) the gods in-vain, when thou mayest have (hast) delivered te socordiæ atque ignaviæ : sunt thee to heartlessness (slothfulness) and indolence : they are irati que infesti. Apud nostros majores Aulus angry and hostile. Among our ancestors Aulus Manlius Torquatus jussit filium necari Manlius Torquatus ordered (his) son to be put-to-death Gallico bello, quod is pugnaverat in hostem in the Gallic war, because he had fought against an enemy contra imperium : atque ille egregius adolescens dedit against order : and that excellent young-man gave poenæ morte immoderatae fortitudinis.

 (suffered) punishments by death of (for his) excessive bravery.
 Vos-cunctamini, quid statuatis de crudelissumis Do you-hesitate, what you may resolve concerning the most-cruel parricidis ? Videlicet cætera vita eorum obstat parricides ? Forsooth the rest (former) life of them opposes huic sceleri ! Verum parcite dignitati Lentuli, (excuses) to this wickedness ! But spare to the dignity of Lentulus, si ipse pepercit unquam pudicitiæ, si suæ famæ, if he has spared ever to chastity, if to his-own character, si ullis diis aut hominibus. Ignoscite adolescentiæ if to any gods or to men. Pardon to the youth Cethegi, nisi fecit jam iterum bellum of Cethagus, unless he has made already again war (against his patriæ. Nam quid ego-loquar de Gabinio, Statilio, country. For what shall-I-speak of Gabinius, Statilius, Cæpario, quibus si quidquam pensi fuisse Cæparius, to whom if any of consideration might have been (plup. sub.) unquam, habuissent non (had been) ever, they might have held not (had not held) ea consilia de republicâ? those counsels concerning the republic? [Who, if they ever had any reflection, would not have entertained those designs against the republic.]

Postremò, conscripti patres, si locus esset Lastly, conscript fathers, if place might be (if there were peccato, mehercule, facile-paterer vos corrigi room) for error, [by Hercules,] I would easily-suffer you to be corrected re ipsâ, quoniam contemnitis verba. Sed by the thing itself, since you despise words. But sumus circumventi undique: Catilina urget we are beset on-every-side: Catiline presses to (our) faucibus cum exercitu: alii hostes sunt intra jaws (closely) with an army: other enemies are within mœnia, atque in sinu urbis. Neque potest the walls, and in the bosom of the city. Neither can quidquam parari neque consuli occulte: quod any (thing) be prepared nor be consulted secretly: wherefore est properandum magis.

it is to-be-hastened the more. [Wherefore speedy action is required.]

Quare ego ita censeo. Cùm respublica venerit Therefore I thus determine. Since the republic may have come (perf. sub.) in maxima pericula nefario consilio (has come) into the greatest dangers by the horrible counsels sclerorum civium; que hi convicti-sint (perf. sub.) of wicked citizens; and these may have been convicted indicio Titi Vulturci, et legatorum Alloby the information of Titus Vulturcius, and of the ambassadors of the Albrogum, que confessi-(sint) (perf. sub.) paravisse lebrogos, and may have confessed to have prepared cædem, incendia, que alia fœda atque crudelia murder, burnings, and other abominable and cruel facinora in civis (cives) que patriam; crimes against (their) citizens and country; (that) supplicium sumendum, more majorum, de punishment be-taken, by the custom of (our) ancestors, of confessis, sicuti de manifestis (on those) having confessed, as of (those) manifest (clearly capitalium rerum.” convicted) of capital things (crimes).”

Postquam Cato assedit, omnes consulares, After Cato sat-down, all the consular (men), que item magna pars senatūs, laudant sententiam and also a great part of the senate, praise the opinion ejus; ferunt virtutem animi ad cœlum: of him; bear (extol) the virtue of (his) mind to heaven: alii increpantes vocant alios timidos: Cato habetur others chiding call others fearful: Cato is had clarus atque magnus: decretum senati (accounted) renowned and great: a decree of the senate fit, sicut ille censuerat. Sed fortè lubuit is made, as he had determined. But by chance it has pleased mihi, legenti multa, audienti multa præclara facinora, to me, reading many, hearing many illustrious exploits, quæ Romanus populus fecit domi que militiæ, which the Roman people has done at-home and at war mari atque terrâ, attendere, quæ res (abroad), by sea and by land, to consider, what thing sustinuissest maxumè tanta negotia. Sciebam might have sustained chiefly so-great affair. I did know sæpenumerò contendisse parvâ manu cum (them) oftentimes to have contended with a small band with magnis legionibus hostium: cognoveram bella gesta great legions of enemies: I have known wars carried-on parvis copiis cum opulentis regibus: [by them] with small forces with opulent (powerful) kings: ad hoc sæpè toleravisse (add) to this [that they] often to have borne [have sustained] violentiam fortunæ: Græcos fuisse ante the violence of fortune: [that] the Greeks to have been [were] before Romanos facundiâ, Gallos gloriâ belli. Ac the Romans in eloquence, the Gauls in the glory of war. And constabat mihi, agitanti multa egregiam it was evident to me, discussing many (things), [that] the singular virtutem paucorum civium patravisse cuncta; virtue of a few citizens to have performed [performed] all que factum eo, uti paupertas (things); and (it was) done (came to pass) by that, that poverty superaret (imp. sub.) divitias, paucitas multitudinem. might overcome (overcame) riches, fewness multitude.

 Sed postquam civitas corrupta-est luxu atque But after the state was corrupted by luxury and desidiâ, respublica sustentabat rursùs vitia by inactivity, the republic did support again the vices of (its) imperatorum atque magistratum suâ magnitudine; generals and magistrates from its-own greatness; ac sicuti parente effetâ, sanè haud quisquam and as-if the parent (having been) worn-out, indeed not any-one magnus virtute fuit Romæ multis tempestatibus. great in virtue has been at Rome for many seasons (periods).
 Sed fuere meâ memoriâ duo viri, Marcus Cato But (there) were in my memory two men, Marcus Cato et Caius Cæsar, ingenti virtute, diversis moribus, and Caius Cæsar, with (of) great virtue, with different manners, quos quoniam res obtulerat, fuit non whom since the thing (the subject) has presented, it has been not consilium præterire silentio, quin aperirem (my) design to pass-by in silence, but (that) I might disclose naturam et mores utriusque, quantùm possem the nature and manners of each, as-much-as I might be-able ingenio. Igitur genus, ætas, eloquentia fuere propè by ability. Therefore extraction, age, eloquence were nearly æqualia his; magnitudo animi par, item equal to these; (their) greatness of mind equal, likewise (their) gloria, sed alia alii. Cæsar glory, but other (different) to the other (to each). Cæsar habebatur magnus beneficiis ac munificentia; was had (accounted) great by kindnesses and munificence; Cato integritate vitae. Ille factus clarus Cato by integrity of life. He (the former) (was) made renowned mansuetudine et misericordia; severitas addiderat by mildness and by compassion; severity had added dignitatem huic. Cæsar adeptus-est gloriam dignity to this (the latter). Cæsar obtained glory dando, sublevando, ignoscendo; Cato largiundo nihil. by giving, by relieving, by pardoning; Cato by bestowing nothing.

 Perfugium miseris in altero pernicies A refuge to the wretched (was) in the other (one), destruction malis in altero. Facilitas illius, to the bad in the other. The easiness (of access) of that (the former), constantia hujus laudabatur. Postremo, Cæsar the constancy of this (the latter) was praised. Finally, Cæsar induxerat in animum laborare, vigilare, had induced into (his) mind (had resolved) to labour, to watch, intentus negotiis amicorum, negligere suâ, intent to (on) the affairs of friends, to neglect his-own, denegare nihil, quod esset (imp. sub.) dignum dono;
 to deny nothing, which might be (was) worthy a gift; exoptabat sibi magnum imperium, exercitum, novum he did wish for himself great command, an army, a new bellum, ubi virtus posset enitescere. At war, where (his) valour might be-able to shine-forth. But studium modestiae, decoris, sed maxime severitatis, a zeal of (for) moderation, of propriety, but chiefly of strictness, erat Catoni. Certabat non cum divite divitiis, neque was to Cato. He did contend not with the rich in riches, neither cum factioso factione; sed cum strenuo virtute, with the factious in faction; but with the strenuous in virtue, cum modesto pudore, cum innocentia abstinentia:
 with the modest in modesty, with the innocent in abstinence malebat esse bonus quam videri; ita, [and purity]: he had-rather to be good than to seem (so); thus, quo minus petebat gloriam, eò magis by what (how much) less he did seek glory, by that the more adsequebatur. Postquam, uti dixi, senatus dis-it did attend (him). After, as I have said, the senate de-cessit in sententiam Catonis: consul ratus parted into [adopted] the opinion of Cato: the consul having deemed optimum factu antecapere noctem, quæ instabat, (it) best to be done to anticipate the night, which did press-on ne quid novaretur eo lest any (thing) might be renewed (might be changed) in that spatio, jubet triumviros parare, quæ space [of time], orders the triumviri (sheriffs) to prepare, what supplicium postulabat; ipse, præsidiis dispositis, the punishment did require; he, the guards having been arranged, deducit Lentulum in carcerem; idem fit cæteris leads-down Lentulus into prison; the same is done to the rest per prætores. Est locus in carcere, quod by the pretors. There is a place in the prison, which appellatur Tullianum, depresso circiter duodecim is called Tullianum, sunk about twelve pedes humi, ubi ascenderis paululum feet of (in) the ground, where thou shalt have ascended a little ad lævam. Parietes atque camera insuper, vincta to the left. Walls and a vault from-above, bound lapideis fornicibus, muniunt eum undique: sed by stone arches, secure it on-every-side: but facies ejus est foeda atque terribilis in cultu, the appearance of it is filthy and terrible from dirt tenebris, odore. Postquam Lentulus [from neglect], darkness, [and] stench. After-that Lentulus demissus in eum locum, vindices capitalium (was) sent-down into that place, the avenger of capital rerum, quibus præceptum-erat, fregere things (executioner), to whom it had been commanded, broke (his) gulam laqueo. Ita ille patricius ex throat with a rope [strangled him]. Thus that patrician of clarissimâ gente Corneliorum, qui habuerat the most-renowned nation (family) of the Cornelii, who had had consulare imperium Romæ, invenit exitum vitæ the consular authority of (at) Rome, found an end of life dignum suis moribus que factis. Supplicium worthy his manners and deeds. Punishment sumptum-est eodem modo de Cethego, Statilio was-taken in the same manner of (on) Cethegus, Statilius, Gabinio, Cepario.

Gabinius, Ceparius.

Dum ea geruntur Romæ, Catilina Whilst those (things) are carried-on at Rome, Catiline instituit duas legiones ex omni copiâ, quam ipse formed two legions out-of all the force, which he adduxerat, et Manlius habuerat; had led [had brought with him], and Manlius had had;
complet cohortes pro numero militum; he fills-up the cohorts according-to (his) number of soldiers; dein uti quisque voluntarius, aut ex sociis afterwards as each volunteer, or [those] out-of the allies venerat in castra, distribuerat æqualiter; ac had come into the camp, he had distributed (them) equally; and expleverat legiones numero hominum brevi spatio; he had filled-up the legions with the number of men in a short space cùm non-habuisset (of time); when (whereas) he might not have had (he had not) initio ampliùs duobus millibus. Sed circitèr in the beginning more (than) two thousand. But about quarta pars ex omni copiâ instructa-erat militaribus a fourth part out-of all the force had been furnished with military armis; cæteri, ut casus armaverat quemque, portabant arms; the rest, as chance had armed each, did carry sparos aut lanceas, alii præacutas sudes. Sed javelins or lances, some sharp-pointed stakes. But postquam Antonius adventabat cum exercitu, Catilina after-that Antony did approach with an army, Catiline facere iter per montes: modò (began) to make (his) march through (over) the mountains: now movere castra ad urbem, modò versùs in Galliam; to move (his) camps to the city, now towards into Gaul; non dare occasionem pugnandi hostibus.
not to give [he did not give an] opportunity of fighting to the enemies.

Sperabat se habiturum propediem magnas copias, He did hope himself about-to-have shortly great forces, si socii patravissent incepta Romæ.
 if (his) companions might have executed (their) undertakings at Rome.
 Interea, fretus opibus coniurationis, repudiabat Mean-time, relying to (on) the resources of the conspiracy, he did reject servitia, cujus magnæ copiæ concurrebant slaveries (slaves), of which great forces (numbers) did run-together ad eum initio; simul videri to him in the beginning; at-the-same-time (thinking it) to seem alienum suis rationibus, communicâsse causam civium foreign to his purposes, to have shared the cause of citizens cum fugitivis servis. Sed postquam nuncius pervenit with fugitive slaves. But after-that a messenger arrived in castra, coniurationem patefactam into the camps, [that] the conspiracy (to be) laid-open [was dis-Romæ; supplicium sumptum de covered] at Rome; [that] punishment [was] taken of (on) Lentulo et Cethego, que caeteris, quos memoravi Lentulus and Cethegus, and the others, whom I have mentioned supra; plerique, quos spes rapinarum, aut studium above; many, whom the hope of rapines, or zeal novarum rerum, illexerat, dilabuntur: Catilina of new things (change), had allured, slip-away: Catiline abducit reliquos, magnis itineribus per asperos leads-off the rest, by great marches through rugged montis (montes), in Pistoriensem agrum, eo consilio, mountains, into the Pistorian land, with this design, uti profugeret occultè per tramites in Galliam. At that he might escape secretly by by-ways into Gaul. But Quintus Metellus Celer existumans Catilinam, ex Quintus Metellus Celer thinking Catiline, from difficultate rerum, agitare illa the difficulty of things (his circumstances), to agitate (project) those eadem, quæ diximus suprà, præsidebat cum same (things), which we have said above, did preside with tribus legionibus in Piceno agro. Igitur, ubi three legions in the Picene land. Therefore, when cognovit iter ejus ex perfugis, movit he knew [the direction of] the march of him from deserters, he moved castra properè, ac consedit sub radicibus ipsis camps hastily, and encamped under the roots themselves montium, quā descensus erat illi (at the foot) of the mountains, where a descent was to him (Catiline) properanti in Galliam. Neque tamen Antonius aberat hastening into Gaul. Neither however Antony was distant longè, utpote qui sequeretur magno exercitu far, as (one) who might (did) follow with a great army expeditos in fugam the disencumbered (those light armed) into flight (for retreat) sequioribus locis. Sed Catilina, postquam vidit sese in more-level places. But Catiline, after that he saw himself clausum montibus atque copiis hostium, res adversas enclosed by mountains and the forces of the enemies, things adverse in urbe, neque ullam spem fugæ, neque præsidii, in the city, neither any hope of flight, nor of protection ratus optumum factu [of succour], having deemed (it) the best [thing] to be done [he tentare fortunam belli in tali re, could do] to try the fortune of war in such a thing (crisis), statuit configere Antonio quām-primum. resolved to engage to (with) Antony as-first (as soon as Itaque concione advocatâ, habuit possible). Therefore an assembly having been called, he (delivered) orationem hujuscemodi:

 a speech of this-kind:

“Ego habeo compertum, milites! verba “I have (it) found, soldiers! [that] words [do] non addere virtutem viris; neque exercitum not to add (give) valour to men; neither [is] an army fieri strenuum ex ignavo, neque fortem to be made [made] vigorous from (being) indolent, nor brave ex timido, oratione imperatoris. Quanta audacia from fearful, by the speech of a general. How-much courage inest animo cuiusque, naturâ aut moribus, is-in to the mind of every-one, by nature or by dispositions, tanta solet patere in bello. Ne quicquam so-much is-wont to lie-open (be displayed) in war. In-vain hortêre, quem neque gloria neque pericula thou mayest exhort (him), whom neither glory nor dangers excitant: timor animi officit auribus. Sed ego excite: cowardice of mind obstructs to (his) ears. But I advocavi vos, quò monerem pauca, have assembled you, in-order-that I might advise a few (things), simul, uti aperirem causam mei consilii. at-the-same-time, that I might disclose the cause of my design.

Milites, scitis quantam cladem socordia atque Soldiers, you know how-great a defeat the slothfulness and ignavia Lentuli attulerit ipsi que indolence of Lentulus may have brought (has brought) to himself and nobis, que quo modo, dum opperior præsidia to us, and in what manner, whilst I am-waiting-for reinforcements ex urbe, ne quiverim (perf. sub.) proficisci out-of the city, I may have been-unable (I have been unable) to set-out in Galliam. Verò nunc omnes intelligitis juxta into Gaul. But now (you) all understand equally mecum in quo loco nostræ res sint. Duo with me in what situation our things may be (are). Two exercitus hostium, unus ab urbe, alter à Galliâ armies of enemies, one from the city, the other from Gaul obstant: egestas frumenti atque aliarum rerum oppose (us): the want of corn and of other things prohibet esse diutiùs in his locis, si animus prevents (us) to be longer in these places, if (our) mind maxumè-ferat. Iter may chiefly-bear (incline): [Even if our minds incline us thereto.] A way est aperiendum ferro, quocunque placet ire. is to-be-opened by the sword, wheresoever it pleases (us) to go.

Quapropter moneo vos, uti sitis forti atque parato Wherefore I advise you, that you may be with brave and prepared animo, et memineritis, cùm inibitis prælium, mind, and will have remembered, when ye shall enter the battle, vos portare divitias, decus, gloriam, you to carry (that you carry) riches, honer, glory, præterea libertatem atque patriam, in vestris dextris. besides liberty and country, in your right

Si vincimus, omnia erunt tuta nobis; (hands). If we conquer, all (things) shall be safe to us; commeatus abundè, municipia et coloniæ patebunt. provisions abundantly, municipal-towns and colonies will be-open.

Sin cesserimus metu, illa eadem fient But-if we shall have yielded by fear, those same (things) will be made advorsæ. Neque quisquam locus neque amicus adverse. Neither any place nor friend teget, quem arma texerint non.
will cover (protect) (him), whom arms may have covered not. [Who has Præterea, milites, eadem not protected himself by his arms.] Besides, soldiers, the same necessitudo non-impendet nobis et illis. Nos necessity does not-impend to (over) us and them. We certamus pro patriâ, pro libertate, pro vitâ: contend for (our) country, for liberty, for life: est supervacaneum illis pugnare pro potentîâ it is useless to them to fight for the power paucorum. Quòd, memores pristinæ virtutis, of a few. Wherefore, mindful of pristine valour, aggredimini audaciùs. Licuit vobis attack (them) the more-boldly. It was lawful for you agere æstatem in exilio cum summâ turpito act (spend your) age in exile [with] the utmost base-tudine: nonnulli potuistis, bonis amissis, ness: some (of you) have been-able, (your) goods having been lost, exspectare alienas opes Romæ: quia illa to look-to others' wealth at Rome: because those (things) videbantur foeda atque intoleranda viris, decre-did seem foul and intolerable [to men], you have re-vistis sequi hæc. Est opus audaciâ solved to follow these (my interests). (There) is need of boldness, (abl.), si vultis relinquere hæc. Nemo, nisi if you will to leave (to complete) these. No-one, unless victor, mutavit bellum pace. Nam sperare a conqueror, has changed war with (for) peace. For to hope salutem in fugâ, tum avertere ab hostibus, arma safety in flight, then to turn-away from the enemies, the arms quîs corpus tegitur, ea est verò dementia. by which the body is covered, that is indeed madness.

 Maximum periculum est semper iis in prælio, qui The greatest danger is always to those in battle, who timent maxumè: audacia habetur pro muro. fear most: boldness is had (accounted) for a wall.
 Milites, cùm considero vos, et cùm sestumo vestra Soldiers, when I consider you, and when I estimate your facta, magna spes victorîæ tenet me. Animus, deeds, great hope of victory possesses me. (Your) mind, ætas, vestra virtus hortantur me: præterea necesage, your valour encourage me: moreover, neces-situdo, quæ facit etiam timidos fortis (fortes). Nam sity, which makes even the cowardly brave. For angustiæ loci prohibent, ne multitudo hostium the defiles of the place prohibit, lest the multitude of the enemies queat circumvenire. Quòd si fortuna invidenter may be-able to surround (us). But if fortune shall have envied vestræ virtuti, cavete, ne inulti amittatis to your valour, beware, lest unrevedged you may lose animam; neu capti, trucidemini, sicuti pecora, life; nor taken, you may be slaughtered, as cattle, potius quâm pugnantes more virorum, rather than fighting in the manner of men, relinquatis cruentam atque luctuosam victoriæ you may leave a bloody and mournful victory hostibus."
 to the enemies."

Ubi dixit hæc, commoratus paululùm, When he said these (words), having delayed a little, jubet signa canere, atque deducit ordines in he orders the trumpets to sound, and leads-down the ranks to æquum locum: dein, equis omnium remotis, a level place: then, the horses all of having been removed, quòd amplior animus esset militibus, in-order-that a greater mind (spirit) might be to the soldiers, periculo exæquato, ipse pedes instruit exercitum the danger having been equalled, he on-foot arranges the army pro loco atque copiis. Nam, uti planities according to the situation and forces. For, as a plain erat inter montis (montes) sinistros, et aspera rupes was between the mountains on-the-left, and a rugged rock ab dexterâ, constituit octo cohortes in fronte; from the right, he placed eight cohorts in front; collocat reliqua signa arctius in he arranges the remaining standards (divisions) more-closely in subsidiis. Subducit ab his in primam aciem, reserves. He draws-out from these into the first line, omnis (omnes) lectos, centuriones, et evocatos, all the chosen, the centurions, and (those) called-out præterea quemque optumè armatum ex (veteran), besides every best armed (man) of gregariis militibus: jubet Caium Manlium curare in the common soldiers: he orders Caius Manlius to command on dextrâ parte, quemdam Fæsulanum in sinistrâ: the right part (wing), a certain Fæsulan on the left: ipse adsistit cum libertis et colonis he stands with the freedmen and colonists [of Sylla's army] propter aquilam, quam Caius Marius dicebatur habuisse near the eagle, which Caius Marius was said to have had in exercitu Cimbrico bello. At ex alterâ parte in (his) army in the Cimbrian war. But from (on) the other side Caius Antonius, æger pedibus, permittit exercitum Caius Antony, diseased in feet, commits the army Marco Petreio, legato, quòd nequibat adesse to Marcus Petreius, (his) lieutenant, because he was-unable to be-present prælio. Ille locat veteranas cohortes, to (at) the battle. He (Antony) places the veteran cohorts, quas conscripserat causâ tumulti (tumultùs), which he had levied by cause (on account) of the tumult, in fronte, cæterum exercitum post eas, in subsidiis.

in the front, the rest-of the army behind those, in reserves.
Ipse circumiens equo, nominans unumquemque, Himself (Petreius) going-about on horse, naming each-one, appellat, hortatur, rogat, uti meminerint addresses, encourages, asks (them), that they may have remembered se cernere contra inermes latrones, (to remember) themselves to contend against unarmed robbers, pro patriâ, pro liberis, pro suis aris atque for [their] country, for [their] children, for their altars and focis. Militaris homo, quod fuerat tribunus, hearths. (This) military man, because he had been tribune, aut præfetus, aut legatus, aut prætor, amplius or prefect, or lieutenant, [or pretor,] more (than) triginta annos cum magnâ gloriâ in exercitu, noverat thirty years with great glory in the army, had known plerosque ipsos, que fortia facta eorum; accendebat most-of them, and the brave deeds of them; he did kindle animos militum commemorando ea. Sed ubi, the spirits of the soldiers by recounting those (things). But when, omnibus rebus exploratis, Petreius dat signum all things having been explored, [Petreius] gives the signal tubâ jubet cohortes incedere paullatim. by trumpet, (and) orders the cohorts to advance a little.

 Exercitus hostium facit idem. Postquam ventum est The army of the enemies does the same. After it was come eò, unde prælium posset committi à (they came) there, whence the battle might be engaged-in by ferentariis, concurrunt maximo clamore, infestis the light-armed, they rush with the greatest shout, with hostile signis; omittunt pila; res geritur gladiis. standards; cast-aside the javelins; the affair is-carried-on with swords.
 Veterani, memorès pristinæ virtutis, The veterans, mindful of (their) pristine valour, (began) instare acriter, cominus; illi hanc timidi to press-on vigorously, hand-to-hand; they (the others) not fearful resistunt: certatur maxima vi. Interea resist: it is contended with the greatest force. Meantime Catilina versari cum expeditis in primâ Catiline (began) to be occupied with the light-armed in the first acie: succurrere laborantibus, line; to relieve (to those) labouring (hard-pressed), accersere integros pro sauciis; providere to summon fresh (men) instead-of the wounded; to provide for omnia; ipse pugnare multū; s̄epe all (things); himself to fight much; often ferire hostem; exsequebatur simul officia to strike the enemy; he did discharge at-the-same-time the duties strenui militis et boni imperatoris. Ubi of a vigorous soldier and of a good commander. When Petreius videt Catilinam tendere magnā vi, Petreius sees Catiline to strive with great force, contrā ac ratus-erat, inducit prætoriam otherwise than he had supposed, he leads-in the pretorian cohortem in medios hostis (hostes), interficit cohort into the middle-of the enemies, kills que eos perturbatos atque alios resistentes both those disordered and others resisting alibi: deinde aggreditur cæteros utrimque elsewhere: afterwards he attacks the rest on-both-sides ex lateribus. Manlius et Fæsulanus pugnantes of the flanks. Manlius and the Fæsulan fighting in primis cadunt.

 in the first (the van) fall. [Fell fighting among the first.] Postquam Catilina videt copias fusas que se After-that Catiline saw (his) forces routed and himself relicum cum paucis, memor generis atque suæ left with a few, mindful of (his) race and his pristinæ dignitatis, incurrit in confertissimos hostes, ancient dignity, he rushes into the thickest enemies, que ibi pugnans confoditur. Sed, prælio and there fighting is run-through. But, the battle confecto, tum verò cerneret quanta having been finished, then in-truth thou mightest perceive how-great audacia, que quanta vis animi, fuisset (pl. sub.) boldness, and how-great strength of mind, might have been (had been) in exercitu Catilinæ. Nam quisque, animā in the army of Catiline. For every-one, (his) life amissâ, ferè tegebat corpore being lost, almost (for the most part) did cover with (his) body locum, quem vivus ceperat pugnando. the place, which (when) alive he had taken in fighting.

Autem pauci, quos medios, prætoria cohors But a few, whom (being) middle, the pretorian cohort disjecerat, conciderant paulò diversiùs, had dispersed, had fallen a little more-differently [more scattered], sed omnes tamen adversis vulneribus. tered], but all however with front wounds.
Verò Catilina repertus-est inter cadavera But Catiline was found among the dead-bodies of (his) hostium longè à suis, etiam spirans paululùm, enemies far from his-own (men), even breathing a little, que retinens vultu ferociam animi, and retaining in [his] countenance the fierceness of mind, quam vivus habuerat. Postremò, quisquam which (when) alive he had had. Finally, any-one ingenuus civis ex omni copiâ, neque captus-est free-born citizen of all the force, neither was taken in prælio, neque in fugâ. Ita cuncti pepercerant in the battle, nor in the flight. So all had spared suæ que vitæ hostium justâ. to their-own and the life of enemies equally. [So little did all spare Neque, tamen, either their own life, or that of the enemy.] Neither, however, exercitus Romani populi adeptus-erat lætam the army of the Roman people had obtained a joyful aut incruentam victoriam. Nam quisque strenu-or bloodless victory. For each brasimus aut occiderat in prælio, aut vest (man) either had fallen [in] the engagement, or discesserat graviter vulneratus. Autem multi, had departed severely wounded. But many, qui processerant è castris gratiâ who had proceeded from the camps by favour (for the sake) visundi aut spoliandi, volventes cadavera, alii of going-to-see or despouling, rolling the dead-bodies, some reperiebant amicum, pars hospitem, aut cognatum. did discover a friend, part a guest, or a relation.

Fuere item, qui cognoscerent (imp. sub.) (There) were likewise (some), who might know (did recognise) suos inimicos. Ita laetitia, moeror, luctus, their-own enemies. Thus gladness, sorrow, grief, atque gaudia variè-agitabantur per omnem and joys were variously-mixed (exhibited) throughout the whole exercitum.
army.

END OF THE CATILINARIAN WAR.

S A L L U S T I I J U G U R T H A. SALLUST'S JUGURTHA.

---

HUMANUM genus queritur falsò de suâ naturâ, The human race complains unjustly of its-own nature, quòd imbecilla atque brevis ævi, because (being) weak and of short age (duration), regatur (sub.) potiùs sorte quàm it may be governed (is governed) rather by lot (chance) than virtute. Nam contrà invenias by virtue (native energy). For (but) on-the-contrary you may find reputando, neque aliud majus, neque præby reflecting, neither another (thing) greater, nor more-stabilius; que industriam hominum desse excellent; and [that the] industry of men to be-wanting magis naturæ, quàm vim aut more [is more wanting] to nature, than strength (efficacy) or tempus. Sed animus est dux atque imperator vitæ time. But the mind is the guide and governor of the life mortaliū, qui, ubi grassatur ad gloriam viâ of mortals, which, when it advances to glory by the way virtutis, est abundè pollens, que potens, et clarus, of virtue, is abundantly efficient, and powerful, and illustrious, neque eget fortunâ; quippe, quæ potest neither wants fortune; for (as being that), which is-able neque dare neque eripere probitatem, industriam, neither to give nor to wrest-away honesty, industry, que alias bonas artis (artes) cuiquam.
and other good endowments for (from) any-one.

Sin captus pravis cupidinibus, usus But-if (the mind) taken by depraved desires, having used paulisper perniciosâ lubidine, pessum-datus-(indulged) for-a-little-time destructive passion, has been precipi-est ad inertiam et voluptates ccorporis, ubi vires, tated to indolence and the pleasures of the body, when forces tempus, ingenium defluxere per socordiam, (strength), time, ability have flowed-away by indolence, infirmitas naturæ accusatur: quique actores the infirmity of nature is accused: each (of) the authors [of these transferunt suam culpam ad negotia.
 evils] transfer their-own fault to (their) affairs.
 Quòd si tanta cura bonarum rerum esset But if so-great a care of good things might be (were) hominibus, quanto studio petunt to men, with how-much zeal they seek (things) [but if men as aliena zealously sought good things, as they do those, which are] foreign ac profutura nihil, etiam multùm periculosa, and about-to-profit nothing, even greatly dangerous, neque regerentur magis, quam regerent casus; neither might they be governed more, than they might govern chances et procederent eò magnitudinis, ubi (events); and they might advance to that (point) of greatness, where fierent, pro mortalibus, they might become, instead-of mortals [in as much as mortals are æterni gloriâ. Nam uti genus hominum allowed], everlasting in glory. For as the race of men est compositum ex corpore et animâ; ita cunctæ is composed of body and soul; so all (our) res que omnia nostra studia sequuntur, alia things and all our pursuits follow, others (some) naturam corporis, alia animi. Igitur the nature of the body, others (the nature) of the mind. Therefore præclara facies, magnæ divitiae, ad-hoc vis a fine appearance, great riches, to-this (besides) strength corporis, et omnia alia hujuscemodi, dilabuntur of body, and all other (things) of this-kind, glide-away brevi; at egregia facinora ingenii sunt shortly; but the illustrious acts of the understanding are immortalia, sicuti anima. Postremò, uti est immortal, as the soul. Finally, as (there) is initium, sic finis bonorum corporis et a beginning, so (is there) an end of the goods of the body and fortunæ; que omnia orta, occidunt; et of fortune; and all (things) having risen, fall; and aucta, senescunt; animus incorruptus, æternus, being increased, grow-old; the mind uncorrupted, eternal, rector humani generis, agit atque habet the ruler of the human race, acts and has (comprehends) cuncta, neque ipse habetur.

[controls] all (things), neither itself is had (comprehended).

Quò pravitas eorum [Nor is it controlled by any thing.] Wherefore the depravity of those est magis admiranda, qui dediti gaudiis is the more to-be-wondered-at, who addicted to the pleasures corporis, agunt æstatem per luxum atque of the body, act (spend their) age through luxury and ignaviam: cæterùm sinunt ingenium, quo indolence: but allow the understanding, (than) which neque est aliud melius neque amplius neither is (there) another (thing) better nor more-extensive naturâ mortaliū, torpescere incultu atque in the nature of mortals, to grow-torpid from want-of-culture and socordiâ; cùm præsertim tam multæ, que variæ slothfulness; when especially so many, and various artes animi sint (sub.), quibus summa claritudo arts of the mind may be (are), by which the highest renown paratur. Verùm ex his artibus, magistratus et is procured. But out-of these employments, magistrates and imperia, postremò, omnis cura publicarum rerum, authorities, finally, all care of public things, videtur mihi minumè cupiunda hâc tempestate: appear to me by-no-means to-be-desired at this time: quoniam neque honos datur virtuti, neque illi since neither honour is given to virtue, neither they quibus jus fuit per fraudem tuti aut magis to whom authority has been [through fraud] (are) secure or more honesti èd. Nam quidem regere patriam honourable on-that-account. For indeed to rule (one's) country aut parentes vi, quamquam et possis, or parents by force, although and (even) thou mayest be-able, et corrigas delicta, tamen est importunum, cùm and mayest amend faults, yet it is unpleasant, since præsertim omnes mutationes rerum portendant (sub.) especially all changes of things may portend cædem, fugam, que alia hostilia. Autem slaughter, banishment, and other hostile (things). But niti frustrà neque quærere aliud to endeavour in-vain and-not to seek (acquire) another (thing) fatigando se, nisi odium est extremæ by fatiguing (one's) self, unless hatred is (the part) of extreme dementiæ: nisi fortè inhonesta et perniciosa madness: unless perhaps a dishonourable and destructive lubido tenet quem, gratificari decus atque suam passion possesses any-one, to deliver-up honour and his libertatem potentiaæ paucorum. Cæterùm ex aliis liberty to the power of a few. But of other negotiis, quæ exercentur ingenio, memoria [things], which are exercised by the understanding, the memory rerum gestarum est in-primis magno usui; of things carried-on (history) is particularly to great advantage; de virtute cuius, quia multi dixerunt, of the virtue (merit) of which, because many have spoken [thereof], puto prætereundum; simul ne quis I think [it is] to-be-passed-by; at-the-same-time lest any (one) existumet extollere memet per insolentiam may think (me) to extol myself through insolence (vanity) laudando meum studium. Atque ego credo by praising my pursuit. And I believe (those) fore, qui imponant nomen to be about-to-be [there will be those], who may impose the name inertiae meo tanto que tam utili labori, quia of indolence to (on) my so-great and so useful labour, because decrevi agere æstatem procul à I have resolved to act (spend) (my) age [life] at-a-distance from republica; certè quibus the republic (public affairs); surely (they will be by those) to whom videtur maxume industria salutare plebem, et it seems the greatest industry to salute the community, and quærere gratiam conviviis. Qui, si reputaverint to seek favour by banquets. Who, if they shall have reflected et quibus temporibus adeptus-sum magistratum, and (both) in what times I have obtained the magistracy, et quales viri nequierint (perf. sub.) assequi and what-sort-of men may have been unable to attain idem, et postea quæ genera hominum pervenerint the same, and afterwards what kinds of men may have come (perf. sub.) in senatum, profectò existumabunt me into the senate, in-deed will think me mutavisse judicium mei animi magis meritò to have changed the judgment of my mind rather deservedly [for quām ignaviâ; que majus commodum good reason] than from inactivity; and greater advantage venturum reipublicæ et meo otio, about-to-come [would result] to the republic also from my leisure (requām ex negotiis aliorum. Nam tirement), than from the businesses (activity) of others. For sæpè audivi Quintum Maxumum, Publum Sci-often I have heard Quintus Maximus (and) Publius Scipionem, præterea præclaros viros nostræ pio, besides (other) illustrious men of our civitatis solitos dicere ita; animum state (to have been) accustomed to speak thus; the mind accendi sibi vehementissumè to be inflamed to them most-violently [that the mind was greatly ad virtutem, cùm intuerentur excited] to virtue, when they might (did) look-on imagines majorum. Scilicet non illam ceram the images of (their) ancestors. Forsooth not that wax neque figuram habere tantam vim in sese, sed nor figure to have so-great force in themselves, but eam flammam crescere in pectore egregiis viris that flame to increase in the breast to the illustrious men memoriâ rerum gestarum, neque sedari priùsby the memory of things carried-on, and-not to be allayed beforequàm virtus adæqua verit famam atque gloriam that (their) virtue may have equalled the fame and glory eorum. At contrâ, quis omnium est of them [their ancestors]. But on-the-other-hand, who of all is his moribus, quin contendat with these (the present) manners, but may contend [who is there cum in our present corrupt manners, that does not rather contend] with suis majoribus, divitiis et sumptibus, non probitate his ancestors, in riches and in expenses, not in honesty neque industriâ. Etiam novi homines, qui nor in industry. Also new (obscure) men, who soliti-erant anteâ antevenire nobilitatem per had been accustomed before to outstrip the nobility by virtutem, nituntur ad imperia et honores virtue, strive to [obtain] commands and honours furtim et per latrocinia potiùs quàm bonis artibus. by-stealth and by robberies rather than by good arts.

Proinde-quasi prætura et consulatus, atque omnia Just-as-if the pretorship and consulship, and all alia hujuscemodi, sint clara et magnifica other (things) of-this-kind, may be (are) illustrious and magnificent per se, ac non-habeantur perinde, ut by themselves, and may not-be-had (regarded) just-so, as virtus eorum est, qui sustinent ea. Verum ego the virtue of those is, who sustain those (offices). But I processi liberiùs que altiùs, dum have proceeded more (too) freely and more-profoundly [far], whilst piget que tædet me morum civitatis. Nunc it grieves and wearies me of the morals of the state. Now redeo ad inceptum.

I return to (my) undertaking.

Sum scripturus bellum quod Romanus populus I am about to write the war which the Roman people gessit cum Jugurthā, rege Numidarum: primūm, carried-on with Jugurtha, king of the Numidians: first, quia fuit magnum et atrox, que variā victoriā; because it was great and fierce, and with various victory; dein quia primūm itum-est obviam then because first it was gone against (opposition was made). superbiae nobilitatis. Quæ contentio permiscuit to the pride of the nobility. Which contention confounded cuncta divina et humana, que processit all (things) divine and human, and proceeded eō recordiæ, utī bellum, atque vastitas thither (to that pitch) of madness, that war, and the desolation Italiæ, facerent finem civilibus studiis.

 of Italy, might make (did make) an end to civil pursuits (contentions).
 Sed priusquam expedio initium hujuscemodi tions. But before-that I prepare the beginning of this-kind rei, repetam supra pauca quod of thing, I will trace-back a few (things) in-order-that ad cognoscendum omnia sint magis [to the knowing of them] all (things) may-be more illustria que magis in aperto. Secundo clear and more in open (evident). In the second Punico bello, quo Hannibal, dux Punic war, in which Hannibal, the general of the Carthaginiensium, attriverat maxime opes Italiæ, Carthaginians, had impaired most the resources of Italy, post magnitudinem Romani nominis; since the greatness [renown] of the Roman name; Masinissa, rex Numidarum, receptus in Masinissa, king of the Numidians, having been received into amicitiam à Publio Scipione, cui postea fuit friendship by Publius Scipio, to whom afterwards was cognomen Africano ex virtute, fecerat multa the surname Africanus from (his) valour, had done many et præclara facinora militaris rei; and illustrious exploits of military thing (nature), ob quæ Romanus populus dedit dono on-account-of which the Roman people gave for a present regi quascumque urbis (urbes) et agros to the king whatsoever cities and lands it (they) ceperat manu, Carthaginiensibus victis, had taken by hand (by force), the Carthaginians being conquered, et Syphace capto, imperium cuius valuit and Syphax being taken, the power of whom [Syphax] prevailed magnum atque latè in Africâ; igitur amicitia great and widely in Africa; therefore the friendship Masinissæ permansit bona atque honesta nobis. of Masinissa continued good and honourable to us.

 Sed finis imperii que vitæ ejus fuit But the end of the government and of the life of him was idem. Dein Micipsa filius solus obtinuit regnum, the same. Then Micipsa [his son] alone obtained the kingdom, Manastabale et Gulussâ fratribus absumptis Manastabal and Gulussa (his) brothers having been taken-off morbo. Is genuit ex sese Atherbalem et by disease. He begot from himself Adherbal and Hiempalem, que habuit domi eodem cultu Hiempal, and had of (at) home in the same cultivation quo suos liberos, Jugurtham, filium in which (he had) his-own children, Jugurtha, the son of (his) fratri Manastabalis, quem Masinissa reliquerat brother Manastabal, whom Masinissa had left privatum, quòd ortus-erat ex concubinâ. Qui private, because he had sprung from a concubine. Who ubi primùm adolevit, pollens viribus, when first he grew-up, prevailing in forces (bodily strength), decorâ facie, sed multò maxumè validus with beautiful appearance, but by-much most strong ingenio, non dedit se corrumpendum luxu in understanding, he gave-not himself to-be-corrupted to luxury, (luxui), neque inertiæ. Sed, uti mos illius nor to indolence. But, as the custom of that gentis est, equitare, jaculari, certare cum nation is, to ride, to cast-the-javelin, to contend with (his) æqualibus cursu: et cùm anteiret equals in the course: and when (though) he might excel (did excel) omnes gloriâ, tamen esse carus omnibus: ad all in glory, yet (he began) to be dear to all: to hoc agere pleraque tempora in this (besides) to spend [he spent] most [of his] times in venando, primus, aut in primis, ferire hunting, [was] the first, or among the first, to strike leonem atque alias feras, ipse facere the lion and other wild-beasts, himself to do [did] plurimùm, et loqui minumùm de se. Quibus the most, and to say [said] the least of himself. By which rebus, tametsi Micipsa fuerat latus initio, things, although Micipsa had been joyful in the beginning, existumans virtutem Jugurthæ fore gloriæ thinking the virtue of Jugurtha to be about-to-be for glory suo regno, tamen postquam intelligit to his kingdom, yet after he understands adolescentem hominem crescere magis que magis, the young man to increase more and more, suâ ætate exactâ, et liberis parvis, his-own age being spent out, and (his) children small, vehementer permotus eo negotio, volvebat multa exceedingly affected by that business, he did revolve many cum suo animo. Natura mortalium, avida (things) with his-own mind. The nature of mortals, covetous imperii, et præceps ad cupidinem animi of command, and precipitate to the desire of the mind explendam, terrebant, to-be-satiated, [and precipitate in gratifying their desires], did affright eum; præterea, opportunitas suæ ætatis que him; moreover, the opportunity of his-own age and (that) liberorum, quæ agit etiam mediocres viros of his children, which acts (drives) even moderate men transvorsos; ad hoc studia oblique (in a wrong direction); to this (besides) the zeals (affections) Numidarum accensa in Jugurtham, ex of the Numidians kindled towards Jugurtha (did alarm him), from quibus erat anxius, ne qua seditio aut whom he was anxious (apprehensive), lest any sedition or bellum oriretur, si interfecisset talem virum war might arise, if he might have killed such a man dolis. Circumventus his difficultatibus, ubi by stratagems. Beset by these difficulties, when videt hominem tam acceptam popularibus he sees a man so accepted (dear) to (his) countrymen posse opprimi neque per vim, neque insidiis, to be-able to be destroyed neither by force, nor by snares, statuit objectare eum periculis, et tentare he determined to expose him to dangers, and to try fortunam eo modo, quod Jugurtha erat promptus fortune in that manner, because Jugurtha was ready manu, et appetens militaris gloriæ. Igitur in hand (action), and desiring of military glory. Therefore Numantino bello, Micipsa, cum mitteret in the Numantine war, Micipsa, when he might send (did send) auxilia equitum (pl.) atque peditum (pl.) Romano auxiliaries of cavalry and of infantry to the Roman populo, praefecit Numidis, quos mittebat in people, appointed (him) to the Numidians, whom he did send into Hispaniam, sperans eum facilè occasurum Spain, hoping him easily about-to-fall [that he would vel ostentando virtutem, vel saevitiâ fall] either in displaying (his) valour, or by the cruelty hostium; sed ea res evenit aliter ac of the enemies; but that thing happened otherwise and (than) ratus-erat. Nam Jugurtha, ut erat impigro he had imagined. For Jugurtha, as he was with (of) an active atque acri ingenio, ubi cognovit naturam Publil and sharp disposition, when he knew the nature of Publius Scipionis, qui erat tum imperator Romanis, et Scipio, who was then general to the Romans, and morem hostium, pervenerat. brevi the manner of the enemies, had come shortly [he soon came] in tantam claritudinem, multo labore, que multâ into so-great renown, by much labour, and by much curâ, præterea, parendo modestissimè, et eundo care, moreover, by obeying most-modestly, and by going ssepe obviām periculis, uti esset often toward to dangers, [to meet danger], that he might be (was) vehementer carus nostris, maxumo exceedingly dear to our (men), to the greatest [and the greatest] terrori Numantinis. Ac sanè erat et terror to the Numantines. And indeed he was and (both) strenuus prælio et bonus consilio, quod est in-primis vigorous in battle and good in counsel, which is peculiarly difficillum; alterum quorum solet plerūmque most-difficult; the one of which is-accustomed generally adferre timorem ex providentiâ, alterum temeritatem to produce fear from foresight, the other rashness ex audaciâ. Igitur imperator agere ferè from boldness. Therefore the general (began) to-do almost omnis (omnes) asperas res per Jugurtham, all rough [perilous] things through Jugurtha, habere in amicis, amplecti eum magis to have (him) among (his) friends, to embrace him more que magis in-dies, quippe and more daily, [to become daily more attached to him], inasmuch cujus consilium neque ullum as whose counsel neither any [as by his counsel no] incepsum erat frustrâ. Huc accedebat undertaking was in-vain. Hither did approach (was added) munificentia animi et solertia ingenii, quibus a munificence of mind and cleverness of understanding, by which rebus conjunxerat multos ex Romanis sibi things he had united many out-of the Romans to him familiari amicitiâ. Èa tempestate fuere in nostro in familiar friendship. In that time there were in our exercitu complures novi atque nobiles, army very-many new (obscure) and noble (men), quibus divitiæ erant potiores bono to whom riches were better (more desirable) (than) good que honesto; factiosi, potentes domi, magis and honourable (conduct); factious, powerful of (at) home, more clari quam honesti apud socios; qui conspicuous than honourable among the allies; who accendebant non-mediocrem animum Jugurthæ did inflame the immoderate mind of Jugurtha pollicitando, si rex Micipsa accidisset by promising (frequently), if king Micipsa might have fallen (were fore uti solus potiretur dead) to be about-to-be that (he) alone might enjoy imperio (abl.) Numidiæ, the empire [he alone might obtain his kingdom] of Numidia, [that] maxumam virtutem esse in ipso, omnia the greatest valour to be [was] in himself, [that] all (things to venalia Romæ. Sed postquam, Numantiâ be) [were] saleable of (at) Rome. But after, Numantia deletâ, Publius Scipio decrevit dimittere being destroyed, Publius Scipio resolved to dismiss auxilia, ipse reverti domum, adduxit in the auxiliaries, himself to return home, he led into Prætorium Jugurtham, donatum atque laudatum the Prætorian-tent Jugurtha, having been gifted and praised magnificè pro concione; que ibi secretè monuit magnificently before the assembly; and [there] secretly advised uti coleret amicitiam Romani populi (him) that he should cultivate the friendship of the Roman people potius publicè quâm privatim; neu insuesceret rather publicly than privately; nor should he accustom largiri quibus; quod esset (himself) to bribe to any; [for] (that) which might-be [is] (the multorum emi periculosè à paucis. property) of many to be bought [is bought] dangerously from a few.

 Si vellet permanere in suis artibus, If he might will to continue in his-own arts, [if he continued et gloriam et to cultivate the abilities he possessed], and (both) glory and regnum venturum ultrò illi: kingdom (to be) about-to-come [would come] spontaneously to him: sin pergeret properantiùs, ipsum but-if he should proceed more (too) hastily, himself (to be) casurum præcipitem suâmet pecuniâ. about-to-fall [that he would fall] headlong by his-own money

Sic locutus, dimisit eum cum literis, quas Thus having spoken, he dismissed him with letters (a letter), which redderet Micipsa. Sententia earum erat haec: he might deliver to Micipsa. The purport of these (it) was this: virtus tui Jugurthæ Numantino bello fuit the valour of thy Jugurtha in the Numantine war has been longè maxima; quam rem certè-scio esse gaudio by far the greatest; which thing I certainly know to be for joy tibi. Est carus nobis ob sua merita:
 to thee. He is dear to us on-account-of his deserts: nitemur summâ ope, ut sit idem we will endeavour with the highest might, that he may be the same senatui que Romano populo. Quidem gratulor to the senate and to the Roman people. Indeed I congratulate tibi pro nostrâ amicitiâ. En habes virum to thee for (in regard to) our friendship. Lo thou hast a man dignum te (abl.), atque suo avo Masinissâ. worthy thee, and his-own grandsire Masinissa.
 Igitur ubi rex cognovit ea, quæ Therefore when the king knew those (things), which acceperat famâ, esse ita ex literis he had received by report, to be so from the letters (letter) imperatoris, permotus cùm virtute tum gratiâ of the general, affected as-well by the valour as by the favour viri, flexit suum animum, et aggressus-est of the man, he bent (changed) his mind, and essayed vincere Jugurtham beneficiis, que statim to overcome Jugurtha by favours, and immediately adoptavit eum et instituit hæredem pariter cum adopted him, and appointed (him) heir equally with filiis testamento. Sed ipse confectus (his) sons by a will. But he being finished (spent), post paucos annos, morbo, atque ætate, cùm after a few years, by disease, and by age, when intelligeret finem vitæ adesse sibi, he might perceive (did perceive) the end of life to be-present to him, dicitur habuisse verba hujuscemodi cum [to be near], is said to have had words of this-kind with Jugurthâ, coram amicis, et cognatis, que item Jugurtha, in-presence-of friends, and relations, and also (his) filii Atherbale et Hiempsale: sons Adherbal and Hiempson:

“Jugurtha, ego accepi te parvum, patre “Jugurtha, I received thee little, (thy) father amisso, sine spe, sine opibus in having been lost [being dead], without hope, without resources into meum regnum, existumans me non fore minus my kingdom, thinking me not to-be-about-to-be less carum tibi ob beneficia, [that I would be no less] dear to thee on-account-of (my) kindnesses, quam si genuisse: neque ea than if I might have (had) begotten (thee): neither that res habuit me falsam. Nam thing has had me deceived. [Nor have I been deceived.] For ut omittam tua alia magna et egregia, novissume that I may omit thy other great and excellent (acts), very-lately rediens Numantiâ, honoravisti que me que meum returning from Numantia, thou hast honoured both me and my regnum gloriâ; que fecisti Romanos ex kingdom by (thy) glory; and thou hast made the Romans from amicis amicissimos nobis tuâ virtute: nomen friends most-friendly to us by thy valour: the name of (our) familiae renovatum-est in Hispaniâ: postremo, family has been renewed in Spain: finally, vicisti invidiam gloriâ, quod est thou hast conquered envy by glory, (a thing) which is difficillum inter mortalis (mortales). Nunc quoniam most-difficult among mortals. Now since natura facit finem vitæ mihi, moneo que obtestor nature makes an end of life to me, I advise and conjure (thee) per hanc dextram, per fidem regni, uti by this right (hand), by the faith of a kingdom, that habeas hos caros, qui propinqui tibi genere, thou mayest have those dear, who relations to thee by kindred, sunt fratres meo beneficio; neu malis adjungere are brothers by my kindness; nor thou mayest prefer to attach alienos quam retinere conjunctos sanguine (to thee) strangers than to retain (those) united by blood.

 Non exercitus, neque thesauri sunt praesidia regni, [Not] an army, nor treasures are the defences of a kingdom, verum amici: pariuntur officio et fide, but friends: they are procured by office (service) and by faith, quos queas neque cogere armis, neque whom thou mayest be-able neither to compel by arms, nor parare auro. Autem quis amicior fratri to procure by gold. But who (should be) more-friendly to a brother quam frater? aut quem alienum invenies fidem, than a brother? or what stranger wilt thou find faithful, si fueris hostis tuis?
 if thou mayest have been (hast been) an enemy to thy-own (relations)?
 Equidem ego trado regnum firmum vobis, si eritis Indeed I deliver the kingdom strong to you, if you will be beni, imbecillum si mali. Nam parvae res good, (but) weak if bad. For small things crescunt concordia, maxumæ dilabuntur discordia. increase by concord, the greatest glide-away by discord.
 Cæterum, Jugurtha, decet te ante hos, quia But, Jugurtha, it becomes thee before these, because es prior ætate et sapientia, providere ne thou art superior in age and wisdom, to provide lest quid eveniat aliter: nam in omni any (thing) may happen otherwise [than I wish]: for in every certamine, qui est opulentior, etiamsi accipit contest, (he) who is more-opulent, although he receives injuriam, tamen videtur facere quia plus-potest. an injury, yet seems to do (it) because he is-more-powerful.
 Autem vos, Atherbal et Hiempsal, colite, observe But you, Adherbal and Hiempsal, reverence, [and] regard hunc talen virum; imitamini virtutem, et enitimini this uch a man; imitate (his) valour, and endeavour ego ne-videar sumpsisse quam genuisse (that) I may not-seem (rather) to have adopted than to have begotten meliores liberos." better children."

Ad ea, Jugurtha, tametsi intelligebat regem To these (words), Jugurtha, although he did perceive the king locutum-(esse) facta, et ipse agitabat longè to have spoken feigned (words), and he did revolve far aliter animo, tamen respondit benignè pro otherwise in mind, yet answered kindly according to tempore. Micipsa moritur paucis diebus post. the time. Micipsa dies a few days after.
 Postquam illi fecerant justa magnificè regio After they had made the obsequies magnificently in a royal more, reguli convenerunt in unum, manner, the petty-princes assembled in one (place), ut disceptarent inter se de cunctis rebus.
 that they might debate among themselves about all matters.
 Sed Hiempsal, qui erat minimus ex illis, But Hiempsal, who was the least [the youngest] of them, ferox naturâ, despiciens etiam antea ignobilitatem fierce by nature, despising even before the mean-descent Jugurthæ, quia erat impar materno genere, adsedit of Jugurtha, because he was unequal by maternal kindred, sat beside Atherbalem dexterâ, ne Jugurtha foret medius Adherbal on the right, lest Jugurtha might be [in the] middle ex tribus, quod ducitur honori, et apud of the three, which is led (esteemed) for honour, and (also) among Numidas. Dein, tamen, fatigatus à the Numidians. Afterwards, however, having been importuned by (his) fratre, ut concederet ætati, vix transductus-est brother, that he might yield to age, scarcely was brought-over in alteram partem. Ibi, cum dissererent to the other part (side). There, when they might (did) discuss multa de imperio administrando, Jugurtha many (things) about the government to-be-administered, Jugurtha jacit inter alias res oportere omnia throws-out among other things to behove (that it was fit) all consulta et decreta quinquennii rescindi, nam the decisions and decrees of (the last) five years to be rescinded, for Micipsa confectum annis per ea tempora, Micipsa worn-out with years during those times, valuisse parum animo. Tum Hiempson to have availed little in mind. [Was weak in mind.] Then Hiempson respondit idem placere sibi: nam answered [that] the same to please to him [pleased him]: for illum-ipsum pervenisse adoptione [that he] himself (Jugurtha) to have come [had come] by adoption in regnum his tribus proxumis annis. into the kingdom in these three next (latest) years.

Quod verbum descendit altius in pectus Jugurthae Which word descended more-deeply into the breast of Jugurtha quam quisquam ratus-(erat). Itaque anxius ira et than any-one had supposed. Therefore restless by anger and metu ex eo tempore, moliri, parare, by fear from that time, (he began) to contrive, to prepare, atque habere ea modò in animo, quibus and to have those (things) only in mind, by which Hiempson caperetur per dolum. Quae uti Hiempson might be taken through stratagem. Which as procedunt tardius, neque ferox animus they advance more (too) slowly, neither (his) fierce mind lenitur, statuit perficere inceptum quovis is soothed, he determined to accomplish (his) undertaking by any modo. Placuerat primo conventu, quem manner. It had pleased (them) in the first assembly, which memoravi supra, factum-(esse) ab regulis, I have related above, to have been made, by the petty-princes, [that] thesauros dividi propter dissensiothe treasures to be divided [should be divided] on-account-of disagreement, nem, que finis (fines) imperii constituiment, and the boundaries of government to be assigned [should singulis. Itaque tempus decernitur ad be assigned] to each. Therefore a time is decreed to (for) utramque rem, sed maturius ad pecuniam distri-each thing, but sooner to the money to-be-disbuendam. tributed. [But that the money should be first distributed.] Reguli concessere interea in loca propinqua The petty-princes departed mean-time into the places near thesauris, alias aliò (alias aliò). Sed Hiempsal to the treasures, one one way (another the other-way). But Hiempsal fortè utebatur, in oppido, Thirmidâ, domo ejus, by-chance did use, in the town, Thirmida, the house of him, qui fuerat proximus lictor Jugurthæ, semper who had been the nearest (chief) lictor of Jugurtha, always carus que acceptus ei: quem ministrum dear and received (agreeable) to him: which servant oblatum casu, ille onerat promissis, que impellit, presented by chance, he loads with promises, and impels (him), utì eat tanquam visens suam domum: paret that he may go as-if visiting his house: may procure adulterinas claves portarum, nam veræ refere- false keys of the gates, for the true (keys) were car- bantur ad Hiempsales: cæterùm seipsum venturum ried back to Hiempsal: but himself about-to-come cum magnâ manu, ubi res postularet. with a great band, when the thing might require. [But that he

Numida himself would come with a great force, at the proper time.] The Numidian conficit mandata brevi; atque introducit milites finishes (his) commands shortly; and leads-in the soldiers Jugurthæ noctu, utì doctus-erat. Qui postquam of Jugurtha by-night, as he had been instructed. Who after that irrupere in ædes diversi they burst-in into the houses (house) different (here and there) (began) quærere regem, interficere alios dormientis to seek the king, to kill others (some) sleeping, (dormientes), alios occursantis (occursantes); others meeting (them); scrutari abdita loca; effringere clausa: miscere to search the hidden places; to break-open closed (places): to mingle omnia strepitu et tumultu: cùm interim all (things), with noise and tumult: when mean-time Hiempsal reperitur occultans se tugurio ancillæ Hiempsal is found concealing himself in the hut of a servant mulieris, quò profugerat initio pavidus et woman, whither he had fled in the beginning fearful and ignarus loci. Numidæ referunt caput ejus, ignorant of the place. The Numidians carry-back the head of him, uti jussi-erat, ad Jugurtham. Cæterùm fama as they had been ordered, to Jugurtha. But the report tanti facinoris divulgatur brevì per omnem Africam: of so-great a crime is divulged shortly through all Africa: metus invadit Atherbalem, que omnis (omnes), qui fear . seizes Adherbal, and all, who fuerant sub imperio Micippsæ. Numidæ discedunt had been under the government of Micipsa. The Numidians depart in duas partes: plures sequuntur Atherbalem, (divide) into two factions: the more follow Adherbal, sed meliores bello illum alterum. Igitur but the better in war that other [Jugurtha]. Therefore Jugurtha armat copias quam maximas potest: Jugurtha arms forces as greatest he can [collects adjungit urbis (urbes) partim vi alias a great force]: unites cities partly by force, others voluntate suo imperio; parat imperare omni by inclination to his government; prepares to rule all [over all] Numidæ. Atherbal, tametsi miserat legatos Numidia. Adherbal, although he had sent ambassadors (to) Romam, qui docerent senatum de cæde fratrīs, Rome, who might inform the senate of the murder of (his) brother, et suis fortunis; tamen fretus multitudine militum, and his-own fortunes; yet relying on the multitude of soldiers, parabat contendere armis. Sed ubi res venit ad did prepare to contend with arms. But when the thing came to certamen, victus profugit ex prælio in a contest, being conquered he fled from battle into the [Roman] provinciam, ac contendit dehinc Romam. Tum province, and hastens thence (to) Rome. Then Jugurtha, consiliis patratis, postquam potiebatur Jugurtha, (his) designs being accomplished, after that he did possess omni Numidiā (abl.), reputans cum animo in otio all Numidia, revolving with (his) mind in leisure suum facinus, timere Romanum populum, neque his crime, (began) to fear the Roman people, neither habere spem usquam advorsùs iram ejus, to have hope any-where against the wrath of it (them), nisi in avaritiâ nobilitatis, et suâ pecuniâ. unless in the avarice of the nobility, and in his-own money.

Itaque paucis diebus, mittit legatos Romam cum Therefore in a few days, he sends ambassadors (to) Rome with multo auro que argento, quîs præcipit uti primùm much gold and silver, to whom he instructs that first expleant veteres amicos muneribus, dein anquirant they may satisfy (his) old friends with presents, then may acquire novos: postremò ne-cunctentur parare largiundo new: finally they may not-hesitate to procure by bribing quemcumque possint. Sed ubi legati venere whomsoever they may be-able. But when the ambassadors came Romam, et misere ex præcepto regis, (to) Rome, and sent according-to the instruction of the king, magna munera hospitibus que aliis, auctoritas great presents to (his) hosts and to others, the authority quorum pollebat in senatu eâ tempestate: of whom was powerful in the senate at that time: tanta commutatio incessit ut Jugurtha so-great a change seized (them) that Jugurtha might (did) veniret ex maxumâ invidiâ in gratiam et come from the greatest envy (odium) into the interest and favorem nobilitatis. Pars quorum inducti spe, alii favour of the nobility. Part of whom induced by hope, others præmio, nitebantur ambiundo singulos by reward, did endeavour by going-about (canvassing) single (members) ex senatu, ne-consuleretur gravius of the senate, (that) it might not-be-consulted more (too) severely in eum.

against him. [That too severe measures might not be adopted against Igitur, ubi legati satis-confidunt, him.] Therefore, when the ambassadors are sufficiently-confident, senatus datur utrisque constituto die. Tum the senate (a hearing) is given to each on an appointed day. Then accepimus Atherbalem locutum-(esse) hoc modo: we have heard Adherbal to have spoken in this manner:

"Conscripti patres! meus pater Micipsa moriens "Conscript fathers! my father Micipsa dying præcepit mihi, uti existumarem tantummodo procurainstructed to me, that I should think only. the guardiantionem regni Numidæ meam; cæterum jus et ship of the kingdom of Numidia mine; but the right and imperium esse penè vos: simul enigovernment to be in-the-power-of you: at-the-same-time I should enterer esse maxumo usui Romano populo domi deavour to be for greatest use to the Roman people at-home que militiæ. Ducerem vos in locum and of war (abroad). I should lead (regard) you in the place cognatorum mihi, vos affinium: si of relations to me, you of neighbours [and as neighbours]: if fecisset ea, me habiturum I might have done (had done) those (things), me about-to-have [that I exercitum, divitias, munimenta regni would have] an army, riches, fortifications of the kingdom in vestrâ amicitiâ. Quæ præcepta mei patris in your friendship. Which precepts of my father cùm agitarem, Jugurtha, sceleratissimus when I might (did) revolve, Jugurtha, the most-wicked homo omnium, quos terra sustinet, vestro imperio man of all, whom the earth sustains, your command contempto, expulit me nepotem Masinissæ, etiam being despised, has expelled me the grandson of Masinissa, even ab stirpe socium atque amicum Romani from stem (earliest origin) an ally and friend of the Roman populi, regno que omnibus fortunis. Atque people, from my kingdom and all fortunes. And ego, conscripti patres, quoniam eram venturus I, conscript fathers, since I was about-to-come eò miseriarum, vellem me posse to that (pitch) of miseries, should will me to be-able [could have petere auxilium à vobis potius wished, that I were able] to seek aid from you rather ob mea, quam ob beneficia on-account-of my-own [services], than on-account-of the kindnesses meorum majorum; ac maxumè, beneficia of my ancestors; and chiefly, [that] kindnesses [favours] deberi mihi a Romano populo, quibus to be due [might be due] to me by the Roman people, which egerem non: secundùm ea, uti I might want not [to be requited]: next-to those, that uterer debitis, si erant desideranda. Sed I might use (them as) due, if they were to-be-wanted. But quoniam probitas ipsa est parùm tuta per se, since honesty self is little (not) safe by itself, neque fuit in manu mihi, qualis neither was it in hand (possible) to me, (to know) what-sort Jugurtha foret;

 Jugurtha might be [to determine what sort of person Jugurtha confugi ad vos, conscripti patres, quibus might be]; I have fled to you, conscript fathers, to whom cogor esse oneri priusquam usui, I am compelled to be for a burden before that for advantage quod est miserrimum mihi.
 [I have been of any use to you], which is very-wretched to me.
 Cæteri reges aut victi bello, recepti-sunt in The rest (other) kings either conquered in war, have been received into amicitiam à vobis, aut appetiverunt vestram societatem. friendship by you, or have sought your alliance in suis dubiis rebus. Nostra familia instituit in their doubtful affairs. Our family instituted amicitiam cum Romano populo Carthaginiensi bello, friendship with the Roman people in the Carthaginian war, quo tempore fides ejus erat magis petenda in which time the faith (honour) of it was more to-be-sought quam fortuna. Conscripti patres! nolite than the fortune [the advantage]. Conscript fathers! be-unwilling pati me progeniem quorum nepotem Masinissæ to suffer me the offspring of whom the grandson of Masinissa petere auxilium à vobis frustrà. Si haberem to seek aid from you in-vain. If I might have (had) nihil causæ ad-impetrandum, præter miserandam nothing of cause to-obtain (it), except (my) miserable fortunam; quòd paulò antè rex potens genere, fortune; that a little before a king powerful in race, famâ, atque copiis, nunc deformatus ærumnis, in fame, and in resources, now deformed by woes, inops exspecto alienas opes: tamen destitute I look to foreign (others) resources: yet erat majestatis Romani populi prohibere it was (the part) of the majesty of the Roman people to prohibit injuriam: neque pati regnum cuiusquam injury: neither to suffer the kingdom of any-one crescere per scelus. Verùm ejectus-sum to increase by wickedness. But I have been cast-out iis finibus, quos Romanus populus dedit meis from those boundaries, which the Roman people gave to my majoribus: unde pater, et meus avus unà ancestors: whence (my) father, and my grandfather together vobiscum expulere Syphacem et Carthaginenses. with-you expelled Syphax and the Carthaginians.

 Conscripti patres! vestra beneficia erepta-sunt Conscript fathers! your kindnesses have been torn-from mihi, vos despecti-estis in meâ injuriâ. Eheu to me, ye have been despised in my injury. Alas miserum me! pater Micipsa, tua beneficia wretched me! (whether), father Micipsa, thy favours evasere huccine, utì is, quem tu fecisti have come bither (to this), that he, whom thou hast made parem cum tuis liberis, que participem regni, equal with thy-own children, and a partner of the kingdom, sit potissimum extinctor tuæ stirpis? Ne may be chiefly the destroyer of thy stem (race)? Whether ergo nostra familia erit nunquam quieta? therefore our family shall be never tranquil?
 Ne versabimur semper in sanguine, ferro Whether shall we be engaged always in blood, in iron fuga? Dum Carthaginenses fuere incolumes, (sword), in flight? Whilst the Carthaginians were safe, patiebamur omnia sæva jure. Hostis ab we did suffer all cruel (things) by right. An enemy from (our) latere: vos amici procul:

 side: [an enemy pressing hard on us]: you friends at-a-distance: omnis spes erat in armis. Postquam illa pestis all hope was in arms. After that plague ejecta-est ex Africâ, læti agitabamus pacem, was-cast-out out-of Africa, joyful we did agitate (enjoy) peace, quippe quîs erat nullus hostis, nisi fortè forsooth to whom there was no enemy, unless by chance quem jussissetis. Autem whom you might have ordered [us to consider as such]. But ecce! Jugurtha ex-improviso, efferens sese intolerandâ lo! Jugurtha suddenly, exalting himself with intolerable audaciâ, scelere, atque superbiâ, meo fratre, atque boldness, wickedness, and pride, my brother, and eodem suo propinquo interfecto, primùm fecit the same his-own relation being killed, first made regnum ejus prædam sui sceleris: post, ubi the kingdom of him the plunder of his wickedness: after, when nequit capere me iisdem dolis, exspectantem he is-unable to take me by the same stratagems, expecting nihil minus, quâm vim aut bellum, efficit in nothing less, than violence or war, he makes (me) in vestro imperio, sicut videtis, extorrem patriâ, your government, as you see, an exile from (my) country, domo, inopem et coopertum miseriis, ut from home, destitute and covered with miseries, (so) that essem tutiùs ubivis quâm in meo regno. Ego I might be safer any-where than in my kingdom. I existumabam sic, conscripti patres, uti audiveram did think thus, conscript fathers, as I had heard meum patrem prædicantem, eos, qui colerent my father declaring, those, who might cultivate diligenter vestram amicitiam, suscipere multum diligently your friendship, to-undertake much laborem, cæterùm esse maxumè tutos ex omnibus. labour, but to be most safe of all.
 Quod fuit in nostrâ familiâ, What has been in (in the power of) our family, præstitit, ut adesset vobis it has performed, that it might be present (was present) to you in omnibus bellis: conscripti patres, est vestrâ in all wars: conscript fathers, it is in your manu uti nos simus tuti per otium. hand (power) that we may be safe through leisure (in time of Pater reliquit nos duos fratres: peace). (My) father left us two brothers: ratus-est Jugurtham fore be supposed [that] Jugurtha to be about-to-be [would be] conjunctum tertium nobis suis beneficiis. Alter allied (as) a third to us by his favours. Another eorum necatus (est); ego (one) of them has been killed; [my brother was killed]; I ipse alter vix effugi impias manus. myself the other scarcely have escaped his impious hands.

 Quid agam? aut quò potissumùm infelix What shall I do? or whither chiefly unhappy accedam? Omnia præsidia generis shall I go-to? All the protections of (my) race extincta-sunt: pater concessit naturæ, uti have been extinguished: (my) father yielded to nature, as erat necesse; propinquus, quem minumè decuit, was necessary; a relation, whom by-no-means it became, eripuit vitam fratri per scelus: alia snatched life to (from my) brother by wickedness: another (one) clades oppressit alium: affines, amicos, calamity oppressed another (one): (my) kinsmen, friends, meos cæteros propinquos, capti ab Jugurthâ, my other relations, (those) taken by Jugurtha, pars acti-sunt in crucem pars objecti part have been driven (affixed) to a cross part exposed bestiis: pauci, quibus anima relicta-est, to beasts: few, to whom soul (existence) has been left, clausi in tenebris, exigunt vitam graviorem shut-up in darknesses, spend life more-severe (than) morte cum moerore et luctu. Si omnia, quæ death with sorrow and grief. If all (things), which aut amisi, aut facta-sunt advorsa ex necessariis either I have lost, or have been made adverse from necessary manerent incolumia; tamen si quid (friendly) might remain safe; yet if any (thing) mali accidisset, ex-improviso, of evil might have happened (had happened) suddenly, implorarem vos, conscripti patres, quibus decet, I would implore you, conscript fathers, to whom it becomes, jus et omnis (omnes) injurias esse right and (that) all injuries to be [should be] curæ, pro magnitudine imperii. for care, [cared for], for (considering) the greatness of (your) empire.

 Verò nunc exul patriâ, domo, solus But now an exile from (my) country, from home, alone atque egens omnium honestarum rerum, quos and needing of all honourable things, whom accedam, aut quos appelle? ne nationes may I go-to, or whom may I address? whether (those) nations an reges, omnes qui sunt infesti nostræ familie or kings, all who are hostile to our family ob vestram amicitiam? an licet mihi adire on-account-of your friendship? or is-it-lawful for me to go quoquam, ubi sint non plurima hostilia any-where, where there may-be not very-many hostile monumenta meorum majorum? an potest quisquam, monuments of my ancestors? or can any-one, qui aliquando fuit hostis vobis who sometime [at any time] has been an enemy to you misereri nostri? Postremò, Masinissa ita to pity of us? [pity us]? Finally, Masinissa so instituit nos, conscripti patres, ne-coleremus instructed us, [conscript fathers], (that) we should not-cultivate quem, ne-acciperemus societas, [the friendship of] any one, (that) we should not-receive alliances, ne nova fœdera, nisi Romani populi: not new leagues, unless (those) of the Roman people: abundè magna præsidia fore nobis in vestrâ abundantly great protections to be about-to-be to us in your amicitiâ :

friendship: [that your friendship would be an ample protection to us]:

occidendum nobis unâ, si to-be-fallen to (by) us [that we must fall] together, if fortuna mutaretur huic imperio. Estis magna et fortune should be changed to this empire. You are great and opulenti virtute ac diis volentibus; omnia opulent by valour and the gods willing; all (things) sunt secunda et obedientia; quò licet curare are prosperous and obedient; wherefore it is lawful to take care faciliùs injurias sociorum. Vereor tantùm (redress) more-easily the injuries of allies. I fear only illud, ne privata amicitia Jugurthæ, parùm cognita, that, lest the private friendship of Jugurtha, little known, agat quos transvorsos: quos ego audio may drive any oblique (astray): whom I hear niti maxumâ ope, ambire, fatigare vos to endeavour with greatest might, to go-about, to importune you singulos, ne-statuatis quid de single (individually), (that) you may not-determine any (thing) of (him) absente, causâ incognitâ: me, absent, (his) cause being unknown (unheard): [that] me, [I], cui licuerit manere in to whom it may have been lawful [it was permitted] to remain in (my) regno fingere verba, et simulare fugam. kingdom to feign words, and to pretend flight. [Made a feigned Quòd utinam videam illum, statement and pretended flight]. But O-that I may see him, impio facinore cujus projectus-sum in has by the impious crime of whom I have been cast into these miserias, simulantem hæc eadem: et miseries, pretending these same (things): and (that) aliquando cura humanarum rerum oriatur aut apud some-time a cure of human things may arise either with vos aut apud immortalis (immortales) deos; ut ille, you or with the immortal gods; that he,

qui est nunc ferox atque præclarus suis sceleribus, who is now fierce and conspicuous by [his] crimes, excruciatus omnibus malis, reddet gravis (graves) pœnas tortured by all evils, will return heavy penalties impietatis in nostrum parentem, necis mei fratris, of impiety unto our parent, of [for] the murder of my brother, que mearum miseriaram. Jam, jam, frater carissime and of [for] my miseries. Now, now, brother most-dear meo animo, quamquam vita erepta-est tibi, to my mind, although life has been torn to (from) thee, immaturo, et unde minime-decuit; immature [while quite young], and whence (by whom) it-least-became; tamen puto tuum casum magis lætandum quam yet I think thy lot more to-be-rejoiced-at than dolendum. Nam amisisti non simul cum anima to-be-grieved-at. For thou hast lost not together with life regnum, sed fugam, exilium, egestatem et omnis a kingdom, but flight, exile, want and all (omnes) has ærumnas, quæ premunt me: At ego these woes, which oppress me: But I infelix, præcipitatus in tanta mala, pulsus ex unhappy, precipitated into so-great evils, driven out-of (my) patrio regno, præbeo spectaculum humanarum rerum; native kingdom, afford a spectacle of human things; incertus quid agam, ne ipse egens uncertain what I may do, whether myself wanting (destitute) auxilii, persecuar tuas injurias, an potestas of aid, shall prosecute thy wrongs, or (whether I) the power cuius vitæ que necis pendet ex alienis opibus, of whose life and death depends of (on) foreign (others') resources consulam regno.

 [depends on the aid of others], may consult (provide) for the kingdom.

Utinam! emori

[May provide for the welfare of the kingdom.] O-that! to die esset honestus exitus meis fortunis, ne-viderer might be an honourable issue to my fortunes, (that) I might not-seem vivere contemptus, si defessus malis, concessissem to live despised, if wearied by evils, I might have yielded injuriæ. Nunc quoniam neque lubet (had yielded) to injury. Now since neither it pleases (me) vivere, neque licet mori sine dedecore, conscripti to live, nor is it lawful to die without disgrace, conscript patres, per vos, per liberos atque vestros parentes fathers, by you, by (your) children and your parents, per majestatem Romani populi, subvenite mihi by the majesty of the Roman people, aid to me [me] misero; ite obviām injuriā; nolite pati wretched; go toward (oppose) to injury; be-unwilling to suffer regnum Numidiā, quod est vestrum, tabescere per the kingdom of Numidia, which is your-own, to waste-away by scelus et sanguinem nostrāe familīe." wickedness and the blood of our family."

Postquam rex fecit finem loquendi, legati After that the king made an end of speaking, the ambassadors Jugurthæ, freti magis largitione quam causâ, of Jugurtha, relying more on bribery than (their) cause, respondent paucis: Hiempusalem answer in few (words): Hiempsal (to have been) interfectum ab Numidis, ob suam sævitiam; killed by the Numidians, on account of his cruelty; Atherbalem inferentem bellum ultro queri [that] Adherbal bringing on war spontaneously to complain postquam superatus-sit [complained] after that he may have been conquered (was conquered) quod nequisset facere injuriam: because he might have been unable (had been unable) to do injury:

Jugurtham petere ab senatu [that] Jugurtha to seek [sought] from the senate (that) ne-putaret se alium ac cognitus-esset it might not-think himself other than he might have been known Numantiae, neu poneret verba (had been known) at Numantia, nor might place the words inimici ante sua facta. Deinde utrius egrediuntur of an enemy before his deeds. Afterwards both go-out curiâ: senatus statim consultitur: fautores from the senate-house: the senate immediately is consulted: the favourers legatorum, præterea magna pars depravata gratiâ, of the ambassadors, besides a great part corrupted by favour nitebantur contemnere dicta Atherbalis, (interest), did endeavour to despise the sayings of Adherbal, extollere virtutem Jugurthæ laudibus, gratiâ, voce, to extol the virtue of Jugurtha by praises, by favour, by voice, denique omnibus modis pro alieno scelere et finally by all means for foreign (another's) wickedness and flagitio, villany [they exerted themselves to defend the wickedness and villany quasi pro suâ gloriâ. At contra of another], as-if for their-own glory. But on-the-other-hand pauci, quibus bonum et æquum erat carius a few, to whom good and just was dearer (than) divitiis, censebant subveniendum Atherbalis, riches, did think to-be-relieved to Adherbal (Adherbal et mortem Hiempsalis severè should be relieved) and the death of Hiempsal severely vindicandam. Sed ex omnibus maxumè Æmilius to-be-avenged. But out-of all chiefly Æmilius Scaurus, nobilis homo, impiger, factiosus, avidus Scaurus, a noble man, active, factious, greedy potentiae, honoris, divitiarum, cæterùm callidè of power, of honour, of riches, but cunningly occultans sua vitia. Postquam is videt famosam concealing his vices. After that he sees the infamous que impudentem largitionem regis, veritus and shameless bribery of the king, having feared quod solet in tali re, ne polluta licentia what is-usual in such a thing, lest the polluted licentiousness accenderet invidiam, continuuit might inflame envy [might excite odium], he restrained (his) animum à consuetâ lubidine. Tamen illa pars, mind from [his] wonted passion. However that part quæ anteferebant pretium aut gratiam vero, [party], which did prefer reward or favour to truth, vicit in senatu. Decretum fit, uti decem conquered in the senate. A decree is made, that ten legati dividerent regnum quod Micipsa obtinuerat, ambassadors should divide the kingdom, which Micipsa had obtained, inter Jugurtham et Atherbalem. Cujus legationis, between Jugurtha and Adherbal. Of which embassy, Lucius Opimius, clarus homo, et tum potens in Lucius Opimius, an illustrious man, and then powerful in senatu, fuit princeps; quia consul, Caio Graccho the senate, was chief; because (as) consul, Caius Gracchus et Marco Fulvio interfectis, exercuerat accerrumè and Marcus Fulvius being killed, he had exercised very-sharply vindictam nobilitatis in plebem. Jugurtha, the revenge of the nobility against the common-people. Jugurtha, tametsi habuerat eum in amicis Romæ, tamen although he had had him among friends at Rome, yet recepit curatissumè; perfecit dando received (him) most-attentively; he [Jugurtha] accomplished by giving et pollicendo multa, utlì anteferret and by promising many (things), that he might prefer [that Opimius commodum regis famæ, fide (fidei), should prefer] the convenience of the king to fame, to faith (honour), postremò omnibus suis rebus. Aggressus reliquos lastly to all his-own things. Having attacked the remaining legatos eâdem viâ, capit plerosque: ambassadors [in the same manner], he takes most: [he gains most fides fuit carior paucis, quàm pecunia. of them]: faith (honour) was dearer to few, than money. In divisione, pars Numidiæ, quæ attingit Mauritaniam, In the division, the part of Numidia, which touches Mauritania, opulentior agro que viris, traditur Jugurthæ. more-opulent in land and in men, is delivered to Jugurtha. Atherbal possedit illam alteram potiorem specie Adherbal possessed that other (part) better in appearance quàm usu, quæ erat portuosior, et magis exornata than in use, which was superior-in-harbours, and more furnished ædificiis. Res videtur postulare with buildings. The thing (subject) seems to require (me) exponere situm Africæ paucis, et attingere to explain the situation of Africa in few (words), and to touch-on eas gentis (gentes) quibuscum bellum aut amicitia those nations with which war or friendship fuit vobis. Sed loca, et nationes, item had been to us. But the places, and nations, also solitudines, quæ frequentata-sunt minùs ob deserts, which have been frequented less on-account-of calorem aut asperitatem, narraverim haud facile heat or roughness, I may have related not easily compertum, de iis;

(as) discovered, of those; [I cannot easily, or with any certainty, absolvam relate what may have been discovered respecting them]; I will despatch cætera quām-paucissumis. the rest in the fewest possible (words).

In divisione orbis terræ, plerique posuere In the division of the globe of the earth, most have placed Africam in tertiâ parte: pauci Asiam et Africa in the third part: a few (say) Asia and Europam tantummodo esse, sed Africam Europe only to be, but Africa (to be contained) in Europâ. Ea habet finis (fines) ab occidente, in Europe. It has [for] boundaries from (on) the west, fretum nostri maris et oceani: ab ortu the strait of our sea and of the ocean [Gibraltar]: from the rising solis declivem latitudinem, of the sun (on the east) a sloping latitude, [extent in breadth], quem locum incolæ appellant Catabathmon. Mare which place the inhabitants call the Catsabathmus. The sea sævum, importuosum: ager fertilis frugum, (is) rough, harbourless: the land fertile of fruits bonus pecori, infœcundus arbori: penuria aquarum good for cattle, unfruitful for tree: scarcity of waters cœlo que terrâ:
from heaven and from earth: [there is a scarcity of rain and of rivers]: genus hominum salubri corpore, velox, the race of men with (of) wholesome body, swift, patiens laborum: senectus dissolvit plerosque, enduring of labours: old-age destroys most, nisi qui interiere ferro, aut à bestiis: unless (those) who have perished by iron (sword), or by beasts:

nam morbus haud s̄æpe superat quemquam. Ad for disease not often overcomes any-one. To hoc plurima animalia malefici generis. Sed this (besides) very-many animals of a destructive kind. But dicam quām-paucissumis, qui mortales habuerint I will tell in the-fewest-possible (words), what mortals may have had Africam initio, que qui postea (inhabited) Africa in the beginning, and who afterwards accesserint, aut quo modo perm̄ may have approached (were added), or in what manner they may have mixti-sint inter se, quamquam est diversum been intermingled among themselves, although it is different ab eā famā, quae obtinet plerosque, from that report [account], which possesses most [that tamen, ut interpretatum-est nobis ex generally prevails], however, as it has been interpreted to us out-of Punicis libris, qui dicebantur regis the Punic books, which were said (to be those) of king Hiempsalis; que uti cultores ejus terræ Hiempsal; and as the tillers [inhabitants] of that land putant rem habere sese. Cæterū fides think the thing to have itself [believe]. But the faith ejus rei erit penēs auctores.

(credit) of that thing shall be in-the-power-of the authors. [But the truth of such narrations must rest with the authors thereof.] The Getulians et Libyes, asperi que inculti, quīs et ferina and the Libyans, rough and uncultivated, to whom and (both) wild caro et pabulum humi erat cibus, uti pecoribus, flesh and fodder of the ground was food, as to cattle, habuere Africam initio. Hi regebantur had (inhabited) Africa in the beginning. These were ruled neque moribus, neque lege, aut imperio cuiusquam: neither by morals, neither by law, or command of any-one:

Gætuli

vagi, palantes, habebat sedes, quas wandering, straying, they did have the seats [the places of rest], which nox coegerat. Sed postquam Hercules night had compelled (them to have). But after-that Hercules interiit in Hispaniâ, sicut Afri putant, exercitus perished in Spain, as the Africans think, the army ejus compositus ex variis gentibus, duce of him composed out-of various nations, (their) leader amissio, ac multis passim potentibus imperium being lost, and many every-where seeking command quisque sibi, dilabitur brevi.

each for himself, glides-away shortly. [The army is soon dispersed.]

Ex eo numero Medi, Persæ, et Armenii Out-of that number the Medes, the Persians, and the Armenians transvecti navibus in Africam, occupavere locos transported in ships into Africa, occupied the places proximos nostro mari. Sed Persæ nearest to our sea [the Mediterranean]. But the Persians magis intra oceanum:

more within the ocean: [but the Persians settled near to the Atlantic que hi habuere alveos navium inversos pro ocean]: and these had the hulls of ships inverted for tuguriis: quia neque materia erat in agris, huts: because neither material was in the fields, neque copia emundi aut mutandi ab neither plenty (opportunity) of buying or of changing from Hispanis. Magnum mare et ignara lingua the Spaniards. A great sea and an unknown tongue prohibebant commercia. Hi paulatim miscuere did prohibit commerces. These by-degrees mixed

Gætulos secum per connubia; et ipsi appellavere the Getulians with-them by marriages; and they called semet Numidas, quia sæpe tentantes agros themselves Numidians, because often trying the fields petiverant alia, deinde alia loca. Cæterùm they had sought other, afterwards other (different) places. But adhuc ædificia agrestium Numidarum, quæ illi as-yet the edifices of the rustic Numidians, which they vocant Mapalia, sunt oblonga, tecta incurvis call Mapalia, are oblong, covered with curved lateribus, quasi carinæ navium. Autem Libyes sides, as-if the keels of ships. But the Libyans accessere Medis et Armeniis. accedē (added themselves to) to the Medes and to the Armenians.

Nam hi agitabant propiūs Africum mare;
 For these did agitate (live) nearer the African sea; (Gætuli magis sub sole; haud procul ab (the Getulians more under the sun; not far from ardoribus) que hi habuere oppida maturè.
 (the heats) and these (the Libyans) had towns early.

Nam divisi freto ab Hispaniâ, instituerant For divided by a strait from Spain, they had resolved mutare res inter se. Libyes corrupere to exchange things among themselves. The Libyans corrupted nomen eorum paulatim, appellantes, barbarâ the name of them by-degrees, calling (them), in barbarous linguâ, Mauros, pro Medis. Sed res tongue, Moors, instead-of Medes. But the thing (state) Persarum adolevit brevè: ac postea Numidæ of the Persians increased shortly: and afterwards the Numidians nomine, digressi à parentibus propter by name, having departed from (their) parents on-account-of (their) multitudinem, possedere ea loca, quæ proxima multitude, possessed those places, which nearest Carthaginem appellatur Numidia. Deinde, utrique Carthage is called Numidia. Afterwards, each freti alteris, coegere [the parent state, and colony] relying on the others, compelled (their) finitimos armis aut metu sub suum imperium; neighbours by arms or by fear under their-own command; addidere nomen que gloriam sibi: magis hi they added name and glory to themselves: rather these qui processerant ad nostrum mare: quia [the colony] who had proceeded to our sea: because Libyes minùs bellicosi quām Gætuli: denique, the Libyans (are) less warlike than the Getulians: finally, pleraque inferior pars Africæ possessa-est ab most-of the lower part of Africa was-possessed by Numidis: omnes victi concessere in gentem the Numidians: all the conquered yielded into the nation que nomen imperantium. and name of (those) commanding. [Were incorporated among Postea Phœnices, alii gratiâ their conquerors.] Afterwards the Phenicians, others (some) for the sake multitudinis minuendæ domi, pars plebe of the multitude to-be-lessened at home, part the commonalty solicitâtâ, cupidine imperii, et alii having been solicited, from a desire of command, and others (being) avidis novarum rerum, condidere Hipponem, desirous of new things, built Hippo, Adrimetum, Leptim, que alias urbis (urbes) in Adrimetum, Leptis, and other cities on maritimâ orâ: que eæ auctæ multùm brevi, the maritime coast: and these being increased much shortly, pars fuere præsidio que aliæ decori suis part were for a protection and others for an ornament to their originibus. Nam puto melius silere de origins. For I think (it) better to be-silent concerning Carthagine, quâm dicere parum, quoniam tempus Carthage, than to say little, since the time monet properare aliò. Igitur Cyræne est prima, advises to hasten elsewhere. Therefore Cyræne is the first colonia Theræon, secundo mari, ad (city), a colony of the Theræi, in favourable (along the) sea, at Catabathmon, qui locus dividit Ægyptum ab (near) the Catabathmus, which place divides Egypt from Africâ, ac deinceps duæ Syrtes, que Leptis Africa, and afterwards the two Syrtes (quicksands), and Leptis inter eas: deinde aræ Philenon, quem locum between them: then [the] altars of the Phileni, which place versus Ægyptum Carthaginenses habuere finem toward Egypt the Carthaginians had (as) the boundary imperii: post, aliæ Punicæ urbes. Numidæ of (their) government: after, other Punic cities. The Numidians tenant cætera loca usque ad Mauritaniam. Mauri hold the other places until to Mauritania. The Moors sunt proximè Hispaniam. Accepimus are nearest (to) Spain. We have received (heard).

Gætulos agitare super Numidiam, partim in the Getulians to agitate (live) above Numidia, partly in tuguriis, alios vagos incultiūs. Aethiopas huts, others wandering more-uncultivatedly. The Ethiopians esse post eos. Dein loca exusta ardoribus solis. to be after them. Then places parched by the heats of the sun.

Igitur Jugurthino bello, Romanus populus Therefore in the Jugurthine war, the Roman people administrabat per magistratus pleraque oppida ex did administer by magistrates most towns of Punicis, et finis (fines) Carthaginiensium, quos the Carthaginians, and the boundaries of the Carthaginians, which habuerant novissumè: magna pars Gætulorum, they had had very-newly (lately): a great part of the Getulians, et Numidæ usque ad flumen Mulucham, erant and the Numidians as-far-as to the river Mulucha, were sub Jugurthâ: Rex Bocchus, ignarus Romani under Jugurtha: King Bocchus, ignorant of the Roman populi cætera præter nomen, people (as to) other (things) besides the name, [ignorant of the que item cognitus Roman people in every thing except name], and also known antea nobis neque bello neque pace, imperitabat before to us neither in war nor in peace, did command omnibus Mauris: satis dictum de Africâ to all the Moors: enough has been said of Africa et incolis ejus ad necessitudinem and the inhabitants of it to (for) the necessity rei.

the thing (subject).

Postquam, regno diviso, legati After that, the kingdom having been divided, the ambassadors decessere Africâ, et Jugurtha videt sese adeptum-(esse) departed from Africa, and Jugurtha sees himself to have obtained præmia sceleris contra timorem animi; the rewards of wickedness contrary-to the fear of (his) mind; ratus quod acceperat ex amicis apud having supposed what he had received (beard) from (his) friends at

Numantiam, certum, omnia esse Numantia, certain [that for a certainty], all (things) to be venalia Romæ, et simul accensus venal at Rome, and at-the-same-time having been inflamed pollicitationibus illorum, quos expleverat paulò antè by the promises of those, whom he had satisfied a little before muneribus, intendit animum in regnum with gifts, directs (his) mind into the kingdom Atherbalis. Ipse acer, bellicosus: at is quem of Adherbal. Himself vigorous, warlike: but he whom petebat, quietus, imbellis, placidus ingenio, he did seek, (was) quiet, unwarlike, placid in disposition, opportunus injuriæ, metuens magis quam metuendus.
 suitable for injury, fearing rather than to-be-feared.
 Igitur invadit finis (fines) ejus de-improviso cum Therefore he invades the boundaries of him suddenly with magnâ manu: capit multos mortalis (mortales), cum a great band: takes many mortals, with pecore atque aliâ prædiâ: incendit ædificia; cattle and with other plunder: burns the edifices; accedit pleraque loca hostiliter cum equitatu. approaches most places hostilely with cavalry.
 Deinde convertit cum omni multitudine in suum Then he turns with all the multitude into his-own regnum, existumans Atherbalem permotum dolore kingdom, thinking Adherbal moved by grief vindicaturum suas injurias (resentment) about-to-avenge [would revenge] his wrongs manu, que eam rem fore causam by hand (action), and that thing to-be-about-to-be [would be] the cause belli. At ille misit legatos ad Jugurtham, of war. But he sent ambassadors to Jugurtha, questum de injuriis, quod neque existumabat se to complain of the injuries, because neither did he think himself parem armis, et fretus-erat amicitiâ Romani populi equal in arms, and had relied on the friendship of the Roman people magis quam Numidis: qui tametsi retulerant rather than on the Numidians: who although they had brought-back contumeliosa dicta, tamen decrevit pati omnia contumelious sayings, yet he resolved to suffer all (things) priusquam sumere bellum: quia sooner-than to take war [to make war]: because (war) tentatum antea cesserat secus. Cupido tried before had resulted otherwise (untowardly). The desire Jugurthæ neque minuebatur magis eò:

 of Jugurtha neither was lessened more on-this-account: quippe qui invaserat jam totum regnum ejus inasmuch-as (one) who had invaded already the whole kingdom of him animo. Itaque cœpit gerere bellum non ut antea, in mind. Therefore he began to carry-on war not as before, cum prædatoriâ manu, sed magno exercitu comparato, with a plundering band, but with a great army being provided, et aperte petere imperium totius Numidiæ. and openly to seek the command of the whole of Numidia.
Cæterum, quâ pergebat, vastare But, wheresoever he did proceed (he began), to lay-waste urbis (urbes), agros, agere prædas, cities, lands, to drive-away plunders [to drive off the cattle augere animum suis, terrorem and flocks], to increase mind (spirit) to his-own (men), terror hostibus.
 to the enemies. [To increase the courage of his own men, and strike Atherbal ubi intelligit processumterror to his enemies.] Adherbal when he understands to have pro-(esse) eò, utì regnum aut esset cedeed [that it had come] to-this, that (his) kingdom either should be relinquendum, aut retinendum armis, necessario to-be-left, or to-be-retained by arms, necessarily parat copias, et procedit obvius Jugurthæ. prepares forces, and proceeds opposite (against) to Jugurtha.
 Interim exercitus utriusque consedit prope oppidum Meantime the army of each encamped near the towi.
 Cirtam, haud longè à mari; et prælium non Cirta, not far from the sea; and the battle (was) not inceptum, quia erat extreum diei: sed ubi begun, because it was the extreme of the day: but when plerumque noctis processit, lumine etiam tum most of the night advanced, the light even then (being) obscuro, obscure [the night having nearly passed, and the day began to dawn], Jugurthini milites, signo dato, invadunt castra the Jugurthine soldiers, the signal being given, invade the camps hostium; fugant que fundunt partim of the enemies; put-to-flight and pour (rout) partly (some) semisomnos, alias sumentes arma: Atherbal profugit half-asleep, others taking arms: Adherbal escapes cum paucis equitibus Cirtam: et ni fuissest with a few horsemen (to) Cirta: and unless there might have been multitudo togatorum, quæ prohibuit (had been) a multitude of toga-wearers (Romans), which prohibited Numidas insequentes moenibus, bellum inter duos the Numidians pursuing from the walls, the war between the two reges foret coeptum et patratum uno die. Igitur kings might be begun and finished in one day. Therefore Jugurtha circumsedit oppidum, aggreditur expugnare Jugurtha beset the town, attempts to storm (it) vineis que turribus, et machinis omnium generum: with mantlets and towers, and machines of all kinds: maxumè festinans antecapere tempus chiefly hastening to anticipate the time (of return) legatorum, quos audiverat missos ab of the ambassadors, whom he had heard (to have been) sent by Atherbale Romam ante prælium factum.

 Adherbal (to) Rome before the battle being done (fought).
 Sed postquam senatus accepit de bello eorum, But after that the senate received (heard) of the war of them, tres adolescentes legantur in Africam, qui adeant three young-men are deputed into Africa, who may go to ambos reges; nuncient verbis senatūs both the kings; may announce (to them) in the words of the senate que Romani populi, velle et censere eos discedere and of the Roman people, to will and to think them to depart ab armis: from arms: [that it was their wish and determination, that they should ita esse dignum que se que desist from war]: so to be worthy and (both) themselves and illis.

them. [This was due both to their dignity and that of the kings.]

Legati veniunt maturantes in Africam; magis The ambassadors come hastening into Africa; the more eò quòd audiebatur Romæ, dum parant on-this-account, because it was heard at Rome, whilst they prepare proficiisci, de prælio facto, et oppugnatione to set-out, of the battle having been done (fought), and the siege Cirtæ. Sed is rumor erat clemens. Oratione of Cirta. But that report was mild. The speech quorum acceptâ, Jugurtha respondit, neque of whom being received, Jugurtha answered, neither quidquam esse majus neque carius sibi any (thing) to be greater nor dearer to him (than) auctoritate senatûs: se ita enisum-(esse) ab the authority of the senate: himself so to have endeavoured from adolescentiâ ut probaretur ab quoque optumo: youth that he might be approved by every best (man):

placuisse Publio Scipioni, to have pleased [that he had made himself acceptable] to Publius Scipio, summo viro, virtute, non malitiâ: adoptatum-esse the highest man, by virtue, not by malice: to have been adopted in regnum à Micipâ ob easdem artis (artes), into the kingdom by Micipa for the same arts (endowments), non penuriâ liberorum: cæterum quòd fe-not from want of children: but by how-much he might have cisset plura bene atque strenuè, eò done (had done) more (things) well and vigorously, by that animum minus tolerare (therefore) (his) mind less to endure [would less endure] injuriam: Atherbalem insidiatum-(esse) suæ vitæ injury: Adherbal to have plotted for his life dolis: quod ubi comperisset, isse obviâm by deceipts: which when he might have found, to have gone toward sceleri:

(he opposed) to wickedness: [he discovered and opposed this wickedness]:

Romanum populum facturum neque rectè, neque the Roman people (to be) about-to-do neither rightly, neither pro bono, si prohibuerit sese ab jure for [their] good, if it shall have prohibited him from the right gentium: postremo, missurum of nations: lastly, (to be) about-to-send [that he was about to brevi legatos Romam de omnibus rebus. send] shortly ambassadors (to) Rome concerning all things.

Ita utrique digrediuntur. Copia Atherbalis Thus both depart. An opportunity of Adherbal appellandi fuit non. Jugurtha, ubi to-be-addressed (of addressing Adherbal) was not. Jugurtha, when ratus-est eos decessisse Africâ, neque posset he supposed them to have departed from Africa, neither he might be able expugnare Cirtam armis propter to storm [neither could he storm] Cirta with arms on-account-of naturam loci, circumdat mænia vallo atque the nature of the place, he surrounds the walls with a rampart and fossâ: extruit turris (tresses), que firmat eas trench: raises towers, and strengthens them præsidiis: præterea tentare dies que noctes with guards: besides (he began) to try days and nights aut per vim aut dolis: ostentare [to take the place] either by violence or stratagems: to display modò præmia, modo formidinem defensoribus mœnium, now rewards, now terror to the defenders of the walls, erigere suos ad virtutem hortando, prorsus to excite his own (men) to valour by encouraging, altogether intentus parare cuncta. Atherbal ubi intelligit intent to prepare all (things). Adherbal when he understands omnis (omnes) suas fortunas sitas in extremo, all his fortunes situate in extreme (danger), hostem infestum, nullam spem auxillii, bellum non the enemy hostile, no hope of assistance, the war not posse trahi penuriâ necessariarum rerum; to be able to be protracted from want of necessary things; [he] delegit duos maxumè impigros ex iis, qui profugerant chose two most active out-of those, who had fled una Cirtam, confirmat eos pollicendo together (to) Cirta, strengthens (prevails on) them by promising multa, ac miserando suum casum, uti many (things), and by bewailing his-own misfortune, that pergerent noctu per munitiones hostium they would proceed by night through the fortifications of the enemies ad proximum mare, dein Romam. Numidæ to the next sea, then (to) Rome. The Numidians efficiunt jussa paucis diebus; literæ execute the commands in a few days; letters (a letter) Atherbalis recitatæ in senatu, sententia quarum of Adherbal (was) read-aloud in the senate, the purport of which fuit haec:

was this:

“Conscripti patres! mitto sæpè ad vos oratum “Conscript fathers! I send often to you to entreat non meâ culpâ, sed vis Jugurthæ subigit; not by my-own fault, but the violence of Jugurtha forces (me); quem tanta lubido extinguendi me invasit, uti whom so-great a desire of destroying me has seized, that neque habeat vos, neque immortalis (im-neither he may have (he has) you, nor the immortal mortales) deos in animo; malit gods in (his) mind; he may have-rather (he prefers) meum sanguinem quam omnia Itaque socius my blood than all (things). Therefore an ally et amicus Romani populi, teneor obsessus armis and friend of the Roman people, I am held besieged with arms jam quintum mensem: neque beneficia mei patris now the fifth month: neither the favours of my father Micipse, neque vestra decreta auxiliantur mihi: Micipsa, nor your decrees aid to me:
sum incertus urgear acriùs ferro, I am uncertain (whether) I may be oppressed more-fiercely by iron an fame. Mea fortuna dehortatur me (sword), or by hunger. My fortune dissuades me scribere plura de Jugurthâ: etiam expertus-sum to write more concerning Jugurtha: also I have experienced antea, parùm fidei esse miseris. Nisi tamen before, little of faith (credit) to be to the wretched. Unless however intelligo illum petere suprà quām ego sum, I understand him to seek (something) above than I am, neque sperare vestram [something higher than myself], neither to hope-for your amicitiam et meum regnum simul. Occultum-est friendship and my kingdom together. It has been concealed nemini utrum existumet gravius. Nam occidit to no-one which he may think more-serious. For he killed meum fratrem Hiempalem initio; dein my brother. Hiempal in the beginning; afterwards expulit me patrio regno. Quæ sanè he expelled me from (my) paternal kingdom. What indeed fuerint nostræ injuriæ, nihil ad vos. may have been (have been) our wrongs, (is) nothing to you. Verùm nunc tenet vestrum regnum armis: tenet But now he possesses your kingdom by arms: he holds clausum, atque obsidet me, quem vos posuistis shut (confined), and besieges me, whom you have placed imperatorem Numidis: mea pericula declarant (as) a ruler to the Numidians: my dangers declare quanti fecerit verba lega- of how-much (value) he may have made (has made) the words of the am- torum. Quid est reliquum, quo possit moveri, bassadors. What is remaining, by which he may be able to be moved, nisi vestra vis? Nam ego quidem vellem et unless your force? For I indeed should wish and (both) hæc, quæ scribo, et illa quæ antea these (words), which I write, and those (things) which before . questus-sum in senatu, forent vana I have complained in the senate, might be (were) vain (groundless) potiusquam mea miseria faceret fidem verbis. rather-than my misery should make faith (credit) to (my) words. Sed quoniam natus-sum eò, ut essem ostentui But since I have been born for-this, that I might be for a spectacle scelerum Jugurthæ, jam non-deprecor mortem of the wickednesses of Jugurtha, now I do not-deprecate death neque ærumnas, tantummodo imperium inimici, et nor miseries, but-only the command of an enemy, and cruciatus corporis. Consulite regno tortures of body. Consult (provide) for the kingdom Numidiæ quod est vestrum uti libet: eripite of Numidia which is your-own as it pleases (you): rescue me ex impiis manibus, per majestatem me from impious hands, by (for the sake of) the majesty imperii, per fidem amicitiae; si ulla memoria of the empire, by the faith of friendship; if any recollection mei avi Masinissæ remanet apud vos." of my grand-sire Masinissa remains among you."

His literis recitatis, fuere These letters (this letter) having been read-aloud, there were (some) qui censerent exercitum mittendum who might think (thought) an army, to-be-sent (should be sent) in Africam, et subveniendum Atherbali into Africa, and to-be-relieved to Adherbal [and Atherbal relived] quamprimum, uti interim as-soon-as-possible, that [in the mean time] consuleretur de Jugurthâ, quoniam it should be deliberated concerning Jugurtha, since non-paruisset legatis. Sed he might not have obeyed (had not obeyed) to the ambassadors. But enism summâ ope ab illis îsdem (it was) endeavoured with the utmost might by those same fautoribus regis, tale decretum ne-fieret. favourers of the king, (that) such a decree might not-be-made.
Ita publicum bonum, ut solet plerisque negotiis, Thus the public good, as is usual in most affairs, (was) devictum privatâ gratiâ. Tamen nobiles majores overcome by private interest. However noble (men) greater natu usi amplis honoribus, by birth (elder) having used ample honours, [having enjoyed the legantur in Africam: in highest honours of the state], are deputed into Africa: among quîs fuit Marcus Scaurus, de quo memoravimus whom was Marcus Scaurus, of whom we have recorded suprà, consularis et tum princeps senati. Hi, above, a consular (man) and then chief of the senate. These, quòd res erat in invidiâ et simul because the thing was in envy (odium), and at-the-same-time obsecrati à Numidis, ascendêre having been besought by the Numidians, embarked [on board] navim triduo, dein brevì adpulsi Uticam, a ship in-three-days, then shortly being carried (to) Utica, mittunt literas ad Jugurtham, accedat send letters (a letter) to Jugurtha, (that) he may repair quam-ocissumè ad provinciam; se (to repair) as quickly as possible to the province; themselves missos (esse) ad eum ab senatu. Ille, ubi to have been sent to him by the senate. He, when accepit, claros homines, auctoritatem he received (intelligence), [that] illustrious men, the authority quorum audiverat pollere Romæ, venisse of whom he had heard to prevail at Rome, to have come [had come] contra suum inceptum, primò commotus metu, against his undertaking, at-first moved by fear, atque lubidine, agitabatur divorsus.

 and by passion, was agitated different (in different ways).
 Timebat iram senatûs, ni paruisset He did fear the anger of the senate, unless he might have obeyed legatis: porro animus, cæcus (had obeyed) to the ambassadors: moreover (his) mind, blind cupidine, rapiebat ad inceptum scelus. with desire, did hurry (him) to the undertaken wickedness.
 Tamen pravum consilium vicit in avido However the depraved design conquered in (his) covetous ingenio. Igitur, exercitu circumdato, (ambitious) disposition. Therefore, the army having been placed-around, nititur summâ vi irrumpere Cirtam, he endeavours with the utmost force to break-into Cirta, maxumè sperans sese inventurum casum victorîæ chiefly hoping himself about-to-find a chance of victory aut vi aut dolis, manu hostium either by force or by stratagems, the band [the forces] of the enemies diductâ. Ubi quod procedit secùs, having been separated. When which (attempt) proceeds otherwise, neque potest efficere quod intenderat, uti potiretur neither can he effect what he had designed, that he might possess Atherbalis priusquam conveniret legatos; venit of Adherbal before that he might meet the ambassadors; he came cum paucis equitibus in provinciam, ne morando with (a) few horsemen into the province, lest by delaying amplius, incenderet Scaurum, quem metuebat more (longer), he might incense Scaurus, whom he did fear plurimum. Ac tametsi graves minæ nunciabantur very-much. And although heavy threats were announced verbis senatûs, quod non-desisteret ab in the words of the senate, because he would not-desist from oppugnatione, tamen multâ oratione consumptâ, the siege, yet much speech being wasted, legati discessere frustra. Postquam ea the ambassadors departed in-vain. After that those (things) audita-sunt Cirtæ, Italici, virtute quorum moenia were heard at Cirta, the Italians, by the valour of whom the walls defensabantur, confisi, ditione fectâ, sese were defended, having trusted, a surrender being made, themselves fore inviolatos propter magnitudinem to be about-to-be [would be] uninjured on-account-of the greatness Romani populi, suadent Atherbali, uti tradat of the Roman people, persuade to Adherbal, that he may deliver que se et oppidum Jugurthæ, tantum paciscatur both himself and the town to Jugurtha, only may bargain vitam ab eo; de cæteris [and only bargain] for life from him; concerning the others fore curæ senatui.

 to be-about-to-be for a care to the senate. [That the senate would care At ille, tametsi rebatur omnia for the rest.] But he, although he did suppose all (things) potiora fide Jugurthæ, tamen quia potestas preferable (than) the faith of Jugurtha, however because the power cogendi erat penè eosdem, si adversaretur, of compelling (him) was in-the-power-of the same, if he should oppose, fecit deditio[n]em ita, uti Italici censuerant. Igitur made a surrender so, as the Italians had resolved. Therefore Jugurtha in primis necat Atherbalem Jugurtha in (among) the first puts-to-death Adherbal excruciatum: deinde interfecit omnes Numidas having been tortured: afterwards he killed all the Numidian puberes, atque negotiatores promiscuè, uti quiske youths, and merchants promiscuously, as each fuerat obvius armatis. Quod postquam had been opposite (met) to the armed (men). Which after that cognitum-est Romæ, et res coep[ta] (est) agitari it was known at Rome, and the thing was begun to be agitated in senatu; illi iidem ministri regis leniebant in the senate; those same servants of the king did mitigate atrocitatem facti interpellando, ac s[ecundu]m gratiâ, the atrocity of the deed by interrupting, and often by interest, interdum trahendo tempus jurgiis. Ac ni sometimes by protracting the time in contentions. And unless Caius Memmius, tribunus designatus plebis, acer Caius Memmius, tribune elect of the people, an acute vir, et infestus potentiae nobilitatis, edocuisse[t] man, and hostile to the power of the nobility, might have instructed Romanum populum, id agi, (had instructed) the Roman people, that to be acted, [that it was uti scelus Jugurthæ condonaretur in agitation,] that the wickedness of Jugurtha might be pardoned per paucos factiosos, profectò omnis through (a) few factious (persons), in-deed all invidia dilapsa-foret consultationibus the envy (odium) would have passed-away by the deliberations prolatandis. Tanta erat to-be-deferred (by deferring the deliberations). So-great was vis gratiæ, atque pecuniæ regis. Sed ubi the force of the interest, and of the money of the king. But when senatus, conscientiâ delicti, timet populum, the senate, from a consciousness of crime, fears the people, provinciæ Numidia atque Italia decretæ (sunt) the provinces Numidia and Italy were decreed futuris consulibus Semproniam lege: Publius to the future consuls by the Sempronian law: Publius Scipio Nasica, Lucius Bestia Calpurnius declarati (sunt) Scipio Nasica, Lucius Bestia Calpurnius were declared consules: Numidia obvenit Calpurnio, Italia consuls: Numidia came-by-lot to Calpurnius, Italy Scipioni. Dein exercitus scribitur, qui to Scipio. Afterwards an army is written (levied), which portaretur in Africam: stipendum, que alia, should be carried into Africa: pay, and other quae forent usui bello, decernuntur. At (things), which might be for use in war, are decreed. But Jugurtha, nuncio accepto contra spem, quippe Jugurtha, a message being received against hope, forsooth cui haeserat in animo omnia (one) to whom it had settled in mind (who thought) all (things) venire Romae; mittit filium et duos familiares to be-venal at Rome; sends (his) son and two intimate cum eo legatos ad senatum; que (friends) with him (as) ambassadors to the senate; and præcipit iis uti illis, quos miserat, Hiempsale directs to these as to those, whom he had sent, Hiempsal interfecto, aggrediantur having been killed, (that) may attempt [that they should attempt] omnis (omnes) mortalis (mortales) pecuniâ: (to bribe) all mortals with money: qui postquam adventabant Romam, senatus who after that they did approach (to) Rome, the senate consultus-est à Bestiâ, ne placeret was consulted by Bestia, whether it might please (them) legatos Jugurthæ recipi mœnibus; the ambassadors of Jugurtha to be received in the walls (the city); que ii decrevere, ut decederent Italiam in and these decreed, that they should depart from Italy in proximis decem diebus, ni venissent the next ten days, unless they might have come (had come); deditum regnum que ipsum. Consul to surrender the kingdom and [and the king] himself. The consul jubet nunciari Numidis ex decreto orders (it) to be told to the Numidians according to the decree senatus. Ita illi discedunt domum, rebus of the senate. Thus they depart home, (their) affairs infectis. Interim Calpurnius, exercitu being unaccomplished. Mean-time Calpurnius, an army parato, legat sibi being prepared, deputes to himself [selects for himself lieutenants] nobiles homines factiosos, auctoritate quorum noble men factious, by the authority of whom sperabat, quæ delinquisset fore he did hope, what he might have transgressed to be about to be [would munita, in quâ fuit Scaurus, de naturâ et be] protected, amongst whom was Scaurus, of the nature and habitu cuius memoravimus suprà. Nam multæ disposition of whom we have recorded above. For many que bonæ artes animi et corporis erant in and good arts (qualities) of mind and of body were in nostro consule; omnis (omnes) quas avaritia our consul; all which avarice præpediebat. Patiens laborum, acri ingenio, did hinder. Patient of labours, with (of) a sharp disposition, satis providens, haud ignarus belli, firmissimus sufficiently provident, not ignorant of war, most-firm contra pericula et insidias. Sed legiones against dangers and snares. But the legions transvectæ (sunt) per Italianum Rhegium, atque were conveyed through Italy (to) Rhegium, and inde Siciliam, porro ex Siciliâ in Africam. thence (to) Sicily, moreover from Sicily into Africa.

 Igitur Calpurnius, commeatibus paratis initio, Therefore Calpurnius, provisions being prepared in the beginning, acriter ingressus-est Numidiam; que cepit multos vigorously entered Numidia; and took many mortalis (mortales), et aliquot urbis (urbes) pugnando. men, and some cities by fighting.
 Sed ubi Jugurtha cœpit tentare pecuniâ But when Jugurtha began to try (tempt him) with money per legatos, que ostendere asperitatem through ambassadors, and to show the roughness (difficulty) belli, quod administrabat, animus, æger avaritiâ, of the war, which he did manage, (his) mind, sick with avarice, conversus-est facilè. Cæterùm Scaurus assumitur was changed easily. But Scaurus is chosen (as) socius et administer omnium consiliorum; qui an associate and manager of all (his) designs; who tametsi impugnaverat regem acerrumè à principio, although he had opposed the king most-sharply from the beginning, plerisque ex factione ejus corruptis, most of the faction of him [of his party] being corrupted, tamen abstractus-est à bono que honesto in yet he was drawn-away from good and honourable into pravum magnitudine pecuniæ. Sed Jugurtha primùm depraved by the greatness of the money. But Jugurtha at-first redimebat tantummodo moram belli, existumans sese did purchase only a delay of war, thinking himself effecturum aliquid interim Romæ pretio, about-to-effect some (thing) in-the-mean-time at Rome by price aut gratiâ; verò poste aquam accepit (bribery), or by interest; but after-that he received (heard) Scaurum participem negotii, adductus in maxumam Scaurus partaker of the business, led into the greatest spem pacis recuperandæ, hope of peace to-be-recovered (of recovering peace), statuit præsens agere cum eis he resolved present (personally) to act (treat) with them de omnibus pactionibus. Cæterùm about all agreements. [About a treaty.] But interea, causâ fidei, Sextius mittitur à mean-time, for the sake of faith, Sextius is sent by consule quæstor in Vaccam, oppidum Jugurthæ; by the consul (as) questor into Vacca, a town of Jugurtha; species cujus rei erat acceptio frumenti, quod the pretence of which thing was the receiving of corn, which Calpurnius palam imperaverat legatis, quoniam Calpurnius openly had ordered to the ambassadors, since inducere agitabantur mora deditio truces were agitated (continued) by the delay of surrend.

Igitur rex venit in castra (pl.) uti constituerat: Therefore the king came into the camp, as he had resolved:

ac locutus pauca, consilio præsenti, and having spoken a few (words), the council (being) present, de invidiâ sui facti, atque ut acciperetur of the envy (odium) of his deed, and that he might be received in ditionem, transegit reliqua secreta cum into surrender, transacted the remaining (things) secret with Bestiâ et Scauro: dein accipitur in ditionem Bestia and Scaurus: then he is received into surrender postero die, sententiis exquisitis quasi on the following day, the opinions being sought (taken) [as-if] per-saturam. Sed uti imperatum-erat pro consilio, indiscriminately. But as it had been commanded before the council, triginta elephanti, pecus, atque multi equi, cum thirty elephants, cattle, and many horses, with non parvo pondere argenti traduntur quæstori.

not a small weight of silver are delivered to the questor.

Calpurnius proficiscitur Romam ad magistratus Culpurnius sets-out (to) Rome to magistrates rogandos.

Pax agitabatur in Numidiâ et nostro trates.] Peace was agitated (enjoyed) in Numidia and in our exercitu. Postquam fama divulgavit res gestas army. After that fame divulged the things carried-on in Africâ, que quo modo actæ-forent, in Africa, and in what manner they might have been done (had been Romæ per omnis (omnes) locos et conventus. at Rome through all places and assemblies.

Gravis invidia apud plebem: patres erant Heavy envy (odium) among the commonalty: the fathers were soliciti; parvum-constabat ne probarent tantum anxious; it was not-evident whether they should approve so-great flagitium, an subverterent decretum consulis. Ac villany, or should overthrow the decree of the consul. And potentia Scauri, quòd is ferebatur auctor et socius the power of Scaurus, because he was reported the adviser and associate Bestiæ, maxumè impediebat eos à vero que honesto. of Bestia, chiefly did prevent them from true and honourable

At Caius Memmius, de libertate cuius (conduct). But Caius Memmius, of the freedom of whose ingenii, et odio potentiae nobilitatis diximus suprà, disposition, and hatred of the power of the nobility we have said above, inter dubitationem et moras senatús hortari (began) amid the hesitation and delays of the senate to encourage populum concionibus ad-vindicandum : the people in assemblies to vindicate (punish such conduct) : monere ne-desererent rempublicam, ne suam to advise they would not-forsake the republic, not their-own libertatem : ostendere multa superba, crudelia facinora liberty : to point-out many proud, cruel crimes nobilitatis : prorsus intentus, accendebat animum of the nobility : altogether intent, he did inflame the wind (spirit) plebis omni modo. Sed quoniam facundia of the commonalty in every manner. But since the eloquence Mempii fuit clara que pollens Romæ eâ of Memmius was illustrious and powerful at Rome at that tempestate, existumavi decere perscribere unam time, I have thought (it) to be-fit to transcribe one orationem ejus ex tam multis ; ac dicam potissimum speech of him out-of so many ; and I will say chiefly ea quæ disseruit in concione post redditum those (words) which he discussed in the assembly after the return Bestiæ, verbis hujusmodi : of Bestia, in words of this-kind :

“ Multa dehortantur me à vobis, “ Many (things) dissuade me from (addressing) you, ni studium reipublicæ superet omnia ; opes unless (my) zeal for the republic may surmount all ; the resources factionis, vestra patientia, nullum jus ; ac maxumè, of a faction, your-own patience, no right ; and chiefly, quòd est plus periculi quam honoris innocentiae. because (there) is more of danger than of honour to innocence

Nam quidem piget dicere illa, (integrity). For indeed it grieves (me) to say those (things), quàm fueritis his XV (quindecim) how you may have been (ye have been) in these fifteen annis ludibrio superbiae paucorum: quàm foedè que years for a sport to the pride of a few: how disgracefully and quam inulti vestri defensores perierint; how unrevedged your defenders may have perished (have peutì animus sit vobis corruptus rished); that the mind may be to you (your mind is) corrupted vobis ab ignaviâ atque socordiâ: qui exsurgitis ne for you by indolence and slothfulness: who rise [not] quidem nunc, inimicis obnoxii, even now, (your) enemies (being) obnoxious, [being in atque etiam nunc your power, on account of their corruption], and even now timetis eos, quibus decet vos esse terrori. Sed fear them, to whom it becomes you to be for a terror. But quamquam hæc sunt talia, tamen animus although these (things) are such, yet (my) mind subigit ire obviâ potentiae factionis. forces (me) to go toward (to oppose) to the power of a faction.

Certè ego experiar libertatem quæ tradita-est mihi Surely I will try for the liberty which has been delivered to me à meo parente; verùm situm-est in vestrâ manu, from my parent; but it is placed in your hand,

Quirites! faciam id frustra, [in your power], O Romans! (whether) I may do that in-vain, an ob rem. Neque ego hortor or on-account-of the thing (effectually). Neither [do] I exhort vos quod vestri majores fecere sæpe, utì eatis you (to think) which your ancestors have done often, that you may go armati contra injurias. Est nihil opus armed against injuries. There is nothing (no) need with (of) vi, nihil secessione. Est necesse ipsi force, nothing with (of) secession. It is necessary (that) they eant præcipites suomet more. Tiberio Graccho may go headlong in their-own manner. Tiberius Gracchus occiso, quem aiebant parare regnum, graves being slain, whom they did say to prepare (aim at) kingdom, heavy quæstiones habitæ-sunt in Romanam plebem. inquisitions were held against the Roman commonalty.

 Multi mortales necati-sunt in carcere, post cædem Many men have been put-to-death in prison, after the slaughter Caii Gracchi, et Marci Fulvii, item vestri ordinis. of Caius Gracchus, and of Marcus Fulvius, also of your order.
 Non lex, sed lubido eorum fecit finem utriusque Not law, but the caprice of them has made an end of each cladis. Sed sanè fuerit paratio regni, slaughter. But indeed it may have been a procuring of kingdom, restituere sua jura plebi. Quidquid to restore their-own rights to the commonalty. Whatsoever nequitur ulcisci sine sanguine civium, is-unable (they are-unable) to avenge without the blood of citizens, [let whatever could not have been punished, without shedding the blood factum-sit jure. Taciti indignabamini of citizens], may have been done by right. Silent you were-indignant ærarium expilari the treasury to be plundered [at the plundering of the treasury] superioribus annis; reges et liberos populos in former years; [that] kings and free people pendere vectigal paucis nobilibus; et summam to pay [pay] tribute to a few nobles; and the highest gloriā et maxumas divitias esse penè glory and the greatest riches to be in-the-power-of eosdem: tamen habuere parùm suscethe same: yet they have had (accounted it) little to have underpisce hæc talia facinora impunè: itaque postremò, taken these such crimes with impunity: therefore lastly, leges, vestra majestas, omnia divina et humana, the laws, your majesty, all divine and human (things), tradita-sunt hostibus. Neque pudet aut pœnitet have been delivered to enemies. Neither does it shame or grieve eos qui fecere ea: sed incedunt magnificè those who have done those (things): but they strut pompously per vestra ora, ostentantes sacerdotia, et through (before) your faces, displaying priesthoods, and consulatus, pars suos triumphos: perinde-quasi consulates, part their-own triumphs: just-as-if habeant ea honori, non prædæ. Servi they may have these for honour, not for plunder. Slaves parati ære, perferunt non injusta imperia procured by brass (money), bear not the unjust commands dominorum: Quirites, nati imperio, vos-toleratis of masters: Romans, born for command, do you-endure servitutem æquo animo? At qui sunt hi slavery with even mind [calmly]? But who are those qui occupavere rempublicam? Sceleratissimi homines, who have seized the republic? The most-wicked men, cruentis manibus, immani avaritiâ, nocentissimi, with bloody hands, with (of) dreadful avarice, most-injurious, que iidem superbissimi: quibus fides, decus, pietas, and the same most-proud: to whom faith, honour, piety, postremè, omnia honesta atque inhonesta sunt lastly, all honourable and dishonourable (things) are quæstui. Pars eorum, habent pro munimento, for gain. Part of them, have for a bulwark, occidisse tribunos plebis, alii injustas to have killed tribunes of the commonalty, others unjust quæstiones, plerique fecisse cædem in vos: ita inquisitions, most to have done slaughter against you: thus quâm quisque fecit pessumè, tam est maxumè as each has done most-badly, so is-he most tutus; transtulere safe; [the worse any one has acted the safer he is]; they have transferred metum à suo scelere ad vestram ignaviam: fear from their-own wickedness to your indolence: omnis (omnes) quos cupere eadem, odisse eadem, all whom to desire the same, to have hated the same, metuere eadem coëgit in unum. Sed hæc est to fear the same has collected into one (body). But this is amicitia inter bonos, factio inter malos. Quòd si friendship among the good, faction among the bad. But if vos haberetis curam libertatis tam, quām illi you might have a care of liberty so, as they accensi-sunt ad dominationem; profectò respublica have been inflamed to tyranny; indeed the republic neque vastaretur sicuti nunc, et vestra beneficia neither would be desolated as now, and your favours forent penè optumos, non audacissimos.

 [of offices] would be in-the-power-of the best, not the most-daring.
 Vestri majores armati, bis occupavere Aventinum Your ancestors armed, twice occupied the Aventine (mount) per secessionem gratiā juris parandi et by a secession for-the-sake of justice to be procured and majestatis constituendæ; nonne vos-nitemini of dignity to-be-established; whether (or-not) will you endeavour summā ope pro libertate, quam accepistis with the utmost might for the liberty, which you have received ab illis? atque vehementiùs eò quòd est from them? and the more-earnestly therefore by-how-much it is majus dedecus amittere parata, quam non a greater disgrace to lose (things) obtained, than not paravisse omnino! Aliquis dicet, Quid to have acquired (them) at-all! Some-one will say, What igitur censes? vindicandum in therefore thinkest-thou? (it is) to-be-vindicated against [why that eos, qui prodidere punishment should be inflicted on] those, who have betrayed rempublicam hosti, non manu, neque vi; the republic to the enemy, not by hand (action), neither by force; quod est magis indignum vos fecisse, quam which is more unworthy (for) you to have done, than accidisse illis: verùm quætionibus et to have happened to them: but by examinations and by the informacion Jugurthæ ipsius. Qui, si est deditius, tion of Jugurtha himself. Who, if he is a surrenderer erit profectò obediens vestris jussis: sin will be indeed obedient to your commands: but-if contemnit ea, scilicet ætimabitis qualis illa he despises those, forsooth you will estimate what sort that pax aut deditio sit, ex quâ impunitas peace or surrender may be, from which impunity scelerum ad Jugurtham, maxumæ divitiae of (for) crimes (accrues) to Jugurtha, the greatest riches pervenerint ad paucos potentis (potentes), damna may have come to a few powerful (persons), losses atque dedecora in rempublicam. Nisi etiam fortè and disgraces to the republic. Unless [also] perhaps satietas dominationis eorum nondum tenet vos: a satiety of the tyranny of them not-yet possesses you: et illa tempora, cùm regna, provinciæ, leges, jura, and those times, when kingdoms, provinces, laws, rights, judicia, bella atque paces, postremò omnia divina judgments, wars and peaces, lastly all divine et humana erant penè paucos, placent and human (things) were in-the-power-of a few, please magis quām hæc: autem vos, hoc est, Romanus more than these (times): but you, this is, the Roman populus, invicti ab hostibus, imperatores omnium people, unconquered by enemies, rulers of all gentium habebatis satis retinere animam. nations did have (did account it) sufficient to retain existence.

 Nam quidem quis vestrū audiebat recusare servitutem?
 For indeed who of you did dare to refuse slavery?
 Atque tametsi ego existumo flagitosissimum viro And although I think (it) most-disgraceful to a man accepisse injuriam impunè; tamen paterer to have received injury with-impunity; yet I would suffer æquo animo vos ignoscere sceleratissumis with even (patient) mind you to pardon to the most-wicked hominibus, quoniam sunt cives ni misericordia men, since they are citizens unless compassion esset casura in perniciem. Nam et fecisse might be about-to-fall into destruction. For and (also) to have done malè impunè est parùm illis, quantum badly with-impunity is little to them, how-great (so much) importunitatis habent, nisi deinde of vexation [of insolence] they have, unless afterwards licentia faciundi eripitur, et æterna the privilege of doing (so) is taken-away, and eternal solicitude remanebit vobis, cum intelligetis aut anxiety will remain to you, when you shall understand either esse-serviendum, aut libertatem to be-enslaved, [that you are either to be enslaved] or liberty retinendam per manus. Nam quidem quæ spes to-be-retained by hands (force). For indeed what hope fidei aut concordiae est? Illi volunt dominari; of faith or of concord is there? They will to tyrannise; vos esse liberi: illi facere injurias, vos prohibere: you [will] to be free: they to do injuries, you to prohibit postremò utuntur vestris sociis, veluti hostibus, (them): lastly they use your allies, as enemies, hostibus pro sociis. Ne potest pax aut (your) enemies for allies. Whether can peace or amicitia esse in mentibus tam divorsis? Quare friendship be in minds so different? Wherefore moneo que hortor vos, ne-dimittatis tantum I advise and exhort you, (that) you may not-dismiss so great scelus impunitum. Peculatus ærarii factus-est wickedness unpunished. A robbery of the treasury has been made non; neque pecuniae erexitæ sociis per vim: quæ not; neither moneys snatched from allies by force: which quamquam sunt gravia, tamen habentur jam although they are heavy (crimes), yet are had now pro nihilo consuetudine: auctoritas senatus for nothing by custom: the authority of the senate prodita (est) acerrumo hosti: vestrum imperium has been betrayed to your most-fierce enemy: your dominion proditum: respublica fuit venalis domi que militiae. betrayed: the republic has been venal at home and abroad.

 Quæ nisi quæsita-erunt, nisi Which unless it shall have been inquired-into, unless (it shall be) vindicatum in noxios, quid erit reliquum, vindicated against the guilty, what will be remaining, nisi ut vivamus obedientes illis qui fecere ea? unless that we may live obedient to those who have done those Nam facere quælibet impunè id est (things)? For to do any (things) with-impunity, that is esse regem. Neque ego-hortor vos, Quisites! uti to be king. Neither do I exhort you, O Romans! that jam malitis vestros civis (cives) fecisse perperam now you-may-rather your citizens to have done amiss quàm rectè: sed ne eatis perditum bonos, than rightly: but lest you may go to destroy the good, ignoscendo malis. Ad-hoc præstat multo in by pardoning to the bad. To this (besides) it is better by much in republicâ esse immemorem beneficii quàm maleficii. a republic to be unmindful of a kindness than of injury.

Bonus tantummodo fit segnior, ubi A good (man) only is made more-careless, when negligas; at malus improbior. thou mayest neglect (him); but a bad (man) more wicked.
Ad-hoc, si injuriæ sint non, haud-egeas auxiliū Besides, if injuries be not, thou mayest not-want of aid sæpe.
often.

Caius Memmius dicundo hæc atque alia Caius Memmius by saying these and other (things) hujuscemodi persuadet Romano populo, uti Lucius of this-kind persuades to the Roman people, that Lucius Cassius, qui tum erat prætor, mitteretur ad Cassius, who then was pretor, should be sent to Jugurtham, que duceret eum Romam, publicâ Jugurtha, and should lead him (to) Rome, the public fide interpositâ, quod delicta Scauri faith having been interposed, in-order-that the transgressions of Scaurus et reliquorum, quos arcescebant pecuniae captæ, and of the rest, whom they did accuse of money being taken, patefierent indicio regis. Dum might be-open (be discovered) by the information of the king. Whilst hæc geruntur Romæ, qui relictæ in these (things) are carried-on at Rome, (they) who having been left in Numidiâ ab Bestiâ praeerant exercitui, seuti Numidia by Bestia did preside to the army, having followed morem sui imperatoris, fecere plurima et the custom of their commander, did very-many and flagitiosissima facinora. Fuere qui corrupti most-disgraceful crimes. There were (some) who being corrupted auro, traderent (imp. sub.) elephantos by gold, might (did) deliver the elephants Jugurthæ; alii venderent perfugas; pars to Jugurtha; others might (did) sell the deserters; part agebant prædas ex pacatis. Tanta vis did drive-away plunder from pacified (provinces). So-great a force avaritiae invaserat in animos eorum veluti of avarice had invaded against the minds of them as tabes. At Cassius prætor, rogatione a pestilence. But Cassius the pretor, an inquiry perlatâ à Caio Memmio, ac omni having been carried (passed) by Caius Memmius, and all nobilitate perculsâ, proficiscitur ad Jugurtham: the nobility being-struck (terrified), sets-out to Jugurtha: que persuadet ei, timido, et diffidenti suis rebus, and persuades to him, fearful, and distrusting to his affairs, ex conscientiâ, quoniam dedidisset from conscience, since he might have surrendered (had surrendered) himself to the Roman people, ne-malit experiri se Romano populo, ne-malit experiri vim quam misericordiam ejus: præterea the force than compassion of it (them): besides interponit suam fidem privatum, quam ille he interposes his-own faith privately, which he (Jugurtha) ducebat non minoris quam publicam did lead (think) not of less (value) than the public (faith).

 Talis erat fama de Cassio eâ tempestate. Igitur Such was the fame of Cassius at that time. Therefore Jugurtha venit Romam cultu quam maxime Jugurtha came (to) Rome in habit, as most miserabili contra regium decus. miserable contrary-to royal honour. [In mean dress, incon-

At tametsi magna vis animi sistent with royal dignity.] But although great strength of mind erat in ipso, confirmatus ab omnibus, potentia was in himself, being strengthened by all, by the power aut scelere quorum gesserat cuncta ea or wickedness of whom he had carried-on all those (things) que memoravimus suprà, parat Caium which we have recorded above, he prepares (procares) Caius Bæbium, tribunum plebis, magnâ mercede, Bæbius, a tribune of the common-people, by a great reward, impudentia cujus munitus-foret contra jus et by the impudence of whom he might be secured against law and omnis (omnes) injurias. At Caius Memmius, all injuries. But Caius Memmius, concione advocata, quamquam plebes erat an assembly being summoned, although the commonalty was infesta regi, et pars jubebat duci in hostile to the king, and part did order (him) to be led into vincula, pars supplicium sumi de hoste chains, part punishment to be taken of the enemy more majorum, ni aperiret in the manner of (our) ancestors, unless he would disclose socios sceleris; consulens magis dignitati the companions of (his) wickedness; consulting more to dignity quam iræ, sedare motus, et mollire than to anger, (began) to allay the commotions, and to soften animos eorum; postremo, confirmare publicam the minds of them; lastly, to affirm the public fidem fore inviolatam per sese. faith to be about-to-be [should be] inviolate through himself.
Post, ubi silentium cœpit, Jugurthâ producto, Afterwards, when silence began, Jugurtha being led-forth, facit verba: memorat he makes words: [he, Memmius, addresses him]: recounts (his) facinora Romæ que Numidiæ; ostendit scelera crimes at Rome and at Numidia; shows (his) wickednesses in patrem que fratres; quamquam Romanus towards (his) father and brothers; although the Roman populus intelligat quibus juvantibus que people may understand (understands) by whom assisting and quibus ministris egerit (perf. sub.) ea, tamen by what servants he may have done (he did) those (things), yet velle habere magis manifesta ex illo: si to will to have (them) more manifest from him: if aperiat verum, magnam spem sitam illi he may disclose the truth, great hope (would be) placed for him in fide et clementiā Romani populi, sin in the faith and the clemency of the Roman people, but-if reticeat, fore non saluti he be silent, to-be-about-to-be not [it would not be] for safety to (his) sociis, sed corrupturum se que companions, but about-to-destroy [but would destroy] himself and suas spes. Dein, ubi Memmius fecit finem dicendi, his hopes. Then, when Memmius made an end of speaking, et Jugurtha jussus-est respondere, Caius Bæbius, and Jugurtha was-ordered to answer, Caius Bæbius, tribunus plebis, quem diximus suprà tribune of the common-people, whom we have said above (to have corruptum pecuniâ, jubet regem tacere: ac been) corrupted by money, orders the king to be-silent: and tametsi multitudo, quæ aderat in concione, although the multitude, which was-present in the assembly, vehementer accensa, terrebat cum clamore, vultu, exceedingly inflamed, did affright with clamour, countenance sæpe impetu, atque omnibus aliis quæ (looks), often with violence, and with all other (things) which ira amat fieri; tamen impudentia vicit. Ita anger loves to be done; yet impudence conquered. Thus populus habitus ludibrio, discedit ex concione: the people being held in ridicule, departs out-of the assembly: animi augescunt Jugurthæ, que Bestiæ, et minds (spirit) increase to Jugurtha, and to Bestia, and cæteris, quos illa quæstio exagitabat. Erat eâ to the rest, whom that inquiry did harass. There was at that tempestate quidam Numida Romæ, Massiva nomine, time a certain Numidian at-Rome, Massiva by name, filius Gulussæ, nepos Masinissæ, qui quia fuerat son of Gulussa, grandson of Masinissa, who because he had been advorsus Jugurthæ in dissensione regum, Cirtâ adverse to Jugurtha in the dissension of the kings, Cirta deditâ, et Atherbale interfecto, profugus being surrendered, and Adherbal being killed, (as) an exile abierat ex Africâ. Spurius Albinus, qui gerebat had departed out-of Africa. Spurius Albinus, who did carry-on consulatum cum Quinto Minucio Rufo proxumo anno the consulship with Quintus Minucius Rufus in the next year post Bestiam, persuadet huic, quoniam sit ex after Bestia, persuades to him, since he may be (is) of stirpe Masinissæ, urgeat Jugurtham the stem (family) of Masinissa, (that) he may press Jugurtha invidiâ cum metu ob scclera, by odium with fear on-account-of (his) wickednesses, (and) petat may seek [and as odium, with fear on account of his wickedness, pressed regnum Numidiæ hard on Jugurtha, he, Massiva, should seek] the kingdom of Numidia ab senatu. Consul, avidus belli gerundi, from the senate. The consul, desirous of the war to be-carried-on, malebat omnia moveri quam senescere. had-rather all (things) to be disturbed than to grow old.

Provincia Numidia evenerat ipsi, Macedonia Minucio.
The Province Numidia had come to him, Macedonia to Minucius.

Quæ postquam Massiva cœpit agitare neque Which (things) after that Massiva began to deliberate neither est satis præsidii Jugurthæ in amicis; quòd is there sufficient of protection to Jugurtha in friends; because conscientia impediebat alium eorum, mala fama conscience did hinder another (one) of them, bad character et timor animi alium: imperat Bomilcari, proxumo and fear of mind another: he commands to Bomilcar, the nearest ac maxumè fido sibi, paret insidiatores and most faithful to him, (that) he may procure assassins Massivæ pretio, sicuti confecerat multa; for Massiva by a reward (bribe), as he had accomplished many (things); ac maxumè occulte. Sin id parùm-procedat, , an<sup>t</sup> most secretly. But if that may not-succeed, interficiat Numidam quovis modo. Bomilcar maturæ he may kill the Numidians in any manner. . Bomilcar speedily exsequitur mandata regis, et explorat itinera, que executes the mandates of the king, and explores the journeys, and egressus ejus, postremò, egresses of him, [his routes, and time of leaving home], lastly, cuncta loca atque tempora all [his] places [of resort] and times [of frequenting them] per homines artifices talis negotii; dein ubi through men skilful of (in) such business; then when res postulabat, tendit insidias. Igitur unus ex the thing did require, he lays snares. Therefore one of eo numero, qui parati-erant ad cædem, that number, who had been procured to (for) the murder, aggreditur Massivam paulò inconsultiùs, obtruncat attacks Massiva a little too-rashly, murders illum; sed ipse deprehensus, profitetur indicium, him; but he being apprehended, confesses the information, multis hortantibus, sed in-primis [gives full information], many encouraging (him), but particularly Albino consule. Bomilcar, comes ejus, qui venerat Albinus the consul. Bomilcar, the companion of him, who had come Romam publicâ fide, fit reus magis ex (to) Rome with the public faith, is made criminal rather according-to sequo que bono, quam ex jure gentium. just and good, than according-to the right of nations.

 At Jugurtha manifestus tanti sceleris, But Jugurtha manifest (convicted) of so-great wickedness, omisit non nisi contra verum priusquam omitted not to endeavour against the truth before-that animadvortit invidiam facti esse super suam he perceives the envy (odium) of the deed to be above his gratiam atque pecuniam. Igitur quamquam dederat interest and money. Therefore although he had given quinquaginta ex amicis vades in priora fifty of (his) friends (as) bails in the former actione, consulens magis action, [when Bomilcar was first put on trial], [consulting more regno, quam vadibus, dimittit Bomilcarem for his kingdom, than for the securities,] he sends-away Bomilcar clam in Numidiam, veritus ne metus parendi privately into Numidia, having dreaded lest a fear of obeying sibi invaderet reliquos popularis (populares), si to him might attack (his) remaining subjects, if supplicium sumptum-foret de illo: punishment might have been taken (had been taken) of him: et ipse jussus à senatu decidere Italiam, and he been ordered by the senate to depart from Italy, profectus-est eodem paucis diebus. Sed postquam set-out to the same (place) in a few days. But after that egressus-est Romam, tacitus, respiciens eò, fertur, he departed from Rome, silent, looking-back thither, he is reported, postremò dixisse, urbem venalem, et maturè lastly to have said, the city (to be) venal, and speedily peritaram, si invenerit emptorem. Interim Albinus, about-to-perish, if it shall have found a purchaser. Meantime Albinus, bello renovato, maturè portare in Africam the war being renewed, (began) speedily to convey into Africa commeatum, stipendum, que alia, quæ forent provision, pay, and other (things), which might be usui militibus: ac ipse statim profectus, for use to soldiers: and himself immediately set-out, ut conficeret bellum armis, aut deditio, aut that he might finish the war by arms, or by surrender, or quovis modo. At Jugurtha contra trahere in any manner. But Jugurtha on-the-other-hand (began) to protract omnia, et facere alias, deinde alias caussas all (things), and to make other, then other causes moræ: pollicere deditio, ac deinde simulare of delay: to promise a surrender, and then to pretend metum: cedere instanti, et paullo pòst instare, fear: to yield (to him) urging, and a-little after to urge ne sui diffiderent: ita ludificare (him), lest his-own (people) might distrust: thus to baffle consulem modò morâ belli, modò pacis. Ac fuêre, the consul now by delay of war, now of peace. And there were qui existumarent (imp. sub.) tum Albinum (some), who might (did) think then Albinus haud ignarum consilii regis; neque crederent not ignorant of the design of the king; nor would believe bellum tam facile tractum ex tantâ properantiâ, the war so easily protracted out-of (after) so-great haste, magis socordiâ quam dolo. Sed postquam, rather from inactivity than by deceit. But after-that, tempore dilapso, dies comitiorum the time having glided-away, the day of the elections adventabat, Albinus, fratre Aulo relicto did approach, Albinus, (his) brother Aulus being left pro prætor in castris, decessit Romam.

 [pro pretor] in the camps, departed (to) Rome.
 Respublica agitabatur atrociter eâ tempestate The commonwealth was harassed dreadfully at that time Romæ tribunitiis seditionibus. P. Lucullus, at Rome by tribunitial seditions. Publius Lucullus, et L. Annius, tribuni plebis, nitebantur and Lucius Annius, tribunes of the people, did strive continuare magistratum, collegis to continue (their) magistracy, (their) colleagues resistentibus: quæ dissensio impediens comitia opposing (it): which dissension did hinder the elections totius anni. Aulus adductus in spem eâ morâ, of the whole year. Aulus being led into hope by that delay, quem diximus supra relictum (esse) proprætore in whom we have said above to have been left (as) proprætor in castris, aut belli conficiundi, aut the camps, either (for the sake) of the war to-be-finished, or pecuniæ capiundæ ab rege terrore exercitûs, of money to-be-taken from the king by the terror of (his) army, evocat milites ex hibernis in expeditionem, calls-out the soldiers out-of winter-quarters into an expedition, mense Januario: que magnis itineribus asperâ in the month January: and by great marches in a rough hieme, pervenit ad oppidum Suthul, ubi thesauri winter, arrived at the town Suthul, where the treasures regis erant. Quod quanquam poterat neque of the king were. Which although [he] was-able neither capi neque obsideri, et saevitiam temporis to be taken nor to be besieged, both by the severity of the time et opportunitate loci, (nam limosa and by the commodiousness [defences] of the place, (for a marshy planicies fecerat paludem hiemalibus aquis circum plain had made a lake from the wintry waters about murum situm in extremo praerupti montis) the wall situate on the extreme (edge) of a rugged mountain) tamen, aut gratiam simulandi, quod adderet however, either for the sake of pretending, in-order-that he might add formidinem regi, aut cæcus cupidine (strike) terror to the king, or blind with a desire potiundi oppidi ob thesauros, agere of possessing the town on-account-of the treasures, (he began) to act vineas, jacere aggerem, que properare (advance) mantelets, to throw-up a mound, and to hasten alia, quæ forent usui incepto. At other (things), which might be for use to the undertaking. But Jugurtha, vanitate atque imperitiâ legati Jugurtha, the vanity and ignorance of the lieutenant cognitâ, subdolus augere amentiam: being known, crafty (began) to increase (his) insanity: missitare supplicantis legatos: ipse, quasi to send-often supplicating ambassadors: himself, as-if vitabundus ductare exercitum per saltuosa avoiding (him) to lead (his) army through woody loca, et tramites. Denique, pepulit Aulum places, and cross-paths. Finally, he forced Aulus spe pactionis, uti Suthule relichto, by the hope of an agreement, that Suthul being left, insequeretur sese in abditas regiones, veluti he might pursue himself into hidden (remote) regions, as-if cedentem: ita delicta fore occultiora. yielding: thus (his) transgressions to be about-to-be more secret.

Interea tentabat exercitum die que noctu, Meantime he did try (tempt) the army by day and by night, per callidos homines: corrumpere centuriones que by crafty men: to corrupt the centurions and duces turmarum, uti transfugarent; uti alii, signo leaders of companies, that they might desert; that others, a sign dato, desererent locum. Quæ postquam being given, might abandon the place. Which (things) after that instruxit ex sententiâ; circumvenit castra he arranged according-to (his) determination; he surrounded the camps Auli de-improviso intempestâ nocte, multitudine of Aulus suddenly in unseasonable night, with a multitude Numidarum. Romani milites, perculsi insolito of Numidians. The Roman soldiers, struck with the unusual tumultu, alii capere arma; alii abdere se; tumult, (began) others to take arms; others to hide themselves; pars confirmare territos; trepidare omnibus part to encourage the affrighted; to tremble in all locis; vis hostium magna; cœlum places; the force of the enemies (was) great; heaven (the sky) obscuratum nocte atque nubibus, periculum darkened by the night and by clouds, the danger (was) anceps: postremò, erat in-uncerto double [on both sides]: lastly, it was doubtful (whether) foret tutius fugere an manere. Sed ex eo it might be safer to flee or to remain. But out-of that numero, quos diximus paullo antè corruptos-(esse), number, whom we have said a little before to have been corrupted, una cohors Ligurum, cum duabus turmis one cohort of Ligurians, with two companies Thracum, et paucis gregariis-militibus, transière of Thracians, and a few common-soldiers, went-over ad regem, et centurio primi-pili tertiae to the king, and a centurion of the first-order of the third legionis dedit locum introeundi hostibus per legion gave a place of entering to the enemies through munitionem, quam acceperat uti defenderet; a fortification, which he had received that he might defend (it); que eā cuncti Numidæ irrupêre. Nostri and by that all the Numidians burst-in. Our (men) plerique armis abjectis, occupavere proxumum most (their) arms being thrown-away, seized the nearest collem foedâ fugâ. Nox atque præda castrorum hill in shameful flight. Night and the spoil of the camps remorata-sunt hostes, quo minus-uterentur delayed the enemies, that they might not use (improve) victoriâ (abl.) Dein Jugurtha postero die facit the victory. Afterwards Jugurtha in the following day makes verba cum Aulo in colloquio: "Tametsi tenet words with Aulus in a conference: "Although he holds ipsum cum exercitu clausum fame que ferro, him with (his) army shut-up by famine and iron tamen se memorem humanarum rerum; (sword), however himself (to be) mindful of human things; si faceret foedus secum, if he would make a treaty with-himself, (that he would be) missurum omnis (omnes) incolumes sub jugum; about-to-send all safe under the yoke; præterea, uti decederet Numidiâ decem besides, that he should depart from Numidia in ten diebus." Quæ quanquam erant gravia et days." Which (things) although they were heavy and plena flagitii, tamen, quia mutabantur metu full of infamy, however, because they were exchanged with the fear mortis, pax convenit, sicuti libuerat regi.

 of death, peace was agreed-on, so-as it had pleased to the king.
 Sed ubi ea comperta-sunt Romæ, metus But when those (things) were discovered at Rome, fear atque moeror invasere civitatem: pars dolere and sorrow attacked the state: part (began) to grieve pro gloriâ imperii; pars, insolita bellicarum for the glory of the empire; part, unused of warlike rerum, timere libertati. Omnes infesti affairs, to fear for (their) liberty. All (were) hostile Aulo, ac maxume qui fuerant sæpè præclari to Aulus, and chiefly (those) who had been often illustrious bello; quòd armatus quæsiverit salutem in war; because being armed he may have sought safety dedecore potius quam manu. Consul by disgrace rather than by hand (by valour). The consul Albinus, timens invidiam ex delicto Albinus, fearing odium from the transgression of (his) fratribus ob ea, ac deinde periculum, brother on-account-of these (things), and then danger [to him-consulebat senatum de foedere: et tamen self], did consult the senate concerning the treaty: and however interim scribere supplementum exercitui; mean-time (began) to write (levy) an addition to the army; arcessere auxilia ab sociis et Latino nomine; to send-for auxiliaries from the allies and the Latin name; denique, festinare omnibus modis. Senatus decernit finally, to hasten in all manners. The senate decrees ita uti fuerat par: "Nullum foedus so as had been equal (proper): "No treaty potuisse fieri suo-injussu to have been-able to be made [could be made] without their-order atque populi." Consul impeditus à and (that) of the people." The consul being hindered by tribunis plebis, ne-portaret secum the tribunes of the people, (that) he might not carry with him copias quas paraverat, proficiscitur in Africam the forces which he had prepared, sets-out into Africa paucis diebus. Nam omnis exercitus deductus in a few days. For all the army being led-away Numidiâ, hiemabat in provinciâ, uti from Numidia, did winter in the province, as convenerat. Postquam venit eò, quamquam it had been agreed-on. After that he came thither, although ardebat animo persecui Jugurtham, et mederi he did burn in mind to pursue Jugurtha, and to remedy fraternal invidiæ, militibus cognitis, quos præter to brotherly odium, the soldiers being known, whom besides fugam, imperio soluto, licentia atque (their) flight, authority being dissolved, licentiousness and lascivia corruperant, statuit ex copia wantonness had corrupted, he determined from the plenty rerum nihil agitandum sibi. of things nothing to be agitated to (by) himself. [From the nature of Interea, C.

 the case, that nothing could be done by him.] Meantime, Caius Mamilius Limetanus, tribunus plebis, promulgat Mamilius Limetanus, tribune of the people, publishes rogationem ad populum Romæ, "Uti quæreretur an inquiry (bill) to the people at Rome, "That it should be inquired in eos, consilio quorum Jugurtha neg-against those, by advice of whom Jugurtha might have (had) con-lexisset decreta senati; que qui accetemned the decrees of the senate; and who might have (had) re-püssent pecunias ab eo in legationibus aut imperiis; ceived moneys from him in embassies or commands; qui tradidissent elephantos, que qui who might have (had) delivered elephants, and who perfugas; item qui fecissent pactiones deserters; likewise who might have (had) made conventions de pace aut bello cum hostibus." Partim about peace or war with the enemies." (Persons) partly consciī sibi, alii metuentes pericula ex invidiā conscious to themselves, others fearing dangers from the odium partium, parabant impedimenta huic rogationi, of parties, did prepare impediments [to this demanded-investigation], (quoniam poterant non resistere aperte, quin (since they were able not to resist openly, but that faterentur illa et talia alia placere they might confess those (things) and such other (things) to please sibi) to themselves) [unless they should be content to confess those, and such occultē per amicos ac maxumē per other things] secretly by (their) friends and chiefly by homines Latini nominis et Italicos socios.
 men of the Latin name (nation) and the Italian allies.
 - Sed est incredibile memoratu, quam intenta But it is incredible to be related, how intent plebes fuerit, que quantâ vi, the common-people may have been (was), and with how-great force, jussserit (perf. sub.), decreverit, voluerit (they) may have ordered, may have decreed, may have willed rogationem, magis odio nobilitatis, cui illa the inquiry (bill), more from hatred of the nobility, for whom those mala parabantur, quam carâ reipublicæ; tanta evils were prepared, than from regard of the state; so-great lubido erat in partibus. Igitur cæteris percusis passion was in the factions. Therefore the rest being struck metu, M. Scaurus, quem memoravimus supra with fear, Marcus Scaurus, whom we have recorded above fuisse legatum Bestiæ, inter lætitiam plebis to have been a lieutenant of Bestia, between the gladness of the people et fugam suorum, civitate etiam tum and the flight of his-own (friends), the state even then (being) trepidâ, cum tres quæsitoris rogarentur fearful, when (as) three inquisitors might be (were) demanded ex Mamilianâ rogatione, effecerat ut from [by] the Mamilian bill, [he] had accomplished that ipse crearetur in eo numero. Sed quæstione he might be created [selected] in that number. But the inquiry exercitâ asperè, que violenter ex rumore, et being carried-on roughly, and violently from report, and lubidine plebis, ut insolentia sæpè ceperat the passion of the people, as intemperance often had taken nobilitatem ex secundis rebus, sic plebem the nobility from favourable things, so (it seized) the people eâ tempestate. Cæterum mos popularium in that time. But the custom of popular partium, et factionum senati, ac deinde omnium parties, and of factions of the senate, and afterwards of all malarum artium, ortus-est paucis annis antè bnd qualities [practices], arose in a few years before Romæ, otio atque abundantia earum rerum quæ at Rome, from leisure and the abundance of those [things] which mortales ducunt prima. Nam antè Carthaginem mortals deem first. For before Carthage deletam, Romanus populus et senatus tractabant being destroyed, the Roman people and the senate did manage rempublicam placide que modeste inter se; the commonwealth quietly and moderately among themselves; neque erat certamen gloriæ neque dominationis neither was (there) a contest of glory nor of supremacy inter cives: hostilis metus retinebat civitatem bonis among citizens: the hostile fear did keep the state in good artibus. Sed ubi illa formido discessit qualities [practices]. But when that terror departed mentibus, scilicet ea lascivja atque superbia from (their) minds, forsooth that wantonness and pride quæ secundæ res amant, incessere. Ita postquam which prosperous things loves, came-on. Thus after-that adepti sunt otium, quod optaverunt in advorsis rebus, they obtained the leisure, which they wished in adverse things, fuit asperius que acerbius. Namque it was more-rough (injurious) and more-bitter. For nobilitas cœpere vertere dignitatem, populus the nobility began to turn (their) dignity, the people (their) libertatem, in lubidinem: quisque ducere, liberty, into passion: every one (began) to draw-away, trahere, rapere sibi. Ita omnia abstracta sunt to drag, to seize for himself. Thus all (things) were drawn-away in duas partis (partes). Respublica, quæ fuerat into two parties. The commonwealth, which had been media, dilacerata-(est). Cæterum nobilitas pollebat middle, was torn-asunder. But the nobility did prevail magis factio: vis plebis, soluta more in party: the force of the common-people being dissolved atque dispersa in multitudinem, minus-poterat: and scattered among the multitude, was less-powerful: agitabatur belli que domi arbitrio paucorum. it was transacted of war (abroad) and at-home by the will of a few.

 Ærarium, provinciæ, magistratus, gloriæ, que triumphi The treasures, the provinces, magistracies, glories, and triumphs erant penes eosdem; populus urgebatur militiæ were in-the-power-of the same; [the people were harassed by war atque inopiâ; imperatores cum paucis diripiebant and want;] the commanders with a few did plunder bellicas prædas. Interea parentes aut parvi liberi the warlike spoils. Mean-while the parents or little children militum pellebantur sedibus, uti quisque of the soldiers were expelled from (their) settlements, as every-one erat confinis potentiori. Ita avaritia was neighbouring to a more-powerful (person). Thus avarice sine modo que modestiâ, cum potentîâ without measure and moderation, with power (began) invadere, polluere, et vastare omnia; habere to attack, to defile, and to waste all (things); to have nihil pensi, neque sancti, nothing of consideration, [to regard nothing], nor of sacred, [nor quoad ipsa præcipitavit semet. Nam as sacred], until it threw-headlong itself. For ubi-primum reperti-sunt ex nobilitate, qui when-first (persons) were found out-of the nobility, who anterponerent veram gloriam injustæ potentiæ, civitas would prefer true glory to unjust power, the state cœpit moveri, et civilis dissensio, quasi permixtio began to be disturbed, and civil discord, as-if a confusion terræ, oriri. Nam postquam Tiberius, et of the earth, (began) to arise. For after-that Tiberius, and C. Gracchus, quorum majores addiderant multum Caius Gracchus, whose ancestors had added much republicæ Punico atque aliis bellis, cœpere vindicare to the state in the Punic and in other wars, began to assert plebem in libertatem, et patefacere scelera the common-people into liberty, and to expose the crimes paucorum; nobilitas noxia atque eò perculsa, of a few; the nobility guilty and therefore struck (terrified), ierat-obviam actionibus Gracchorum, modò per socios had opposed to the processes of the Gracchi, one-time by the allies ac Latinum nomen, interdum per Romanos and the Latin name (nation), sometimes by the Roman equites, quos spes societatis dimoverat à knights, whom the hope of a union had separated from plebe: et primò necaverat ferro the common-people: and first had killed with the iron (sword) Tiberium, dein Caium post paucos annos ingredientem Tiberius, then Caius after a few years entering-on eadem, alterum tribunum, alterum triumvirum the same (things), the other (one) a tribune, the other a triuivir coloniis deducendis, cum M. Fulvio Flacco. Et for colonies to-be-led-on, with Marcus Fulvius Flaccus. And sanè animus satis moderatus fuit haud Gracchis truly a mind sufficiently moderate was not to the Gracchi cupidine victoræ. Sed est satiùs vinci bono from eagerness of victory. But it is preferable to be conquered in a good more, quam vincere injuriam malo. Igitur manner (cause), than to conquer injury in a bad (one). Therefore nobilitas, usâ eâ victoriâ ex suâ lubidine, the nobility, having used that victory according-to their passion, extinxit multos mortales ferro aut fugâ; destroyed many mortals with the iron (sword) or by banishment; que addidit plus timoris quam potentiae sibi in and added more of fear than of power to themselves unto reliquum. Quæ res plerumque pessumthe rest (remaining time). Which thing generally has preci-dedit magnas civitates: dum alteri volunt pitated [destroyed] great states: whilst the others will vincere alteros quovis modo, et ulcisci victos to conquer the others in any manner, and to avenge the conquered acerbiùs. Sed si parem disserere singillatim aut more-bitterly. But if I may prepare to discuss individually or pro magnitudine de studiis in proportion-to the greatness (of the affair) about the zeals partium et omnibus moribus civitatis, tempus deseret of parties and all the morals of the state, time will fail maturiùs quam res. Quamobrem redeo sooner than the thing (subject). Wherefore I return ad incepsum.

 to the undertaking.

Post foedus Auli que foedam fugam nostri After the treaty of Aulus and the disgraceful flight of our exercitūs, Metellus et Silanus, consules designati, army, Metellus and Silanus, the consuls elect, partiverant provincias inter se: que Numidia had shared the provinces between themselves: and Numidia evenerat Metello, acri viro, et quanquam had come (by lot) to Metellus, a vigorous man, and although adverso partibus populi, tamen æquabili adverse to the factions of the people, however with (of) steady et inviolatâ famâ. Ubi is primùm ingressus-est and inviolate report. When he first entered-on magistratum, ratus omnia alia sibi cum the magistracy, having thought all other (things) for himself with collegâ, intendit animum ad bellum quod (his) colleague, he applies (his) mind to the war which erat gesturus. Igitur diffidens veteri exercitui, he was about to carry-on. Therefore distrusting to the old army, scribere milites, arcessere præsidia (he began) to write (levy) soldiers, to send-for protections [aid] undique: parare arma, tela, equos, et cætera from-every-side: to prepare arms, weapons, horses, and the other instrumenta militiæ, ad hoc commeatum instruments of warfare, to this (besides) provision affatim; denique, omnia quæ solent esse abundantly; finally, all (things) which are accustomed to be usui in vario bello, et egenti multarum rerum. for use in a changeable war, and needing of many things.

 Cæterum senatus adnitezatur ad ea But the senate did strive to those (things) patranda auctoritate, socii que Latinum to-be-accomplished by (its) authority, the allies and the Latin nomen et reges mittendo auxilia ultro, name (nation) and kings by sending auxiliaries voluntarily, postremo omnis civitas summo studio.
 |lastly all the state (did strive) with the highest zeal.
 Itaque omnibus rebus paratis que compositis Therefore all things being prepared and arranged ex sententiâ, proficiscitur in Numidiam, according-to determination, he sets-out into Numidia, magnâ spe civium, cùm propter bonas with great hope of the citizens, as well on-account-of (his) good artis (artes), tûm maxumè quòd gerebat invictum qualities, as chiefly because he did bear an unconquered animum advorsum divitias: ante id tempus nostræ mind. against riches: before that time our opes contusæ-erant que hostium auctæ resources had been bruised and (those) of the enemies increased avaritiâ magistratum. Sed ubi venit in by the avarice of the magistrates. But when he came into Africam, exercitus Spurii Albini, pro consule, Africa, the army of Spurius Albinus, [acting] for the consul, traditur ei, iners, imbellis, patiens neque is delivered to him, inactive, unwarlike, enduring neither periculi neque laboris, promptior linguâ quam of danger nor of labour, more-ready in tongue than manu, prædator ex sociis, et ipse præda in hand (action), a plunderer from allies, and itself the prey hostium, habitus sine imperio et modestiâ. Ita of the enemies, held without authority and moderation. Thus plus sollicitudinis accedebat novo imperatori ex more of anxiety did accrue to the new commander from malis moribus, quam auxili aut bonæ spei (their) bad habits, than of aid or of good hope ex copiâ militum. Tamen Metellus statuit from the abundance of the soldiers. However Metellus resolved non attingere bellum priùs quam not to touch the war before than he might have (had) coëgisset milites laborare disciplinâ compelled the soldiers to labour (under) the discipline of (our) majorum, quamquam mora imminuerat et tempus ancestors, although the delay had diminished both the time aestivorum comitiorum, et putabat animos of the summer elections, and he did think the minds civium intentos, expectatione eventi. Nam of the citizens intent-on (him), by expectation of the issue. For Albinus, perculsus clade fratris Auli que Albinus, struck with the defeat of (his) brother Aulus and exercitūs, habebat milites plerumque stativis of the army, did hold the soldiers generally in stationary castris, quantum temporis æstivorum fuit camps, as-much of the time of the summer-quarters [as] he was in imperio, postquam decreverat non egredi in authority, after-that he had resolved not to go-out provinciâ, nisi cùm odos aut egestas pabuli from the province, unless when the stench or want of forage subegerat mutare locum. Sed neque had compelled (him) to change (his) place. But neither vigilæ deducebantur militari more; ut the watches were conducted in a military manner; as lubebat cuique, aberat ab signis.

 it did please to every-one, he was-absent from (his) standards.
 Lixæ, permisti cum militibus, vagabantur The victuallers, intermixed with the soldiers, did stray-about diu que noctu: et palantes vastare by-day and by night: and roving (were accustomed) to ravage agros, expugnare villas, certantes agere prædas the lands, to assault the country-seats, vying to drive booties pecoris et mancipiorum; que mutare ea of cattle and of slaves; and to exchange those advectitio vino et talibus aliis cum mercatoribus: for imported wine and such other (things) with the merchants: præterea vendere frumentum datum publicè, besides to sell the corn given publicly (at public mercari panem indies: postremò, quæcunque expense), to traffic-in bread daily: lastly, whatever proba ignaviæ que luxuriæ queunt dici aut disgraces of laziness and of luxury can be said or fingi, cuncta fuere in illo exercitu, et alia be imagined, all (those) were in that army, and others ampliùs. Sed comperior Metellum fuisse more (besides). But I find Metellus to have been non minùs magnum et sapientem virum in eâ not less a great and wise man in that difficultate, quam in hostilibus rebus: moderatum (esse) difficulty, than in hostile affairs: to have governed tantâ temperantiâ inter ambitionem que with so-great moderation between ambition and sævitiam. Namque primum sustulisse severity. For (I find him) first to have withdrawn adjumenta ignaviae edicto, “quisquam the aids of laziness by an edict, “(that) any-one ne-venderet panem in castris, aut quem alium should-not-sell bread in the camps, or any other coctum cibum; lixæ ne-sequerentur exercitum; cooked food; (that) scullions should not-follow the army; gregarius miles ne-haberet servum aut (that) a common soldier should-not-have a slave or jumentum in castris, neve in agmine;” a beast-of-burthen in the camps, nor in the army statuisse modum artè ceteris; (on the march):” to have appointed a limit closely to the rest; præterea movere castra quotidiè transvorsis moreover to move the camps daily by cross itineribus; munire vallo atque fossâ journeys; to fortify (them) with a rampart and with a ditch juxta ac-si hostes adessent; ponere equally as-if the enemies might be (were) at-hand; to place crebras vigilias, et ipse cum legatis frequent watches, and himself with the lieutenants circuire eas; item adesse modò in agmine to go-round them; likewise to be-present one-time in the troop (march) in primis, modò in postremis, sæpè in medio, among the first, one-time among the last, often in the middle, ne quisquam egredetur ordine; uti miles lest any-one might go-out from the rank; that the soldier portaret cibum et arma, cùm incederent should carry food and arms, when they might (did) proceed frequentes signis. Ita numerous [when they marched in a body] with the standards. Thus confirmavit exercitum brevè, magis prohibendo à he strengthened the army shortly, more by preventing from delictis quam vindicando. Interea ubi Jugurtha transgressions than by punishing. Mean-time when Jugurtha accepit ex nunciis, quæ Metellus received (heard) from messengers, what (things) Metellus agebat; simul factus certior Romæ de did act; at-the-same-time being made more-sure at Rome of innocentia ejus, diffidere suis rebus, ac the integrity of him, (he began) to distrust in his-own affairs, and tum demum conatus-est facere veram deditioñem. then at-last endeavoured to make a true (real) surrender.

 Igitur mittit legatos ad consulem cum suppliciis, Therefore he sends ambassadors to the consul with entreaties, qui peterent tantummodo vitam ipsi que liberis, who might ask only life for himself and children, dederent omnia alia might surrender [that he would surrender] all other (things) Romano populo. Sed cognitum-erat jam antea to the Roman people. But it had been known already before experimentis Metello, genus Numidarum esse infidum, by trials to Metellus, the race of the Numidians to be faithless, mobili ingenio, avidum novarum rerum. with changeable disposition, eager of new things (revolution).
 Itaque aggreditur legatos diversos alium ab alio; Therefore he accosts the ambassadors apart one from the other; ac tentando paullatim, postquam cognovit and by trying (them) by degrees, after-that he knew (them) oportunos sibi, persuadet pollicendo multa, convenient for himself, he persuades (them) by promising many uti traderent Jugurtham sibi maxumè (things), that they should deliver Jugurtha to himself particularly vivum, sin id procedat parum, necatum: cæterum alive, but-if that may succeed little (not), killed: but jubet nunciari palam regi, quæ forent he orders to be announced openly to the king, what (things) might be ex voluntate. Deinde ipse procedit according-to (his) will. Afterwards himself proceeds in Numidiam paucis diebus, intento atque infesto into Numidia in a few days, with a prepared and hostile exercitu: ubi tuguria erant plena hominum, army: where the cots were full of men, pecora (pl.) que cultores in agris, contra the cattle and the cultivators (were) in the fields, contrary-to faciem belli: præfecti regis procedebant obvii the appearance of war: the prefects of the king did proceed opposite ex oppidis et mapalibus, parati dare (towards him) out-of the towns and cottages, prepared to give frumentum, portare commeatum, postremò facere corn, to carry provision, finally to do omnia quæ imperarentur. Neque Metellus all (things) which might be ordered. Neither Metellus idcirco minùs incedere munito agmine, therefore (began) the less to proceed with a guarded troop, [Metellus sed pariter did not on that account march with less precaution], but equally ac-si hostes adessent, explorare latè as-if the enemies might be (were) at-hand, to search widely omnia, credere illa signa deditioñis ostentui, all (things), to believe those signs of a surrender for a show, et tentare locum insidiis.

 and to try (sound) the place for ambuscades. [And that the enemy Itaque ipse erat only sought a proper place for an ambuscade.] Therefore himself was cum expeditis cohortibus, item delectâ manu with the light-armed cohorts, also with a chosen band funditorum et saggitariorum, apud primos; of slingers and archers, at (among) the first [in front]; C. Marius legatus curabat cum Caius Marius (his) lieutenant did take care (was on duty) with equitibus in postremo: dispertiverat the cavalry in the last (the rear): he had shared (dividea) auxiliaros equites tribunis legionum, et præfectis the auxiliary cavalry to the tribunes of the legions, and to the prefects cohortium, in utrumque latus; uti velites of cohorts, unto each side (wing); that the skirmishers permixti cum his, propulsarent equitatus (pl.) being mingled with these, might repulse the cavalry hostium, quæcunque accederent. Nam erat of the enemies, wheresoever they might approach. For (there) was tantus dolus in Jugurthā, que tanta peritia locorum so-great deceit in Jugurtha, and so-great knowledge of the places et militiæ, ut haberetur in-uncerto absens and of warfare, that it might be held doubtful (whether) absent an præsens, gerens pacem an bellum, esset or present, carrying-on peace or war, he might be perniciosior. Erat haud longè ab eo intinere, more-destructive. There was not far from that route, quo Metellus pergebat, oppidum Numidarum, by which Metellus did proceed, a town of the Numidians, nomine Vacca, forum venalium rerum, maxumè by name Vacca, a mart of saleable things, most celebratum totius regni; ubi multi mortales Italici frequented of the whole kingdom; where many mortals of the Italian generis consueverant et incolere et mercari. race had been accustomed both to dwell and to purchase.

 Huc consul, gratiâ simul tentandi, Hither the consul (went), for the sake at-the-same-time of trying (it), et si opportunitates loci paterentur, imposuit and if opportunities of the place might suffer (it), he placed præsidium: præterea imperavit comportare a garrison: moreover he ordered (them) to bring frumentum, et alia, quæ forent usui bello: corn, and other (things), which might be for use in war: ratus id, quod res monebat, frequentiam having thought that, which the affair did advise, the assemblage negotiatorum et commeatum juvaturum of merchants and of provisions [there] about-to-assist exercitum, et jam fore the army, [would aid his army], and now to be about-to-be munimento rebus paratis. for a defence [and would now be a defence] for the things prepared.
 Inter hæc negotia, Jugurtha modò mittere Among these affairs, Jugurtha now (began) to send impensiùs supplices legatos, orare pacem: more-earnestly suppliant ambassadors, to entreat peace: dedere omnia Metello præter suam vitam to surrender all (things) to Metellus except his life que liberorum. Quos consul dimittebat and (that) of (his) children. Whom the consul did dismiss item domum, uti priores, illectos ad also home, [and] as the former, being allured [by him] to proditionem: neque abnuere neque polliceri treachery: (he appeared) neither to refuse nor to promise regi pacem quam postulabat, et, inter eas to the king the peace which he did require, and, among those moras, exspectare promissa legatorum. delays, to await the promises of the ambassadors.

Ubi Jugurtha composuit dicta Metelli cum When Jugurtha compared the words of Metellus with (his) factis, ac animadvertisit se tentari suis artibus; deeds, and perceived himself to be tried by his-own arts; quippe cui pax nunciabatur verbis, cæterum forsooth to whom peace was announced in words, but re asperrium bellum erat, maxima in the thing (in reality) the roughest war was, [for] a very-great urbs alienata, ager cognitus hostibus, animi city [was] alienated, the land known to the enemies, the minds popularium tentati; coactus (affections) of (his) country-men tried [tampered with]; compelled necessitudine rerum, statuit certare armis. Igitur, by the necessity of things, he determined to contend by arms. Therefore, itinere hostium explorato, adductus in spem the route of the enemies being reconnoitred, being led into the hope victoriae ex opportunitate loci, parat copias of victory from the convenience of the place, he prepares forces omnium generum quam-maxumas potest, ac antevenit of all kinds as-great-as he is-able, and outstrips exercitum Metelli per occultos tramites. Flumen, the army of Metellus by concealed by-paths. A river, nomine Muthul, oriens à meridie, erat in eâ by name Muthul, rising from the south, was in that parte Numidiæ, quam Atherbal possederat in part of Numidia, which Adherbal had possessed in divisione; à quo mons aberat fermè viginti the division; from which a mountain was-distant nearly twenty millia passuum, pari tractu, thousands of paces, in an equal [parallel] direction [with the river], vastus ab natura et humano cultu; desert from nature and human cultivation; [and uncultivated sed collis oriebatur quasi ex medio eo, by man]; but a hill did arise as-if from the middle-of it, pertinens in immensum, vestitus oleastro ac reaching unto an immense (extent), clothed with wild-olive and myrtetis, que aliis generibus arborum, quæ with myrtle-groves, and with other kinds of trees, which gignuntur arido atque arenoso humi. Autem are produced in a dry and sandy (soil) on-the-ground. But media planities deserta, panuria aquæ, the middle plain (was) desert, [as there was] a scarcity of water, præter loca propinquæ flumini: ea consita except the places near to the river: those planted arbustis frequentabantur pecore atque cultoribus. with shrubs were frequented by cattle and by husbandmen.

 Igitur Jugurtha, acie suorum extenuatâ, Therefore Jugurtha, the line of his (men) being lengthened, consedit in eo colle, quem docuimus encamped in that hill, which we have taught (shown) (to be) porrectam transverso itinere: præfecit extended in a transverse way (direction): he appointed Bomilcarem elephantis et parti pedestrium copiarum; Bomilcar to the elephants and to part of the foot forces; que edocet eum quæ ageret: ipse propior and instructs him what (things) he should do: himself nearer montem collocat suos cum omni equitatu et the mountain places his (men) with all the cavalry and delectis peditibus: dein circumiens singulas turmas [chosen] foot: then going-round each-of the companies et manipulos, monet atque obtestatur, uti, memores and divisions, he reminds and beseeches, that, mindful pristinæ virtutis et victoriaræ, defendant of (their) ancient valour and victory, they may defend sese que suum regnum ab avaritiâ Romanorum: themselves and his kingdom from the avarice of the Romans.

certamen fore cum his quos miserint (perf. sub. the contest to be about-to-be with those whom they may have sent (they victos anteā sub jugum: ducem, non animum, sent) conquered before under the yoke: the general, not the mind, mutatum-(esse) illis: omnia quæ decuerint to have been changed for them: all (things) which may have been-fit (perf. sub.) ab imperatore, provisa-(esse) suis; [to provide] from a commander, to have been provided for his (men); locum (esse) superiorem, consererent manum.

the place (ground) to be superior, they should join hand (battle), uti prudentes cum imperitis, ne as skilful (persons) with unskilful, [in the localities], not (as) pauciores cum pluribus, aut rudes cum the fewer with the mere-(numerous), or the ignorant with meliорibus bello: proinde essent parati the better [skilled] in war: wherefore they should be prepared que intenti, signo dato, invadere Romanos: illum and ready, a signal being given, to attack the Romans: that diem aut confirmaturum omnes labores et day either (to be) about-to-establish all (their) labours and victorias, aut fore initium maxumarum victories, or to be about-to-be the beginning of the greatest ærumnarum. Ad hoc commonefacere miseries. To this (besides) (he began) to remind sui beneficii, et ostentare eum ipsum (each) of his kindness, and to point-out that (person) himself aliis, viritim, uti extulerat quemque pecuniâ [to others,] individually, as he had exalted each by money aut honore ob militare facinus: postremò, or by honour on-account-of a military exploit: finally, excitare alium alio modo, pollicendo pro to rouse another in another manner, by promising according-to ingenio cujusque, minitando, obtestando: cum the disposition of every-one, by often-threatening, by beseeching: when interim Metellus, ignarus hostium, degrediens [in the mean-time] Metellus, ignorant of the enemies, coming-down monte, conspicatur cum exercitu. Primò, from the mountain, espies (him) with (his) army. First, dubius quidnam insolita facies ostenderet, (nam doubtful what the unusual appearance might display, (for equi que Numidæ consederant inter virgulta, the horses and the Numidians had encamped among the shrubs, neque planè occultati humilitate arborum, et neither quite concealed by the lowness of the trees, and tamen incerti quidnam esset, ipsi atque however uncertain what it might be, themselves and militaria signa obscurati cùm naturâ loci, the military standards being concealed as-well by the nature of the place, tùm dolo), dein insidiis cognitis brevì, as by stratagem), then the ambuscades being known shortly, constituit agmen paulisper. Ibi ordinibus he halted the troop (army) a-little. There the ranks commutatis, instruxit aciem triplicibus being changed, he arrayed (his) line with triple subsidiis, in dextro latere, quod erat proximum reserves, on the right side (flank), which was nearest hostes: dispertit funditores et sagittarios the enemies: he divides the slingers and archers inter manipulos; locat omnem equitatum in among the companies; places all the cavalry in cornibus; ac cohortatus milites pauca the wings; and having exhorted the soldiers a few (words) pro tempore, deducit aciem in planum, according to the time, he leads-down the line into the level (ground) principiis transversis sicuti the van-guards (being led) across [the front being changed] so-as instruxerat. Sed ubi animadvertisit Numidas he had arrayed (them). But when he perceived the Numidians quietos, neque degredi colle, veritus ex quiet, nor to come-down from the hill, having feared from tempore anni et inopiâ aquæ, ne exercitus the time of the year and the want of water, lest the army conficeretur siti, præmisit legatum Rutilium might be spent with thirst, he sent-forward the lieutenant Rutilius cum expeditis cohortibus et parte equitum, ad with the light-armed cohorts and part of the cavalry, to flumen, uti antecaperet locum castris, the river, that he might take-previous a place for the camps, existumans hostes remoraturos suum iter thinking the enemies about-to-retard his march crebro impetu, et transvorsis præliis, by frequent assault, and indirect battles, [and flank attacks,] et quoniam diffiderent armis, tentaturos and since they might distrust to arms, (to be) about-to-try lassitudinem et sitim militum. the fatigue and thirst of the soldiers. [And since he (Jugurtha) distrusted a battle, he was about to try the effects of fatigue and thirst on Dein ipse procedere paullatim, our soldiers.] Afterwards himself (began) to advance gradually, pro re atque loco, sicuti descenderat according-to the affair and the place, just-as he had descended monte: habere Marium post principia; from the mountain: to have Marius behind the vanguards; ipse esse cum equitibus sinistræ alæ, qui himself [Metellus] to be with the cavalry of the left wing, who facti-erant principes in agmine. had been made chiefs (the van) on the troop (on the march).

 At ubi Jugurtha videt extreum agmen Metelli But when Jugurtha sees the last troop of Metellus prætergressum suos primos, occupat montem having passed his-own first, he occupies the mountain præsidio quasi duūm millium peditum, quā with a guard as-if (about) of two thousand infantry, where Metellus descenderat: ne fortè adversariis Metellus had descended: lest by-chance, the enemies cedentibus foret receptui, ac pòst munimento: retreating it might be for a refuge, and afterwards for a defence: dein, signo dato repente, invadit hostes. Alii then, a signal being given suddenly, he attacks the enemies. Other Numidæ cædere postremos: pars tentare Numidians (began) to strike the last: part to try (them) à sinistrâ ac dextrâ: infensi adesse, atque from the left and right: hostile to be-at-hand, and instare: conturbare ordines Romanorum omnibus to press-on: to disturb the ranks of the Romans in all locis; quorum etiam qui fuerant obvii places; of whom even (those) who had been opposite (opposed) hostibus firmioribus animis, ludificati incerto to the enemies with more-strong minds, baffled by the uncertain prælio, ipsi modò sauciabantur eminùs, neque battle, themselves now were wounded at-a-distance, nor erat copia contrà feriundi aut was there plenty (the means) on-the-other-hand of striking (them) or conserendi manum. Equites docti jam of joining hand (battle). The cavalry being taught already antè ab Jugurthâ, recipiebant sese before by Jugurtha, did betake themselves (did retreat) non confertim, neque in unum, ubicunque turma not closely, nor in one (body), whenever a company Romanorum cœperat insequi, sed quām-maximè of the Romans had begun to pursue, but as-much-as-possible divorsi, alius alio. Ita priores apart, the other (one) from the other. Thus (being) superior numero, si nequierant deterrire hostes à in number, if they had been-unable to deter the enemies from persequendo, circumveniebant disjectos ab pursuing, they did surround (them) scattered from tergo aut lateribus: sin collis opportunior the back [rear] or the sides: but-since the hill (was) more-convenient fugæ quām campi fuerant, eà verò equi for flight than the plains had been, there truly the horses Numidarum consueti evadere facilè of the Numidians being accustomed (were able) to escape easily inter virgulta; asperitas et insolentia loci among the shrubs; the roughness and unusualness of the place retinebat nostros. Cæterum facies totius did keep-back our (men). But the appearance of the whole negotii varia, incerta, foeda, atque miserabilis; business (was) variable, uncertain, foul, and wretched; pars dispersi à suis, cedere, alii insequi; part scattered from their-own, (began) to give-way, others to pursue; observare neque signa neque ordines: ubi to regard neither standards nor ranks: where periculum ceperat quemque, resistere ac propulsare danger had taken each, to resist and to repulse ibi: arma, tela, equi, viri, hostes, cives there: arms, weapons, horses, men, enemies, citizens [were] permixti; nihil agi consilio neque imperio; intermingled; nothing to be acted by counsel nor by command; fors regere omnia. Itaque multum diei chance to govern all (things). Therefore much of the day processerat, cum etiam tum eventus erat in incerto. had advanced, when even then the issue was in a doubtful Denique, omnibus languidis labore et (state). Finally, all (being) faint by labour and æstu, ubi Metellus videt Numidas instare minus, by heat, when Metellus sees the Numidians to press-on less, conducit milites paullatim in unum; he leads-together the soldiers gradually into one (body); restituit ordines, et collocat quatuor legionarias he restores the ranks, and places four legionary cohortes advorum pedites hostium. Magna cohorts against the foot-soldiers of the enemies. A great pars eorum fessa considerat superioribus locis. part of them wearied had sat-down on the higher places.

Simul orare, hortari milites,
At-the-same-time (he began) to beseech, to exhort the soldiers, “Ne-deficerent, neu paterentur fugientes “(That) they should not fail, nor should suffer fleeing hostes vincere: neque castra neque ullum enemies to conquer (them): neither camps nor any munimentum esse illis, quod cedentes fortification to be for them, whither yielding tenderent: omnia sita in armis.” they might proceed-to: all (things to be) placed in arms.”

Sed nec quidem erat Jugurtha quietus interea; But neither [indeed] was Jugurtha quiet mean-time; circuire, hortari, renovare prælium, et (he began) to go-about, to exhort, to renew the battle, and ipse cum delectis tentare omnia; subvenire himself with chosen (men) to try all (things); to relieve suis; instare hostibus dubiis, retinere, to his-own (men); to press-on to the enemies doubtful, to retain quos cognoverat firmos, pugnando eminus.

(those) whom he had known firm, for fighting at-a-distance.

Duo imperatores, summi viri, certabant eo The two commanders, very-great men, did contend in that modo inter se: ipsi pares, ceterum manner between themselves: themselves equal, but disparibus opibus. Nam virtus militum erat with unequal resources. For bravery of soldiers was Metello, locus advorsus: omnia alia opportuna to Metellus, the place adverse: all other (things) convenient Jugurthæ, præter milites. Denique, [favourable] to Jugurtha, except (his) soldiers. Finally, ubi Romani intelligunt nequo perfugium esse when the Romans understand neither a refuge to be sibi, neque copiam pugnandi fieri ab for themselves, nor plenty (means) of fighting to be made by hoste, et jam erat vesper diei, evadunt the enemy, and now it was the evening of the day, they depart advorso colle, sicuti on the opposite hill, [they charge up the hill,] as præceptum-fuerat. Loco amissso, Numidæ it had been instructed (them). The place being lost, the Numidians fusi que fugati, pauci interiere: velocitas, (were) routed and put-to-flight, a few perished: (their) swiftness, et regio ignara hostibus tutata-sunt plerosque. and a country unknown to the enemies protected most.

Interea Bomilcar, quem diximus supra præfectum Meantime Bomilcar, whom we have said above to have been set-over elephantis et parti pedestrium copiarum ab to the elephants and to part of the foot forces by Jugurthæ, deducit suos paullatim in æquum Jugurtha, leads down his (men) gradually into the level locum, ubi Rutilius prætergressus-est eum; ac place, when Rutilius passed-by him; and quietus exornat aciem, uti res postulabat, dum tranquil arrays (his) line, as the affair did require, while legatus pergit festinans ad flumen, quod the lieutenant proceeds hastening to the river, whither præmissus-erat; neque remittit explorare quid he had been sent-before; nor does he relax to examine what hostis ageret ubique. Postquam accepit the enemy might do every-where. After-that he received (heard) Rutilium consedisse jam, et vacuum Rutilius to have encamped already, and (to be) empty (free from animo, que simul clamorem augeri anxiety) in mind, and at-the-same-time the shout to be increased ex prælio Jugurthæ, veritus ne legatus, re from the battle of Jugurtha, having feared lest the lieutenant, the affair cognitâ, foret auxilio suis laborantibus, being known, might be for aid to his-own [hard-pressed] (people), porrigit aciem latius, quo obficeret he stretches (his) line more-widely, [by which he might hinder itineri hostium quam diffidens virtuti the march of the enemy] which distrusting to the valour of (his) militum, statuerat artè; que eo modo procedit soldiers, he had arranged closely; and in that manner he proceeds ad castra Rutilii. Romani animadvertunt to the camps of Rutilius. The Romans perceive magnam vim pulveris ex-improviso; nam a great force (quantity) of dust suddenly; for ager consitus arbustis prohibebat prospectum. Et the land planted with shrubs did prevent the view. And primò rati aridam humum agitari vento; first having thought the dry ground to be disturbed by the wind; pòst, ubi vident manere æquabilem, et afterwards, when they see (it) to remain equal, and appropinquare magis que magis, sicuti acies to approach more and more, as if the line [of the movebatur, re cognitâ, properantes army] was moved, the affair being known, hastening capiunt arma, ac consistunt pro castris, sicuti they take arms, and stand before the camps, as imperabatur. Deinde, ubi ventum-est propius, it was ordered. Afterwards, when it was come nearer, concurritur utrumque magno clamore. Numidæ it is rushed on-both-sides with a great shout. The Numidians remorati tantummodo dum putant auxilium having delayed (stood) only whilst they think aid in elephantis, postquam vident eos impeditos in the elephants, after-that they see them hindered ramis arborum, atque ita disjectos circumveniri, by the branches of the trees, and thus scattered to be surrounded, faciunt fugam: ac plerique, armis abjectis, they make flight: and most, (their) arms being thrown-away, abeunt integri auxilio collis, aut noctis, depart whole (unhurt) by the aid of the hill, or of the night, quæ jam aderat. Quatuor elephanti capti, which now was at-hand. Four elephants (were) taken, omnes reliqui, quadraginta numero, interfici. all the rest, forty in number, (were) killed.

At quanquam Romani erant fessi itinere, atque But although the Romans were wearied by the journey, and opere castrorum, et læti que prælio, tamen by the work of the camps, and glad also by the battle, however quod Metellus morabatur amplius opinione, because Metellus did delay more (than) opinion, procedunt obviam [longer than they thought he ought,] they advance towards (him) instructi que intenti: nam dolus. Numidarum arrayed and prepared: for the deceit of the Numidians patiebatur nihil languidi neque remissi. did suffer nothing of faint nor of relaxed (conduct).
Ac primò, nocte obscurâ, postquam erant And first, the night (being) dark, after-that they were haud procul inter se, alteri not far between themselves, [the Romans,] the others (began) facere formidinem et tumultum simul apud to make terror and tumult at-the-same-time among alteros strepitu, the others by the noise, [they each alarmed one another by the noise velut hostes adventare: et and tumult,] as-if the enemies (began) to come-up: and miserabile facinus admissum (esset), pænè a wretched deed would have been committed, almost imprudentiâ, ni equites præmissi utrumque by ignorance, unless cavalry being sent-forward on-either-side exploravissent rem. Igitur pro might have (had) examined the affair. Therefore instead-of metu, gaudium exortum (est) repente; milites læti fear, joy arose suddenly; the soldiers joyful appellant alius alium, edocent acta, accost another (one) another, they inform [tell] (their) deeds, atque audiunt: quisque fert sua fortia and hear (others'): every-one carries (extols) his-own brave facta ad cœlum. Quippe humanæ res habent deeds to heaven. Forsooth human affairs have sese ita: in victoriâ licet vel ignavis themselves thus: in victory it is lawful or (even) to the cowardly gloriari: advorsæ res detrectant etiam to boast: adverse things detract (sink the courage of) even bonos. Metellus moratus quatriduo (sing.) in the good. Metellus having delayed four-days in iisdem castris, reficit saucios cum curâ: donat the same camps, refreshes the wounded with care: he presents meritos in prælio more (rewards those) having deserved-well in the battle in the manner militiæ; laudat universos in concione, atque agit of warfare; he praises all in an assembly, and acts gratias: hortatur, gerant parem (returns) thanks: he exhorts (them), [that] they may bear an equal animum ad cætera, quæ sunt levia: mind (spirit) to the rest, which are light (things): pugnatum (esse) satis jam pro victoriâ, reliquos to have been fought sufficiently now for victory, the rest labores fore pro prædâ. Tamen misit (remaining) labours to be about-to-be for spoil. However he sent interim transfugas et alios opportunos mean-time deserters and others convenient (persons) exploratum ubi gentium Jugurtha, to examine where of nations (where-in-the-world) Jugurtha aut quid agitaret; ne esset cum (might be), or what he might act; whether he might be with paucis, an haberet exercitum; ut, victus, a few, or might have an army; how, being conquered, gereret sese. At ille receperat sese in he might conduct himself. But he had betaken himself into saltuosa loca, et munita naturâ; que ibi cogebat woody places, and fortified by nature; and there did collect exercitum ampliorem numero hominum, sed hebetem an army very-copious in number of men, but dull que infirmum, cultorem agri ac pecoris magis and weak, a cultivator of the land and cattle more quam belli. Id eveniebat eâ gratiâ, quod than of war. That did happen from that favour (account), because nemo omnium Numidarum sequitur regem ex fugâ no-one of all the Numidians follows the king from flight præter regios equites: discedunt eò, quod except the royal cavalry: they depart thither, whither animus cujusque fert: neque id ducitur the mind of every-one carries (him): neither that is led (deemed) flagitium militiæ: ita mores habent se. Igitur a crime of warfare: thus manners have themselves. Therefore ubi Metellus videt animum regis etiam tum esse when Metellus sees the mind of the king even then to be ferocem; bellum renovari, quod posset non fierce; the war to be renewed, which might be able not geri nisi ex lubidine illius, præterea to be carried-on unless from the pleasure of him, [Jugurtha,] besides iniquum certamen sibi cum hostibus, a disadvantageous contest for himself [Metellus] with the enemies, illos vinci minore detimento quam suos them to be conquered with less loss than his-own (soldiers) vincere, to conquer, [that he (Metellus) would suffer a greater loss when victor, statuit bellum than the enemy would when vanquished,] he resolved the war gerundum non præliis, neque acie, sed to be carried-on not by skirmishes, nor in-open-battle, but alio more. Itaque pergit in opulentissima in another manner. Therefore he proceeds into the most-wealthy loca Numidiæ; vastat agros; capit multa castella places of Numidia; ravages the lands; takes many castles et oppida, munita temerè, aut sine præsilio, and towns, fortified rashly (in a hurry), or without garrison, que incendit, jubet puberes interfici; omnia and burns (them), orders the adults to be killed; all alia esse prædam militum. Èa formidine other (things) to be the booty of the soldiers. From that terror multi mortales dediti obsides Romanis: many mortals (were) surrendered (as) hostages to the Romans: frumentum, et alia quæ forent usui, corn, and other (things) which might be for use, (were) præbita affatim: præsidium impositum ubiunque afforded abundantly: a garrison (was) placed wherever res postulabat. Quæ negotia terrebant the thing did require [one]. Which transactions did affright regem multo magis quam prælium malè pugnatum the king by much more than the battle ill fought ab suis. Quippe, omnis spes cuius erat by his-own (men). Forsooth (he), all the hope of whom was sita in fugâ, cogebarur sequi; et qui placed in flight, was compelled to follow; and (he) who nequiverat defendere sua loca had been-unable to defend his-own [advantageous] places (was forced) genere bellum in alienis. to carry-on war in others' (places). [In places chosen by another.] Tamen capit consilium quod videbatur optimum However he takes the counsel which did seem best ex inopiâ: jubet plerumque exercitum opperiri from necessity: he orders most-of the army to await (him) in eisdem locis; ipse sequitur Metellum cum in the same places; himself follows Metellus with delectis equitibus: ignoratus chosen cavalry: unknown [unobserved by the Romans] by (his) nocturnis et aviis itineribus, aggreditur repente nightly and pathless routes, he attacks suddenly Romanos palantes. Plerique eorum inermes the Romans straggling. Most of them (being) unarmed cadunt, multi capiuntur: nemo omnium profugit fall, many are taken: no-one of all escaped intactus; et Numidæ discedunt in proximos untouched; and the Numidians depart into the nearest colles, sicuti jussi-erant, prius quam hills, so-as they had been ordered, before than it(they) subveniretur ex castris. Interim rebus Metelli might be assisted from the camps. Mean-time the affairs of Metellus cognitis, ingens gaudium ortum (est) Romæ: ut being known, great joy arose at Rome: how gereret que se et exercitum more he might (did) conduct both himself and the army in the manner majorum; in adverso loco, tamen, of (our) ancestors; (though) in an adverse place, however, fuisset (plup. sub.) vicer virtute; he might have (had) been a conqueror by (his) valour; might (did) potiretur agro hostium; coëgisset possess with the land of the enemies; might have (had) compelled Jugurtham, magnificum ex socordiâ Auli, habere Jugurtha, splendid from the laziness of Aulus, to have spem salutis in solitudine aut fugâ. Itaque hope of safety in solitude or in flight. Therefore senatus decernere supplicia immortalibus the senate (determined) to decree thanksgivings to the immortal Diis ob ea feliciter acta: civitas, Gods on-account-of those (things) fortunately transacted: the state, trepida anteâ, et sollicita de eventu belli, fearful before, and anxious about the issue of the war, (began) agere lœta: fama esse præclara de Metello. to act joyful: report to be illustrious about Metellus.

 Igitur intentior eo, niti ad Therefore more prepared on that (account), (he began) to strive to (for) victoriâ: festinare omnibus modis; tamen cavere, victory: to hasten in all manners; however to beware, necubi fieret opportunus hosti; lest-any-where he might become convenient to the enemy; <sup>to give an</sup> meminisse advantageous opportunity to the enemy;] to have remembered (to re--invidiam sequi post gloriam. Ita quo member) envy to follow after glory. Thus by what erat clarior, eò (erat) (by how much) he was more-illustrious, by that (by so much) (he was) magis anxius: neque prædari effuso more anxious: nor (did he permit) to plunder with a scattered exercitu post insidias Jugurthæ. Ubi erat opus army after the snares of Jugurtha. When there was need frumento aut pabulo, cohortes agitabant with (of) corn or with forage, the cohorts did carry-on præsidium cum omni equitatu: ipse ducebat partem guard with all the cavalry: himself did lead part exercitūs, Marius reliquos. Sed ager vastabatur of the army, Marius the rest. But the land was ravaged magis igni, quam prædâ. Faciebant castra duobus more by fire, than by plunder. They did make camps in two locis haud longè inter se. Ubi erat opus places not far between themselves. When there was need vi, cuncti aderant: ceterūm agebant with (of) force, all were at-hand: but they did act divorsi, quò fuga atque formido crescerent apart, in-order-that the flight and terror might increase latiùs. Eò tempore Jugurtha sequi more-widely. In that time Jugurtha (began) to follow per colles; quærere tempus aut locum through (over) the hills; to seek a time or place pugnæ; corrumpere pabulum et fontes aquarum, of battle; to spoil the forage and fountains of waters, quorum erat penuria, quâ audierat hostem of which there was a scarcity, where he had heard the enemy venturum; ostendere se modò Metello interdum about-to-come; to show himself one-time to Metellus, sometimes Mario; tentare postremos in agmine, to Marius; to try (attack) the last on the troop (march), ac regredi statim in colles; [to attack the rear,] and to return immediately unto the hills; rursus minitari aliis, pòst aliis; neque facere again to threaten to others, afterwards to others; neither make prælrium, neque pati otium; tantummodò battle, nor to suffer quietness; only retinere hostem ab incepta. Ubi to keep-back the enemy from (his) undertakings. When Romanus imperator videt se fatigari dolis, the Roman commander sees himself to be harassed by stratagems, neque copiam pugnandi fieri ab hoste, nor opportunity of fighting to be made by the enemy, statuit oppugnare magnam urbem, nomine Zama in, he resolved to assault a great city, by name Zama, et arcem regni in eâ parte quâ erat sita;

 and the citadel of the kingdom in that part in which it was situate; ratus id, quod negotium poscebat, having considered that, which the business did require, [that] Jugurtham venturum auxilio suis Jugurtha about-to-come [would come] for aid to his-own laborantibus, que prælrium fore ibi. labouring (hard pressed), and a battle to be about-to-be there.

At ille, edocetus à perfugis quæ [Would be there.] But he, instructed by deserters what (things) parabantur, antevenit Metellum magnis itineribus; were prepared, outstrips Metellus by great marches; hortatur oppidanos defendant moenia, perfugis exhorts the townsmen (that) they may defend the walls, deserters additis auxilio, quod genus erat firmissimum being added for aid, which kind (of men) was the most-firm ex copiis regis, quia nequibat fallere. out-of the forces of the king, because it was-unable to deceive (him).

Præterea pollicetur semet adfore in tempore Besides he promises himself to be about to-be-present in time cum exercitu. Ita rebus compositis, discedit in with the army. Thus affairs being arranged, he departs into loca quâ-maxumè occulta; ac paullo pòst, Marium places as-much-as-possible hidden; and a little after, Marius missum Siccam ex itinere, frumentatum cum being sent (to) Sicca out-of the march, to provide-oorn with paucis cohortibus; quod oppidum primum omnium a few cohorts; which town first of all post malam pugnam defecratur ab rege. after the bad (unsuccessful) battle had revolted from the king.

Eo pergit noctu cum delectis equitibus, et Thither he proceeds by night with chosen cavalry, and Romanis jam egredientibus, facit pugnam in the Romans already going-out, he makes battle in portâ: simul hortatur Siccenses magnâ the gate: at-the-same-time he exhorts the Siccenses with a great voce, "Uti circumveniant cohortes ab tergo; voice, "That they may surround the cohorts from the rear; fortunam dare illis casum præclari facinoris, si fortune to give to them a chance of a noble exploit, if fecerint id; postea sese acturum they shall have done that; afterwards himself (to be) about-to-spend æstatem in regno, illos in libertate sine (bis) age in the kingdom, them in liberty without metu." Ac ni Marius properavisset fear." And unless Marius might have (had) hastened inferre signa, atque evadere oppido, to bear-forward the standards, and to escape from the town, profectò cuncti aut magna pars Siccensium certainly all or a great part of the Siccenses mutavissent fidem; Numidæ agunt sese would have changed fidelity; the Numidians act (conduct) themselves tantâ mobilitate. Sed Jugurthini milites with so-great fickleness. But the Jugurthine soldiers sustentati paullisper ab rege, postquam hostes being supported a-little-while by the king, after-that the enemies urgent majore vi, paucis amissis, profugi press (them) with greater force, a few being lost, escaping discedunt. Marius pervenit ad Zamam. Id oppidum depart. Marius arrived to Zama. That town situs in campo, munitum-erat magis opere situate in a plain, had been fortified more by work (art) quam naturâ, egens nullius idoneæ rei, opulentum than by nature, wanting of no suitable thing, plentiful armis que viris. Igitur Metellus, rebus paratis in arms and in men. Therefore Metellus, things being prepared pro tempore atque loco, circumvenit cuncta according-to time and place, surrounds all mœnia exercitu; imperat legatis, ubi quisque the walls with the army; commands to the lieutenants, where every-one curaret: deinde, signo dato, ingens should take-care (command): afterwards, a signal being given, a great clamor simul oritur undique. Neque shout at-the-same-time arises from-every-side. Nor [does] ea res terret Numidas; manent infensi que that thing dismay the Numidians; they remain hostile and intenti sine tumultu: prælium incipitur. Romani prepared without confusion: the battle is begun. The Romans pugnare, quisque pro ingenio, pars (began) to fight, every-one according-to (his) ability, part eminus glande aut lapidibus; from-a-distance with acorn (pellet) or with stones; [by throwing alii evadere, alii succedere leaden balls and stones;] others to retire, others to succeed (them) ac modò suffodere murum, modò aggredi and one-time to undermine the wall, one-time to attack (it) scalis; cupere facere prælium in manibus. with ladders; to desire to make battle in hands (hand to Oppidani contra ea volvere saxa hand). The townsmen against those (things) (began) to roll stones in proxumos, mittere sudes, pila, præterea on the nearest, to send (throw) stakes, darts, besides tædum mistam pice et sulphure, ardentia. Sed torch-wood mingled with pitch and sulphur, burning. But timor animi ne quidem muniverat satis illos, qui fear of mind not even had fortified sufficiently those, who manserant procul. Nam jacula emissa tormentis had remained at-a-distance. For javelins sent from engines aut manu vulnerabant plerosque, que boni or the hand did wound most, and the good (brave) atque ignavi erant pari periculo, sed impari and the inactive were in equal danger, but with unequal famâ. Dum certatur sic apud Zamam, Jugurtha fane. Whilst it is contended thus at Zama, Jugurtha ex-improviso invadit castra hostium cum magnâ suddenly attacks the camps of the enemies with a great manu, qui erant in præsidio remissis et band, (those) who were on guard (being) negligent and expectantibus omnia magis quam prælium, expecting all (things) more than a battle, irrumpit portam. At nostri perculti repentina he bursts the gate. But our (men) struck with sudden metu, consulunt quisque sibi pro fear, consult every-one for himself according-to (his) moribus: alii fugere; alii capere arma: habits: others (began) to flee; others to take arms: magna pars vulnerati, aut occisi. Ceterum a great part (were) wounded, or slain. But ex omni multitudine non amplius quadraginta, out-of all the multitude not more (than) forty, memores Romani nominis, grege facto, mindful of the Roman name, a flock (body) being formed, cepere locum paullò editiorem quam alii; took a place (station) a little more-elevated than the others; neque quiverunt depelli inde maxumâ vi; nor were they-able to be beaten-off thence by the greatest force; sed pauci remittere tela missa eminus, but the few (began) to throw-back the darts sent from-a-distance, frustrati minus in pluribus: being disappointed less in the more (numerous): [their missiles sin were more effective against the more numerous assailants:] but-if Numidæ accessissent proprius, ibi verò the Numidians might have approached nearer, there truly ostendere virtutem, et cædere, fundere, (they began) to show (their) valour, and to cut, to rout, atque fugare eos maxumâ vi. Interim cum and to put-to-flight them with the greatest force. Mean-time when Metellus gereret rem acerrumè, accepit Metellus might (did) carry-on the affair most-vigorously, he heard hostilem clamorem et tumultum à tergo: deinde a hostile shout and tumult from the rear: then (his) equo convorso, animadvertisit fugam fieri aduersum horse being turned, he perceived a flight to be made toward se quæ res indicabat esse populares. himself, which thing did show (them) to be countrymen. [His Igitur misit omnem equitatum properè ad own men.] Therefore he sent all the cavalry speedily to castra, ac C. Marium statim cum cohortibus the camps, and Caius Marius immediately with cohorts sociorum, que lacrymans obsecrat eum "Per of the allies, and weeping beseeches him "By (their) amicitiam, que per rempublicam, ne-sinat friendship, and by the commonwealth, (that) he may not permit quam contumeliam remanere in victore exercitu, any disgrace to remain in (their) victorious army, neve hostes abire inultos." Ille efficit nor the enemies to depart unrevenged." He executes (his) mandata brevè. At Jugurtha impeditus munimento commands shortly. But Jugurtha prevented by the fortification castrorum, cùm alii præcipitarentur super of the camps, when others (some) might be thrown-headlong upon vallum, alii properantes in angustiis, the rampart, others hastening in the narrow-passes [of the gates], ipsi officerent sibi, themselves might (did) obstruct to themselves, [obstructed one another], multis amissis, recipit sese in munita loca. many being lost, betakes himself into fortified places.

 Postquam nox aderat, Metellus, negotio After-that night was-at-hand, Metellus, the business infecto, revertitur in castra cum exercitu. being undone, returns into the camps with the army.
 Igitur postero die, priùs quàm Therefore in the following day, before that he might (did) egredieretur ad-oppugnandum, jubet omnem go-out to-assault, he orders all equitatum agitare pro castris in eâ parte, the cavalry to be-active before the camps in that part, quâ adventus regis erat: dispertit where the approach of the king was: he divides [he assigns] portas, et proxima loca tribunis: deinde ipse the gates, and the nearest places to the tribunes: then himself pergit ad oppidum, atque aggreditur murum, uti proceeds to the town, and attacks the wall, as superiore die. Interim Jugurtha ex-occulto invadit on the former day. Meantime Jugurtha secretly attacks nostros repente. Qui locati-fuerant in our (men) suddenly. (Those) who had been placed in proximo territi paullisper the nearest (place) [to the enemy] affrighted a-little perturbantur: reliqui cito subveniunt. Neque are confused: the rest quickly come-up. Nor Numidæ quivissent resistere diutiùs, ni the Numidians might have been-able to withstand longer, unless pedites permixti cum equitibus facerent [their] infantry mingled with the cavalry might (did) make magnum cladem; quibus illi freti, non a great slaughter; to (on) which they relying, (began), not uti solet equestri prælio, sequi, dein cedere, as is-usual in a cavalry fight, to follow, then to give-way, sed concurrere aduersis equis, implicare, ac but to rush-together with adverse horses, to involve, and perturbare aciem: ita, suis peditibus expeditis, to confuse the line: thus, their infantry being disentangled, dare hostes pene victos. to give (to effect), the enemies nearly vanquished. [Thus the Romans nearly vanquished were given to the infantry, disentangled from the Certabatur magnâ vi eodem cavalry.] It was contended with great violence in the same tempore apud Zamam. Ubi quisque legatus aut time at Zama. Where every lieutenant or tribunus curabat, ed niti acerrumè, tribune did command, there (he proceeded) to strive most-vigorously, neque alias habere spem magis in alio quam in nor another to have hope more in another than in sese: que oppidani pariter agere, oppugnare, himself: and the townsmen equally (began) to act, to assault, aut parare omnibus locis; alteri sauciare alteros or to prepare in all places; the others to wound the others avidius quam tegere semet; clamor more-eagerly than to protect themselves; the shout (was) permixtus hortatione, lætitia, gemitu: item mingled with encouragement, with gladness, with groaning: also strepitus armorum ferri ad cœlum: tela the rattling of arms to be carried to heaven (the sky): darts volare utrumque. Sed illi qui defensabant mœnia, to fly on-either-side. But they who did defend the walls, intenti prospectabant equestre prælium, ubi fixed did view-at-a-distance the cavalry fight, when hostes modò remiserant pugnam paullulùm. the enemies only had relaxed the battle a little.

 Animadverteres eos modò lætos, modò pavidos, Thou mayest perceive them one-time glad, one-time fearful, uti quæque res erant Jugurthæ, as every affairs were to Jugurtha, [according as the contest ac sicuti possent audiri aut was with Jugurtha,] and as they might be-able to be heard or cerni à suis, alii monere, alii to be perceived by their-own, others (began) to advise, others hortari, aut significare manu, aut niti to encourage, or to beckon with the hand, or to strain with (their) corporibus; agitare huc et illuc, quasi bodies; to drive hither and thither, as-if vitabundi aut jacientes tela. Quod ubi about-escaping or hurling darts. Which when cognitum-est Mario, nam is curabat in it was known to Marius, for he did take-care (command) in eâ parte, agere leniùs consulto, ac simulare that part, (he began) to act more-gently by design, and to pretend diffidentiam rei: pati Numidas a distrust of the affair: to allow the Numidians [in the town] visere prælium regis sine tumultu. to go-to-see [to look at] the battle of the king without confusion.

Ita illis adstrictis studio suorum, Thus they being tied-down (engaged) with zeal of their-own (people), [while they were thus intent, and taken up with their own people,] aggreditur murum repente magnâ vi; et jam he attacks the wall suddenly with great force; and now milites aggressi scalis ceperant jam propè the soldiers having attempted with ladders had taken now nearly summa, cum oppidani concurrunt, ingerunt the highest (parts), when the townsmen rush-together, throw lapides, ignem, præterea alia tela. Nostri stones, fire, besides other weapons. Our (men) primò resistere; deinde ubi unæ atque alteræ first (began) to oppose; then when one and other scalæ comminutæ (sunt), qui supersteterant ladders were broken-in-pieces, (those) who had stood-on (them) afficti-sunt; cæteri abeunt quisque quo modo were dashed-down; the rest depart every-one in what manner potuere, pauci integri, magna pars confecti they were-able, few whole (unhurt), a great part spent vulneribus. Deinde nox diremit prælium utrimque. with wounds. Then night dissolved the battle on-either-side.

Postquam Metellus videt incepsum frustra, After-that Metellus sees (the thing) undertaken in-vain, neque oppidum capi, neque Jugurtham facere nor the town to be taken, nor Jugurtha to make pugnam nisi ex insidiis, aut suo loco; battle unless out-of ambushes, or in his-own (chosen) place; et jam æstatem esse exactam, discedit ab Zamâ; and now the summer to be spent, he departs from Zama; et imponit præsidia in iis urbibus, quæ defecerant and places garrisons in those cities, which had revolted ab se, que munitæ-erant satis loco aut from himself, and had been fortified sufficiently by the place or mœnibus. Collocat cæterum exercitum in provinciam by walls. He places the rest-of the army into the province quæ est proxima Numidæ, gratiâ which [is] next to Numidia, by favour (for the sake) hiemandi. Neque concedit id tempus quieti aut of wintering. Nor does he grant that time to rest or luxuriæ ex more aliorum; sed quoniam luxury according-to the custom of others; but since bellum procedebat parum armis, parat tendere the war did succeed little by arms, he prepares to stretch insidias regi per amicos, et uti snares for the king by (his) friends, [the king's,] and to use perfidiâ eorum pro armis. Igitur aggreditur the treachery of them instead-of arms. Therefore he attacks multis pollicitationibus Bomilcarem, qui fuerat with many promises Bomilcar, who had been Romæ cum Jugurthâ, et fugerat judicium inde, at Rome with Jugurtha, and had escaped trial thence, vadibus datis, clam de morte Massivæ; sureties being given, secretly concerning the death of Massiva; quòd erat maxima copia fallendi per because there was the greatest opportunity of deceiving through maxumam amicitiam: ac efficit primò, uti the greatest friendship: and he accomplishes first, that veniat occultus ad se gratiâ colloquendi; he may come concealed to himself for the sake of conferring; deinde fide data, si tradidisset then (his) faith (solemn promise) being given, if he might have delivered Jugurtham vivum aut necatum sibi, fore, Jugurtha alive or killed to himself, to be about-to-be, ut senatus concederet impunitatem et omnia sua that the senate would grant forgiveness and all his illi; persuadet facilè Numidæ, cùm (possessions) to him; he persuades easily to the Numidian, as-well infido ingenio, with faithless disposition, [as well on account of his faithless disposition,] tum metuenti ne, si pax fieret cum Romanis, then (as) fearing lest, if peace might be made with the Romans, ipse traderetur ad supplicium per conditiones. himself might be delivered to punishment by the conditions.

Ubi primùm fuit opportunum, is accedit Jugurtham When first it was convenient, he approaches Jugurtha anxium, ac miserantem suas fortunas, monet, solicitous, and lamenting his own fortunes, he advises, atque lacrumans obtestatur uti provideat and weeping beseeches (him), that he may provide aliquando sibi que liberis, et genti some-time for himself and children, and for the nation Numidarum merenti optumò; sese of the Numidians deserving very-well (of him); themselves victos (esse) omnibus præliis, agrum vastatum, to have been conquered in all the battles, the land ravaged, multos mortales captos, occisos; opes regni many persons taken, [or] slain; the resources of the kingdom comminutas-esse; jam et virtutem militum to have been broken; already both the valour of (his) soldiers et fortunam tentatam (esse) sæpè satis: and fortune to have been tried often enough: he may (should) caveat, ne, illo cunctante, Numidæ consulant beware, lest, [he hesitating], the Numidians may consult sibi. Impellit animum regis his atque for themselves. He impels the mind of the king by these and talibus aliis ad deditioinem. Legati by such other (reasonings) to a surrender. Ambassadors mittuntur ad imperatorem, qui dicerent Jugurtham are sent to the general, who should say Jugurtha facturum imperata, ac tradere sese que about-to-do (the things) ordered, and to deliver himself and suum regnum in fidem illius sine ullâ pactione. his kingdom unto the faith of him without any covenant.
 Metellus properè jubet cunctos senatorii ordinis Metellus hastily orders all of senatorial rank accersiri ex hibernis; habet concilium to be sent-for out-of winter-quarters; he holds a council eorum, atque aliorum quos ducebat idoneos. of those, and of others whom he did lead (think) proper.
 Ita imperat Jugurthæ more majorum Thus he orders to Jugurtha in the manner of (our) ancestors ex decreto concilii, per legatos, according-to the decree of the council, by the ambassadors, (to furnish) ducenta millia pondo argenti, omnes two hundred thousands pounds-weight of silver, all (his) elephantes, aliquantum equorum et armorum. Quæ elephants, some-what of horses and of arms. Which postquam facta-sunt sine morâ, jubet (things) after-that they were done without delay, he orders omnes perfugas adduci vinctos. Magna pars all the deserters to be brought-up bound. A great part eorum adducti (sunt) uti jussum-erat; pauci of them were brought-up as it had been ordered; a few abierant in Mauritiam ad regem Bocchum, had gone-away into Mauritania to king Bocchus. cùm deditio primum cœpit. Igitur Júgurtha, ubi when the surrender first began. Therefore Jugurtha, when spoliatus-est armis, que viris, et pecuniâ, cùm he was stripped-of arms, and men, and money, when ipse vocaretur ad Tisidium imperandum, himself might be (was) called to Tisidium to-be-commanded, rursus cœpit flectere suum animum, et timere again began to bend (change) his mind, and to fear digna ex malâ conscientiâ. Denique, worthy (deserved things) from an evil consciousness. Finally, multis diebus consumptis per dubitationem, cùm many days being spent through (in) doubt, when modò duceret omnia potiora one time he might (did) deem all (things) better (than) bello, tædio advorsarum rerum; interdum ipse war, from weariness of adverse things; sometimes he reputaret, quam gravis casus ex regno might (did) revolve, how heavy the fall from a kingdom in servitutem foret; multis que magnis into slavery might be (was); many and great præsidiis perditis protections being lost [by what he had surrendered] nequidquam, in-vain, sumit bellum de-integro. Senatus, Romæ, he takes (begins) war anew. [The senate, at Rome, consultus de provinciis, decreverat Numidiam having consulted about the provinces, had decreed Numidia Metello. Per idem tempus haruspex to Metellus.] Through (about) the same time a soothsayer dixerat magna atque mirabilia portendi C. had said great and wonderful (things) to be foreboded to Caius Mario fortè supplicantī diis per hostias; Marius by chance praying to the gods by victimae; [sacrificing proinde fretus diis, ageret quæ to the gods;] wherefore relying on the gods, he might act what agitabat animo; experiretur fortunam he did revolve in mind; he might try fortune quām-sæpissimè; cuncta eventura as-often-as-possible; all (things to be) about-to-happen prosperè. At ingens cupidō consulatū exagitabat prosperously. But a great desire of the consulship did harass illum jam antea; ad quem capiendum (excite) him already before; to which to-be-taken (to obtain omnia alia erant abundè, præter which) all other (qualities) were abundantly, except vetustatem familiæ; industria, probitas, magna the antiquity of (his) family; industry, honesty, a great scientia militiæ, ingens animus belli, knowledge of warfare, a great mind (spirit) of (in) war, modicus domi, victor lubidinis, et divitiarum, moderate of (at) home, a conqueror of passion, and of riches, tantummodò avidus gloriæ. Sed is natus (est) et only greedy of glory. But he was born and altus omnem pueritiam Arpini, ubi reared (during) all (his) boyhood of (at) Arpinum, when primum ætas fuit patiens militiæ, exercuit sese first (his) age was enduring of warfare, he exercised himself stipendiis, faciundis, non Græcâ facundiâ, in pays (military services) to-be-made, not in Greek eloquence, neque urbanis munditiis; ita integrum ingenium nor in polite refinements; thus (his) sound ability adolevit brevè inter bonas artes. Ergo ubi grew-up shortly among good arts (pursuits). Therefore when primum petit militarem tribunatum à populo, first he seeks a military tribuneship from the people, plerisque ignorantibus faciem ejus, notus most (of them) not-knowing the face of him, being known facilè, declaratur easily, [but being known by name, as a brave soldier,] he is declared per omnes tribus. Deinde peperit alium, by all the tribes. Afterwards he begot (procured) another post alium sibi ab eo magistratu ; (one magistracy), after another for himself from that magistracy ; que agitabat eo modo semper in potestatibus, and he did manage in that manner always in (his) commands, ut haberetur dignus ampliore that he might be (was) held worthy with more-ample (higher quam gerebat. Tamen is authority) than he did carry-on [possessed]. However he (though) talis vir ad id locorum audebat non such a man to that of places (up to that time) did dare not adpetere consulatum, (nam postea datus-est to solicit the consulship, (for afterwards he was given præceps ambitione). Etiam tum (precipitated) headlong by ambition). Even then plebes alios magistratus ; nobilitas the common-people (did bestow) other magistracies ; the nobility tradebat consulatum per manus inter se. did deliver the consulship through (their) hands among themselves.

 Nemo novus erat tam clarus, neque tam No-one new (man) was so illustrious, nor so egregiis factis, quin is haberetur with excellent deeds, but-that he might be (was) held indignus illo honore, et quasi pollutus. unworthy with that honour, and as-if defiled. [And as if he Igitur, ubi Marius videt dicta would defile it.] Therefore, when Marius sees the sayings haruspicis intendere eodem, quod cupido of the soothsayer to tend to the same (point), whither the desire animi hortabatur, rogat missionem ab of (his) mind did encourage, he asks (his) discharge from Metello gratiâ petundi; cui Metellus by favour (for the sake) of seeking (it); to whom quamquam virtus, gloria, atque alia optanda although valour, glory, and other (things) to-be-wished bonis superabant, tamen contemptor by good (men) did abound, however a despiser (scornful) animus, et superbia, commune malum nobilitatis, mind, and pride, the common evil of the nobility, inerat. Itaque commotus primùm was-in (him). Therefore being moved (surprised) first insolitâ re, mirari consilium ejus; et by the unusual thing, (he began) to wonder-at the design of him; and monere quasi per amicitiam “ne-inciperet to advise (him) as-if through friendship (that) “he should not-begin tam prava, neu gereret animum (things) so corrupt, [so erroneous,] nor should carry. a spirit super fortunam: omnia non esse cupienda above (his) fortune: all (things) not to be to-be-desired omnibus; suas res debere placere to (by) all; his-own things to owe (ought) to please satis illi:

 sufficiently to him: [that he ought to be satisfied with his station:] postremò, caveret petere id à Romano populo, lastly, he should beware to seek that from the Roman people, quod negaretur jure illi.” Postquam dixit hæc, which might be denied by right to him.” After-that he said these, atque talia alia, neque animus Marii flectitur, and such other (advices), neither the mind of Marius is bent, respondit, sese facturum quæ peteret, ubi he answers, himself about-to-do what he might (did) ask, when primùm potuisset per publica negotia. first he might have been-able by the public affairs. [As soon as public affairs would permit.] Ac fertur dixisse postea sæpiùs postulanti eadem. afterwards (to him) oftener requesting the same (things).
 “Ne-festinaret abire, illum petiturum “He should not-hasten to depart, him about-to-seek [that he would consulatum maturè satis cum suo filio." seek] the consulship early enough with his-own son."

Is militabat eo tempore contubernio He (the son) did serve in that time in the fellowship of (his) patris ibidem, natus circiter viginti annos; quæ father there, born about twenty years; which res accenderat Marium vehementer, cùm pro thing had inflamed Marius violently, as-well for honore, quem affectabat, tūm contra Metellum. the honour, which he did aim-at, then (as) against Metellus.

Ita grassari, cupidine atque irâ, pessumis Thus (he began) to proceed, by desire and by anger, the worst consultoribus: neque abstinere ullo facto, neque advisers: nor to refrain from any deed, nor dicto, quod foret modò ambitiosum, saying, which might be only ambitious, [by which he might habere milites, quibus præferat in gain popularity,] to have the soldiers, to whom he was-over in hibernis, laxiore imperio quām anteā: the winter-quarters, in more-remiss command than before: loqui criminose, et simul magnificè, de to speak censuringly, and at-the-same-time boastingly, about bello, apud negotiatores, quorum erat magna the war, among the merchants, of whom there was a great multitudo Uticæ: "Dimidia pars exercitūs multitude of (at) Utica: "If the half part of the army might be permitteretur sibi, habiturum Jugurtham (were) granted to himself, (to be) about-to-have Jugurtha in catenis paucis diebus: trahi consultò ab in chains in a few days: to be protracted designedly by imperatore, quòd inanis homo, et regiæ the commander, because the empty (vain) man, and of royal superbiæ, gauderet nimis imperio." Omnia pride, might (did) rejoice too-much in command." All quæ videbantur illis firmiora eò, quòd which (sayings) did seem to them more-sure therefore, because Præterea, quidam Numida, nomine Gauda, filius Besider, a certain Numidian, by name Gauda, a son Manastabal, nepos Masinissæ, erat in nostro of Manastabal, grandson of Masinissa, was in our exercitu; quem Micipsa scripserat secundum army; whom Micipsa had written (appointed) second hæredem testamento, confectus morbis, et ob heir by will, spent by disease, and on-account-of eam causam mente paullum imminuta. that cause with a mind a little diminished (impaired).

Cui petenti, Metellus negaverat utrumque, To whom requesting (them), Metellus had denied each uti poneret sellam juxta (of the following), that he might place (his) chair near (him) more regum, item posteā turmam Romanorum in the manner of kings, also afterwards a troop of Roman equitum causâ custodiae: honorem, quòd horsemen by cause (for the sake) of guard: the honour, because foret modo eorum quos Romanus populus it might be (was) in the manner of those whom the Roman people appellavisset reges: præsidium, quòd might have (had) called kings: the guard, because foret contumeliosum in eos, si Romani equites it might be insulting unto them, if Roman horsemen traderentur satellites Numidæ. Marius should be delivered (as) guards to a Numidian. Marius aggregitur hunc anxium, atque hortatur uti petat accosts him anxious, and encourages that he may seek poenas contumeliarum in imperatorem, punishments of the insults against the commander, [received from cum suo auxilio: extollit secundâ the commander,] with his assistance: he extols with favourable oratione hominem animo parum-valido ob speech the man with a mind not-strong on-account-of morbos: "Illum esse ingentem virum, nepotem diseases: "Him to be a great man, grandson of Masinissa; si Jugurtha foret captus aut of Masinissa; if Jugurtha might be (were) taken or occisus, habiturum imperium slain (to be) about-to-have [he would have] the government Numidiae sine morâ; adeò id posse evenire of Numidia without delay; thus that to be-able to happen maturè si ipse speedily, [that indeed this might speedily happen,] if himself missus-foret consul ad id bellum." might have (had) been sent (as) consul to that war." Itaque ipse impellit et illum et Romanos equites, Therefore he impels both him and the Roman knights, milites et negotiatores, alios; spes pacis soldiers and merchants, (and) others; the hope of peace (urges) plerosque, uti scribant asperè Romam ad most, that they may write roughly (severely) to Rome to suos necessarios in Metellum de bello; poscant their acquaintances against Metellus about the war; may request Marium imperatorem. Sic consulatus petebatur Marius (as) commander. Thus the consulship was sought illi à multis mortalibus honestissimâ suffragatione. for him by many mortals with most-honourable canvass.

Simul nobilitate fusâ At-the-same-time the nobility being poured (defeated) [being made of per Mamiliam legem, eâ equal importance in voting,] by the Mamilian law, at that tempestate plebes extollebat novos. time the common-people did extol [to office] new (men).
 Ita cuncta procedere Mario. Interim Thus all (things) (began) to succeed for Marius. Mean-time Jugurtha, ditione omissâ, postquam incipit Jugurtha, the surrender being omitted, after-that he commences bellum parare omnia cum magnâ curâ the war (began) to prepare all (things) with great care, festinare cogere exercitum; affectare, to hasten to collect an army; to aim-at [to recover] civitates quæ defecerant ab se, formidine, aut the cities which had revolted from himself, by terror, or ostentando præmia, communire suos locos; reficere, by displaying rewards, to fortify his-own places; to repair, aut commercari arma, tela, que alia, quæ or to purchase arms, weapons, and other (things), which amiserat spe pacis; alicere servitia he had lost in the hope of peace; to entice the slaveries (slaves) Romanorum, et tentare eos ipsos qui erant of the Romans, and to try those (persons) themselves who were in præsidiis, pecuniâ; pati nihil prorsus in the garrisons, by money; to suffer nothing altogether intactum, neque quietum, agitare cuncta. untouched, nor tranquil, to disturb all (things).

Igitur Vaccenses, principes civitatis quò Metellus Therefore the Vaccensian, chiefs of the state where Metellus imposuerat præsidium initio, Jugurthâ had placed a garrison in the beginning, Jugurtha pacificante, fatigati suppliciis regis, neque making-peace, being importuned by the entreaties of the king, neither alienati anteà voluntate, conjurant inter se; nam alienated before in will, conspire among themselves; for vulgus, utì solet, plerumque, et maxumè the common-people, as is usual, generally, and chiefly (that) Numidarum, erat, mobili ingenio, seditiosum of the Numidians, was, with changeable disposition, seditious atque discordiosum, cupidum novarum rerum, and turbulent, desirous of new things (revolution), advorsum quieti et otio: dein, rebus compositis inimical to rest and to leisure: then, things being arranged inter se, constituant in tertium diem, quòd between themselves, they appoint on the third day, because is festus que celebratus per omnem Africam, that (being) festive and celebrated through all Africa, ostentabat ludum et lasciviam magis quam did display play and wantonness more than formidinem. Sed ubi tempus fuit, invitant alias fear. But when the time was, they invite the other alium - suas domos, centuriones que militares (the one) another (to) their houses, the centurions and military tribunos, et T. Turpilium Silanum præfectum ipsum tribunes, and Titus Turpilius Silanus the governor himself oppidi: obtruncant omnes eos inter epulas, præter of the town: they massacre all those among the feasts, except Turpilium: posteà aggrediuntur milites palantes, Turpilius: afterwards they attack the soldiers wandering, inermes, ac sine imperio, quippe in tali die. unarmed, and without command, inasmuch-as on such a day.

Plebes facit idem, pars [As became such a day.] The common-people do the same, part edocti ab nobilitate, alii incitati studio talium instructed by the nobility, others urged from zeal of such rerum, quîs ignorantibus acta, que consilium, things, to whom not-knowing (their) acts, and design, tumultus ipse, et novæ res, placebant satis.
 the confusion itself, and new things, did please sufficiently.
 Romani milites, improviso metu, incerti que The Roman soldiers, from the sudden fear, doubtful and ignari quid facerent potissimum, trepidare ad ignorant what they should do chiefly, (began) to hurry to arcem oppidi, ubi signa et scuta erant: the citadel of the town, where the standards and shields were: præsidium hostium, portæ clausæ antè a guard of the enemies, (and) the gates being shut before prohibebant fugam: ad hoc mulieres que did hinder (their) flight: to this (besides) the women and pueri mittere certatim pro tectis boys (began) to send (cast) emulously before the roofs ædificiorum saxa, et alia, quæ locus præbebat. of the buildings stones, and other (things), which the place did afford.
 Ita anceps malum neque caveri, Thus the double evil (could) neither be guarded-against, neque posse resisti infirmissimo generi nor (did it appear) to be able to be opposed to the weakest sort à fortissumis:
 by the bravest: [nor could the bravest resist the weakest portion of boni que mali, strenui et imbelles, mankind:] the good and the bad, the active and the unwarlike, inulti, obtruncati (sunt) juxta. In eâ tantâ unreverged, were slaughtered alike. In that so-great asperitate, Numidis sœvissumis, et roughness (misfortune), the Numidians (being) most-cruel, and oppido clauso undique, Turpilius præfектus, unus the town being shut on-every-side, Turpilius the governor, one ex omnibus Italicis profugit intactus: (alone) out-of all the Italians escaped untouched: comperimus parùm, an id evenerit ita we have discovered little, whether that may have happened so misericordiâ hospitis, an pactione, an from the compassion of (his) host, or by agreement, or casu: nisi, quia in tanto malo turpis vita by chance: unless (but), because in so-great an evil a base life fuit potior integrâ famâ, videtur was better (than) sound fame (character), he seems improbus que intestabilis. Postquam Metellus villainous and detestable. After-that Metellus comperit de rebus actis Vaccæ, moestus discovered about the things done at Vacca, sorrowful abit paullisper è conspectu: he departs a little-while out-of sight (from public): deinde ubi ira et ægritudo permista-sunt, afterwards when anger and sorrow were-mingled, festinat ire ultum injurias cum maxumâ curâ.

 he hastens to go to avenge the injuries with the greatest care.
 Educit legionem cum quâ hiemabat, et He leads-out the legion with which he did winter, and quâm-plurimos Numidas equites potest, expeditos, as-many Numidian cavalry he is-able, prepared, cum occasu solis: et [both disencumbered], with [at] the setting of the sun: and posterâ die circiter tertiam horam pervenit in the following day about the third hour he arrives in quamdam planitiem, circumventam locis paullò into a certain plain, surrounded with places a little superioribus. Ibi docet milites, fessos higher. There he teaches (informs) the soldiers, fatigued magnitudine itineris, et jam abnuentes omnia, by the greatness of the march, and now refusing all (things), oppidum Vaccam abesse non amplius [that] the town Vacca to be distant [is distant] not more mille passuum: decere illos (than) a thousand of paces: to become [that it became] them pati reliquum laborem sequo animo, dum to suffer the rest (remaining) labour with even mind, until caperent poenas pro suis civibus, fortissimis they might take penalties for their own citizens, very-brave atque miserrumis viris. Præterea ostentat and most-wretched men. Besides he points-out prædam benignè.

the plunder liberally. [He liberally grants them the plunder of the Sic animis eorum arrectis, jubet place.] Thus the minds (spirits) of them being raised, he orders equites ire in primo, latè, pedites the cavalry to go in front, extended, the infantry quàm-arctissimè, et occultare signa. Ubi as-closely-as-possible, and to conceal the standards. When Vaccenses animadvertebant exercitum pergere the Vaccenses perceived the army to proceed advorsum se, rati primò esse against themselves, having thought (it) at-first to be Metellum, utì res erat, clausere portas: deinde Metellus, as the thing was, they shut the gates: then ubi vident agros neque vastari, et eos qui when they see the lands neither to be ravaged, and those who aderant primi Numidas equites; arbitrati were present first (to be) Numidian cavalry; having thought (it) rursum Jugurtham, procedunt obvii again (to be) Jugurtha, they proceed opposite (towards him) cum magno gaudio. Equites que pedites, signo with great joy. The cavalry and infantry, a signal dato repente, alii cædere being given suddenly, others (some began) to slaughter vulgum effusum oppido; alii festinare the common-people poured-forth from the town; others to hasten ad portas: pars capere turres: ira, atque spes to the gates: part to take the towers: anger, and the hope prædæ posse plūs quam lassitudo. Ita of booty to be-able (to do) more than fatigue. Thus Vaccenses lætati (sunt) modò biduum ex the Vaccenses rejoiced only two-days from (their) perfidiâ: magna et opulens civitas fuit cuncta treachery: the great and wealthy city was all poenæ aut prædæ.

 for punishment or for booty. [Was given up to punishment or booty.] Turpilius, quem præfectum oppidi ostendimus Turpilius, whom (being) governor of the town we have shown suprà profugisse unum ex omnibus, above to have escaped one (alone) out-of all, jussus à Metello dicere causam; being commanded by Metellus to say (plead his) cause; postquam expurgat sese parùm, condemnatus que after-that he clears himself little, being condemned and verberatus, solvit poenæ capite; nam scourged, he loosed (paid) penalties by (his) head; [life;] for is erat civis ex Latio. Per idem he was a citizen out-of Latium. Through (during) the same tempus Bomilcar, impulsu cuius Jugurtha time Bomilcar, by the instigation of whom Jugurtha inceperat deditioñem, quam deseruit metu, had begun the surrender, which he abandoned from fear, suspectus regi, et ipse suspiciens eum, being suspected to (by) the king, and he suspecting him, (began) cupere novas res; quærere dolum ad to desire new things (revolution); to seek a stratagem to perniciem ejus; fatigare animum diu the destruction of him [Jugurtha]; to weary (his) mind by-day que noctu; denique, tentando omnia, adjungit and by-night; finally, by trying all (things), he unites (as) socium sibi Nabdalsam, nobilem hominem, an associate to himself Nabdalsa, a noble man, clarum magnis opibus, que acceptum suis illustrios by great riches, and received (popular) to his-own popularibus: qui solitus-erat plerūmque ductare countrymen: who had been accustomed generally to lead exercitum seorsum ab rege, et exsequi omnes an army apart from the king, and to execute all res, quæ superaverant Jugurthæ, fesso aut things, which had remained-over to Jugurtha, fatigued or adstricto majoribus; ex quo gloria que opes bound-down to greater (affairs); from which glory and riches inventæ illi. Igitur dies statuitur insidiis were found to (by) him. Therefore a day is appointed for the snares consilio utriusque: placuit cætera parari by the plan of each: it pleased (them) the rest to be prepared ex tempore, uti res posceret. Nabdalsa according-to time, as the thing might demand. Nabdalsa profectus (est) ad exercitum, quem jussus habebat set-out to the army, which being ordered he did have inter hiberna Romanorum, ne hostibus between (near) the winter-quarters of the Romans, lest the enemies inultis ager vastaretur.

 (being) unrevenged the land might be ravaged. [Lest the land might Postquam, is, perculsus be ravaged by the enemy with impunity.] After-that, he, struck magnitudine facinoris, venit non ad tempus; que by the greatness of the crime, came not to time; and metus impeditiebat rem: Bomilcar, simul cupidus fear did hinder the thing: Bomilcar, at-the-same-time desirous patrandi incepta, et anxius timore of perpetrating his undertakings, and anxious from the fear of (his) socii, ne vetere consilio omisso, quæreret associate, lest the old design being laid-aside, he might seek novum; mittit letteras ad eum per fideles a new (one); sends letters (a letter) to him by faithful homines: in queis accusare mollitiem que men: in which (he began) to accuse the softness and socordiam viri; testari Deos, per quos inactivity of the man; to attest the Gods, through whom juravisset; monere, ne-converteret he might have (had) sworn; to advise, (that) he should not-turn præmia Metelli in pestem: exitium the rewards of Metellus into (his) plague (ruin): destruction adesse Jugurthæ; cæterum id modò agitari, to be at-hand to Jugurtha; but that now to be discussed, ne periret suâ virtute, an Metelli: whether he might perish by his valour, or (that) of Metellus: proinde reputaret cum suo animo, whercfore he should revolve with his-own mind, (whether) mallet præmia an cruciatum. Sed cùm hæ be might prefer rewards or torture. But when these litteræ allatæ (sunt), Nabdalsa, fessus, corpore letters were brought, Nabdalsa, fatigued, (his) body exercito, fortè quiescebat in lecto; ubi, verbis being exercised, by-chance did rest in a bed; where, the words Bomilcaris cognitis, cura, deinde somnus cepit, of Bomilcar being known, anxiety, then sleep took uti solet ægrum animum. Erat quidam (seized him), as it is-wont a sick mind. There was a certain Numida ei, fidus curator negotiorum, que Numidian to him, a faithful manager of (his) affairs, and acceptus, et particeps omnium consiliorum, received (approved), and a partaker of all (his) designs, nisi novissumi. Qui postquam, audivit litteras unless of the newest (last). Who after-that, he heard the letters allatas, ratus, ex consuetudine, (letter) being brought, having thought, according-to custom, opus esse operâ, aut suo ingenio, introiit need to be with (his) assistance, or his understanding, entered in tabernaculum: illo dormiente, sumit ac perlegit into the tent: he sleeping, he takes and reads-through epistolam positam temerè super caput in pulvino: the letter placed rashly above (his) head on the pillow: dein, insidiis cognitis, pergit properè ad regem. then, the snares being known, he proceeds quickly to the king.

 Nabdalsa experrectus paullo pòst, ubi reperit Nabdalsa being awaked a little after, when he found neque epistolam, et cognovit omnem rem, uti neither the letter, and knew all the thing, as acta-erat,

it had been transacted, [and was informed of what had taken place,] primò conatus (est) persequi indicem; postquam id at-first endeavoured to pursue the informer; after-that that fuit frustrà, accedit Jugurtham gratiâ was in-vain, he approaches Jugurtha by favour (for the sake) placandi: præventum perfidiâ of appeasing (him): (he says) to have been prevented by the treachery sui clientis, facere, quæ ipse paravisset: of his dependant, to do, what (things) he might have prepared lacrumans, "obtestatur per amicitiam, (had intended): weeping, "he beseeches (him) by friendship, que per sua acta fideliter anteà, and by his (deeds) transacted faithfully before, (that) ne-haberet sese suspectum super tali scelere." he would not have himself suspected about such guilt."

Rex respondit placidè ad ea, aliter atque The king answered calmly to those (words), otherwise and gerebat animo. Bomilcare, que multis aliis, (than) he did bear in mind. Bomilcar, and many others, quos cognoverat socios insidiarum, interfectis, whom he had known associates of the snares, being slain, oppresserat iram, ne qua seditio oriretur ex he had repressed (his) wrath, lest any sedition might arise out-of eo negotio. Neque fuit ulla dies aut nox quieta that business. Neither was any day or night tranquil Jugurthæ post id locorum: neque to Jugurtha after that of places (that circumstance): neither (was credere satis cuiquam loco, neque he able) to believe (trust) sufficiently to any place, nor mortali, neque tempori: metuere cives que person, nor time: (he began) to fear citizens and hostes juxtâ: circumspectare omnia, et pavescere enemies alike: to look-around-on all (things), and to fear omni strepitu: requiescere noctu alio atque in every noise: to rest by night in another (one) and alio loco, another place, [he continually changed his place of repose at night] contra regium decus: interdum excitus somno, against royal propriety: sometimes roused from sleep, (his) armis arreptis, facere tumultum: exagitari ita arms being snatched-up, to make a tumult: to be harassed thus formidine, quasi vecordiâ. Igitur, ubi Metellus by fear, as-if by insanity. Therefore, when Metellus cognovit ex perfugis de casu Bomilcaris, knew from deserters concerning the calamity of Bomilcar, et indicio patefacto, parat que festinat and the information being laid-open, he prepares and hastens cuncta rursus tamquam ad integrum bellum. all (things) again as-if to a fresh war.

 Dimittit Marium domum, fatigantem de He dismisses Marius home, wearying (him) about (his) profectio[n]e, et simul invitum et offensum, departure, and at-the-same-time unwilling and offended, ratus parum idoneum sibi. Et plebes having thought (him) little useful for himself. And the common-people Romæ, litteris quæ missæ-erant de Metello ac at Rome, the letters which had been sent about Metellus and Mario cognitis, acceperant volenti animo Marius being known, had received (them) with a willing mind de ambobus. Nobilitas, quæ fuerat anteâ concerning both. (His) nobility, which had been before decori, esse invidiæ imperatori: at humilitas for honour, (began) to be for envy to the commander: but humbleness generis addiderat favorem illi alteri: cæterùm of race had added favour to that other: but [moreover] studia partium magis quam sua bona aut mala the zeals of parties more than their-own good or bad moderata in utroque. Præterea, seditiosi (qualities) directed in each. Besides, seditious magistratus exagitare vulgum, magistrates (began) to harass [agitate] the common-people, arcessere Metellum capititis omnibus concionibus, to impeach Metellus of head (capitally) in all harangues, celebrare virtutem Marii in majus. to celebrate the valour of Marius into greater (too highly).

 Denique, plebes accensa (est) sic, uti opifices Finally, the common-people was inflamed so, that the artisans que omnes agrestes, quorum res que fides and all the rustics, whose thing (property) and credit erant sitæ in manibus, were placed in (their) hands, [who depended on their daily work for operibus relictis, frequentarent support,] (their) works being left, might (did) frequent Marium, et ducerent sua necessaria Marius, and might lead (did deem) their-own necessary (matters) post honorem illius.
 after the honour of him. [And postponed their own necessary affairs Ita nobilitate perculsâ, to the honour of Marius.] Thus the nobility being struck, [defeated], consulatus mandatur novo homini post multas the consulship is committed to a new man after many tempestates: et postea frequens populus rogatus epochs: and afterwards a numerous people being asked à Manlio Mantino, tribuno plebis, quem by Manlius Mantinus, tribune of the common-people, whom it (they) vellet gerere bellum cum Jugurthâ, jussit might will to carry-on the war with Jugurtha, ordered Marium. Sed senatus decreverat Numidiam Marius. But the senate had decreed Numidia Metello; ea res fuit frustra. Eodem tempore, to Metellus; that thing was in-vain. In the same time, Jugurtha, varius que incertus, amicis amissis, Jugurtha, changeable and uncertain, (his) friends being lost, plerosque quorum ipse necaverat, cæteri formidine; most of whom himself had killed, the rest from fear; pars profugerant ad Romanos, alii ad regem part had fled to the Romans, others to king Bocchum: cum bellum posset neque Bocchus: when the war might be (was) able neither geri sine administris, et duceret to be carried-on without managers, and he might lead (did deem it) periculorum experiri fidem novorum in tantâ dangerous to try the faith of new (ones) in so-great perfidiâ veterum, agitabatur. Neque res neque treachery of the old, was harassed. Neither a thing nor consilium, aut quisquam hominum placebat illi a plan, or any-one of men did please to him satis: mutare itinera que præfectos sufficiently: (he began) to change (his) routes and governors in-dies: modo pergere aduersum hostes interdum daily: one-time to proceed against the enemies sometimes in solitudines: sæpè habere spem in fugâ, at paullo into deserts: often to have hope in flight, but a little pòst in armis: dubitare an crederet minùs after in arms: to doubt whether he should believe (trust) less virtuti an. fidei popularium. Ita, to the valour or to the faith of (his) countrymen. Thus, quòcunque intenderat, res erant aduersæ. wheresoever he had directed (his mind), things were adverse.

 Sed inter eas moras, Metellus ostendit sese repente But among those delays, Metellus shows himself suddenly cum exercitu. Numidæ parati (sunt), que with (his) army. The Numidians were prepared, and instructi pro tempore arrayed according-to the time [as well as the time and occasion ab Jugurthâ: dein prælium incipitur. In would permit] by Jugurtha: then a battle is begun. In quâ parte rex adfuit pugnæ, ibi certatum (est) what part the king was-present to the battle, there it was contended aliquamdiu: omnes cæteri milites ejus pulsi (sunt) some-time: all the rest-of the soldiers of him were repulsed que fugati primo congressu. Romani potiti (sunt) and put-to-flight in the first encounter. The Romans possessed signorum et armorum et aliquanto numero of the standards and arms and sone number hostium. Nam pedes magis quam arma of the enemies. For (their) feet more than arms tutata-sunt Numidas ferme in omnibus præliis. protected the Numidians almost in all the battles.

Jugurtha eâ fugâ modò diffidens impensiùs suis Jugurtha in that flight now distrusting more-earnestly to his rebus, pervenit cum perfugis et parte equitatûs affairs, arrived with the deserters and part of the cavalry in solitudines, dein Thalam, in magnum et into deserts, then to Thala, into a great and opulentum oppidum, ubi plerique thesauri, que wealthy town, where most-of the treasures, and multus cultus pueritiae much furniture of boyhood (relating to youthful instruction) of (his) filiorum erat. Postquam quæ comperta-sunt sons was. After-that which (things) were discovered Metello, quamquam cognoverat arida to (by) Metellus, although he had known dry (parched) atque vasta loca esse inter Thalam que proximum and desert places to be between Thala and the next flumen, in spatio quinquaginta millium; tamen, river, in a space of fifty miles; however aggreditur supervadere omnes asperitates ac he attempts to surmount all asperities (difficulties) and etiam vincere naturam, spe belli patrandi, even to overcome nature, in the hope of the war to-be-completed, si potitus-foret ejus oppidi. if he might have possessed [if he got possession] of that town. Igitur, jubet omnia jumenta levari Therefore, he orders all the beasts-of-burden to be lightened sarcinis, nisi frumento decem dierum: from the baggages, except corn of [for] ten days: cæterùm utres modò, et alia idonea but [moreover] bladders only, and other (things) proper aquæ portari. Præterea conquirit plurimum for water to be carried. Besides he seeks the most domiti pecoris ex agris quàm potest, of tamed cattle out-of the lands as he is-able, [he collects as que eò many tame cattle from the fields as he can,] and there (on them) imponit vasa cujusque modi, pleraque he places the vessels of every manner (kind), most (of them) lignea, collecta ex tuguriis Numidarum. Ad wooden, gathered out-of the cottages of the Numidians. To hoc imperat finitumis qui this (besides) he orders to the neighbouring (people) wh-dederant se Metello post fugam regis, had surrendered themselves to Metellus after the flight of the king, quisque portaret quum plurimum aquæ; (that) every-one should carry as-much-as-possible of water; prædictò diem que locum ubi forent he appoints-before the day and place where they should-be præstò. Ipse onerat jumenta ex flumine, at-hand. Himself loads the beasts-of-burden from the river, quam aquam diximus suprà esse proximam which water we have said above to be nearest oppido. Instructus eo modo proficiscitur ad to the town. Furnished in that manner he sets-out to Thalam. Deinde ubi ventum-est ad id loci, quò Thala. Afterwards when it was come to that of place, where præceperat Numidis; et castra posita-sunt he had instructed to the Numidians [to be]; and the camps were placed que munita; tanta vis aquæ dicitur (pitched) and fortified; so-great a force (quantity) of water is said missa repente coelo, ut ea foret (to have been) sent suddenly from heaven, that that might be (was) modo satis que super exercitui. Præterea now enough and above (more) for the army. Besides commeatus amplior spe; (there was) provision more-abundant (than) hope; [than was hoped quia Numidæ, sicuti plerique in novâ ditione, for;] because the Numidians, as most in a new surrender, intenderant officia.

 had strained (their) offices. [Had exceeded what they were required Cæterùm milites usi (sunt) religione magis to do.] But the soldiers used religion more (than) pluviam, que ea res addidit multùm animis the rain, and that thing added much to the minds (spirits) eorum; nam rati (sunt) sese esse curse of them; for they imagined themselves to be for care immortalibus Diis. Deinde pervenient ad Thalam to the immortal Gods. Afterwards they arrive at Thala postero die, contra opinionem Jugurthæ. on the following day, contrary-to the opinion of Jugurtha.

 Oppidani, qui crediderant se munitos The townsmen, who had believed themselves fortified asperitate locorum, perculti magnâ atque by the roughness of the places, struck by the great and insolitâ re, parare bellum nihilo segniùs; unusual thing, (began) to prepare war by nothing more-inactively; nostri facere idem. Sed [not the less on that account,] our (men) to do the same. But rex jam credens nihil infectum Metello, the king now believing nothing undone to (by) Metellus, quippe qui industriâ vicerat omnia, arma, inasmuch-as who by industry had vanquished all (things) arms, tela, locos, tempora, denique naturam ipsam, weapons, places, times (seasons), finally nature herself, imperitatem cæteris, profugit noctu ex ruling to the rest (of things), escaped by night out-of oppido cum liberis, et magnâ parte pecuniae; the town with (his) children, and with a great part of the money; neque moratus posteà in ullo loco ampliùs neither having delayed afterwards in any place more (than) unâ die, aut unâ nocte, simulabat sese properare one day, or one night, he did pretend himself to hasten gratiâ negotii; cæterùm timebat by favour (for the sake) of business; but he did fear proditionem, quam putabat posse vitare celeritate. treachery, which he did think to be-able to avoid by speed.
 Nam talia consilia capi per otium et For (he knew) such counsels to be taken through leisure and ex opportunitate. At ubi Metellus videt oppidanos from opportunity. But when Metellus sees the townsmen intentos prælio, simul oppidum munitum et intent in the battle, at-the-same-time the town fortified both operibus et loco, circumvenit moenia vallo by works and by the place, he surrounds the walls with a rampart que fossâ. Deinde jubet agere vineas and a ditch. Then he orders to act (put-in-action) mantelets locis maxumè idoneis ex copiâ; in the places most suitable according-to the opportunity;

[in such places, out of the whole number of places, that were most suitable que jacere aggerem super eas, et for them;] and to throw a mound above (beyond) those, and turribus impositis super aggerem tutari opus et towers being placed upon the mound to defend the work and administros.

Contra hæc oppidani the managers (engineers). Against these (things) the townsmen (began) festinare, parare; prorsùs nihil fieri reliquum to hasten, to prepare; altogether nothing to be made left ab utrisque. Denique Romani by each. [Nothing was left undone by each.] Finally the Romans fatigati multo labore antè, que præliis, potiti (sunt) wearied by much labour before, and battles, possessed oppido modò, post quadraginta dies, with the town [took the town] now, after forty days, quam ventum-erat eò; omnis præda than (since) it had been come thither; all the booty corrupta (est) à perfugis. Postquam ii vident was destroyed by the deserters. After-that those see murum feriri arietibus, que suas res the wall to be struck by the (battering) rams, and their things afflictas, comportant aurum atque overthrown [and ruined], they carry the gold and argentum et alia quæ decuntur prima silver and other (things) which are deemed the first [most valuable] (to) the royal house; there, loaded with wine and epulis, corrumpunt que illa et domum, et semet with feasts, they destroy both them and the house, and themselves igni; et ipsi volentes pependêre eas poenâs, by fire; and themselves willing paid those penalties, quas victi metuerant ab hostibus. Sed which being conquered they had feared from the enemies. But pariter cum Thalâ captâ, legati equally (at the same time) with Thala being taken, ambassadors venerant ad Metellum ex oppido Lepti, orantes had come to Metellus out-of the town Leptis, praying uti mitteret præsidium que præfectum eò; that he would send a garrison and a governor thither; [that] quemdam Hamilcarem, nobilem, factiosum hominem a certain Hamilcar, a noble, factious man studere novis rebus; advorsum to study for new things; [was exciting a revolution;] against quem neque imperia magistratum neque leges whom neither the commands of the magistrates nor the laws valerent; ni festinaret id, suam salutem, might avail; unless he should hasten that, their-own safety, socios illorum, fore in summo periculo.

 the allies of them, to be about-to-be in the highest danger.
 Nam Leptitani jam-inde à principio Jugurthini For the Leptitani ever-since from the beginning of the Jugurthine belli miserant ad consulem Bestiam, et postea war had sent to the consul Bestia, and afterwards Romam, rogatum amicitiam que societatem. Deinde, to Rome, to entreat friendship and alliance. Afterwards, ubi ea impetrata (sunt), mansere semper when those (things) were obtained, they remained always boni que fideles, et fecerant gnavè cuncta good and faithful, and had done actively all (things) imperata à Bestiâ, Albino, que Metello; que ita ordered by Bestia, Albinus, and Metellus; and thus adepti (sunt) facile ab imperatore, quæ obtained easily from the commander, what (things) petebant. Quatuor cohortes Ligurum emissæ they did ask. Four cohorts of Ligurians were sent-out eò, et Caius Annius præfектus. Id oppidum thither, and Caius Annius (as) governor. That town conditum-est ab Sidoniis, quos accepimus was built by the Sidonians, whom we have received (heard) profugos ob civiles discordias venisse (being) exiles on-account-of civil discords to have come in eos locos; cæterū situm inter duas Syrtes, into those places; but situate between the two Syrtes, quibus nomen inditum ex re.

to which the name (was) given from the thing. [From the nature

Nam sunt duo sinus in extremâ of the thing.] For there are two bays in the remotest Africâ prope, impares magnitudine, pari Africa nearly, unequal in size, with equal (similar) naturâ, quorum proxima terra sunt præalta; nature, of which (the parts) nearest to the land are very-deep; cætera alta, uti fors tulit; alia vadosa the rest deep, as chance has brought (directed); others fordable in tempestate. Nam ubi mare cœpit esse magnum in a tempest. For when the sea has begun to be great et sœvire ventis, fluctus trahunt limum, que and to rage by the winds, the waves draw [move] mud, and arenam et ingentia saxa: ita facies locorum sand and huge rocks: thus the appearance of the places mutatur simul cum ventis; nominatæ-sunt Syrtes is changed together with the winds; they have been named Syrtes ab tractu. Lingua ejus (quicksands) from the drawing [or dragging.] The language of that civitatis modò conversa (est) connubio Numidarum; state lately was changed by marriage of the Numidians; pleraque legum que cultûs Sidonica, most (things) of laws and of living (are) Sidonian, [their quæ retinebant laws and customs are, for the most part, Sidonian,] which they did retain eò faciliùs, quòd agebant ætatem procul therefore more-easily, because they did act (spend) age (life) far ab imperio regis. Multi que vasti loci erant from the authority of the king. Many and desert places were inter illos et frequentem Numidiam. between them and numerous (inhabited) Numidia [and the Sed quoniam venimus in has densely inhabited Numidia.] But since we have come into these regiones per negotia Leptitanorum, videtur non regions through the affairs of the Leptitani, it seems not indignum memorare egregium atque mirabile facinus unworthy to relate an excellent and admirable exploit duorum Carthaginiensium; locus admonuit nos of two Carthaginians; the place has reminded us eam rem.

 that thing.

Tempestate quâ Carthaginienses imperitabant In the time in which the Carthaginians did rule-over pleræque Africæ, Cyrenenses quoque fuere magni to most-of Africa, the Cyrenians also were great atque opulenti. Ager in medio arenosus, and wealthy. The land in the middle (was) sandy, unâ specie; neque erat flumen neque mons, with one appearance; neither was there river nor mountain, qui discerneret fines eorum; quæ res habuit which might distinguish the bounds of them; which thing held eos in magno que diuturno bello. them in a great and lasting war. [Which thing kept the

Postquam Carthaginians and the Cyrenians in perpetual war.] After that legiones item classes utrimque sæpè fusæ (sunt), the legions also the fleets on-either-side often were routed, que fugatæ, et alteri attriverant alteros and put-to-flight, and the others (the one) had wasted the others aliquantum; veriti ne alias aggredieretur mox some-what; having feared lest another might attack soon-after victos que victores defessos, faciunt the conquered and the conquerors wearied, they make sponzionem per inducias, ut legati proficiscerentur an agreement by truces, that deputies should depart domo certo die; in quo loco fuissent from home on a certain day; in what place they might have been obvii is haberetur communis finis opposite (had met) that should be held the common boundary utriusque populi. Igitur duo fratres missi of each people. Therefore the two brothers sent Carthagine, quibus nomen erat Philænis, from Carthage, to whom the name was Philæni, maturavêre pergere iter; Cyrenenses iêre hastened to proceed [with] the journey; the Cyrenians went tardius. Cognovi parum, ne id evenerit more-slowly. I have learned little, whether that may have happened socordiâ an casu. Ceterum tempestas solet by inactivity or by chance. But a tempest is accustomed retinere in illis locis haud secûs atque in to detain in those places not otherwise and (than) in mari. Nam ubi ventus coortus per æqualia sea. For when the wind having arisen through the level loca et nuda gignentium places and naked (of things) producing [and destitute of vegetation] excitavit arenam humo, ea agitata magnâ has raised the sand from the ground, that being shaken with great vi, solet implere ora que oculos; ita violence, is accustomed to fill the faees and eyes; thus prospectu impedito, morari iter. Postquam the view being obstructed, to delay the journey. After-that Cyrenenses vident se esse aliquanto posteriores, the Cyrenians see themselves to be by some-thing later, et metuunt poenas domi ob rem and fear punishments at home on-account-of the thing corruptam; criminari being spoiled; [ill managed] (they began) to accuse Carthaginienses digressos domo antè tempus; the Carthaginians having departed from home before the time; conturbare rem; denique malle omnia quam to confuse the affair; finally to prefer all (things) than abire victi. Sed cum Poeni peterent to depart overcome. But when the Carthaginians might (did) ask aliam conditionem, tantummodo æquam, Græci another condition, provided only equal (fair), the Greeks faciunt optionem Carthaginiensium, vel, [of Cyrene] make (offer) a choice of the Carthaginians, either, ut illi obruerentur vivi ibi, that they should be overwhelmed (buried) alive there (in those places), quos peterent fines suo populo; vel sese which they might seek (as) boundaries for their people; or themselves processuros eādem conditione in quem locum about-to-advance with the same condition into what place vellent: Philæni, conditione probatā, they might will: the Philæni, the condition being approved, condonavēre que se que suam vitam reipublicæ; bestowed both themselves and their life to the state; ita obruti (sunt) vivi. Carthaginenses thus they were overwhelmed (buried) alive. The Carthaginians consecravēre aras Philæni fratribus in eo loco; consecrated altars to the Philæni brothers in that place; que alii honores instituti (sunt) domi illis. Nunc and other honours were instituted at home to them. Now redeo ad rem. Postquam Jugurtha, Thalā I return to the thing (subject). After-that Jugurtha, Thala amissā, putat nihil satis firmum contra Metellum; being lost, thinks nothing sufficiently firm against Metellus; profectus per magnas solitudines cum paucis, having set-out through great deserts with a few, pervenit ad Gætulos, ferum que incultum genus he arrived to the Gætulians, a fierce and uncultivated race hominum; et eo tempore ignarum Romani of men; and in that time ignorant of the Roman nominis. Cogit multitudinem eorum in-unum: ac name. He collects a multitude of them together: and paullatim consuefacit habere ordines, sequi by-degrees accustoms (them) to hold ranks, to follow signa, observare imperium, item facere alia standards, to observe command, also to do other militaria. Præterea perducit proximos military (things). Besides he leads-over the nearest (friends) regis Bocchi, magnis muneribus et majoribus of king Bocchus, by great presents and by greater promissis ad studium sui: promises to a zeal of him: [to be zealous for him, and his quīs adjutoribus aggressus regem, impellit cause:] by which helpers having accosted the king, he urges uti suscipiat bellum advorsum Romanos. Id (him) that he may undertake war against the Romans. That fuit facilius que prouius eâ gratiâ, was more-easy and more-inclined (ready) from that favour (account), quod Bocchus, initio hujusce belli, miserat because Bocchus, in the beginning of this war, had sent legatos Romam petitum fœdus et amicitiam. Quam ambassadours to Rome to solicit a treaty and friendship. Which opportunissimam rem, bello incepto, pauci most convenient thing, the war being begun, a few impediverant cæci avaritiâ, quis erat mos had hindered blind by avarice, to whom it was a custom vendere omnia honesta atque inhonesta. to sell all (things) honourable and dishonourable.

 Etiam filia Jugurthæ nupserat anteà Boccho.
 Also, the daughter of Jugurtha had married before to Bocchus.
 Verum ea necessitudo dicitur levis apud Numidas But that relationship is deemed light among Numidians que Mauros: quod singuli habent quam-plurimas and Moors: because each have very-many uxores, quisque pro opibus; alii wives, every-one according-to (their) riches; others (some) denas; alii plures: sed reges amplius eò. Ita ten; others more: but the kings more therefore. Thus animus distrahit multitudine: obtinet (their) mind (affection) is divided by the multitude: it obtains nullam pro sociâ: omnes sunt pariter viles. none for a partner: all are equally cheap (despised).
 Igitur, exercitus convenient in locum placitum Therefore, the armies assemble into a place agreed-on ambobus: ibi fide datâ et acceptâ, Jugurtha to-both: there faith being given and received, Jugurtha accedit animum Bocchi oratione: Romanos esse inflames the mind of Bocchus by a speech: the Romans to be injustos, profundâ avaritiâ, unjust, with (of) profound avarice, [insatiable in their avarice,] communes hostes omnium: illos habere eandem common enemies of all: them to have the same caussam belli cum Boccho, quam secum, et cause of war with Bocchus, which (they had) with him, and cum aliis gentibus; lubidinem imperitandi, quis with other nations; a lust of ruling, to whom omnia regna sint advorsa: tum sese, all kingdoms are inimical: then himself, Carthaginienses paullò antè, item regem Persen; the Carthaginians a little before, also king Perses; pòst utì quisque videatur opulentissimus, ita afterwards, as each may seem most-wealthy, so fore hostem Romanis.

to be about-to-be an enemy to the Romans. [So he would be considered

His atque aliis talibus as an enemy of the Romans.] These and other such (words) dictis, constituant iter ad oppidum Cirtam; being said, they appoint (their) march to the town Cirta; quòd Q. Metellus locaverat prædam, que captivos, because Quintus Metellus had placed the booty, and the prisoners, et impedimenta ibi. Ita Jugurtha ratus (est) and the baggages there. Thus Jugurtha thought (it) fore pretium operæ, urbe aut captâ; to be about-to-be the price of the labour, the city either being taken; aut si Romanus venisset auxilio or if the Roman (general) might have come to aid suis, sese certaturos prælio. Nam, to his-own, themselves (to be) about-to-contend by a battle. For, callidus, festinabat id modo imminuere pacem crafty, he did hasten that now to diminish the peace

Bocchi; ne of Bocchus; [to lessen Bocchus's chance of making peace;] lest agitando moras, mallet aliud quām by managing delays, he should wish-rather another (thing) than bellum. Postquam imperator cognovit de societate war. After-that the commander knew of the alliance regum, facilit copiam pugnandi, non temerè of the kings, he makes an opportunity of fighting, not rashly omnibus locis, neque utì consueverat sæpè in all places, nor as he had been accustomed often jam, Jugurthâ victo: ceterùm castris already, Jugurtha being conquered: but the camps munitis haud procul ab Cirtâ, opperitur reges; being fortified not far from Cirta, he awaits the kings; ratus esse melius, Mauris cognitis, having thought (it) to be better, the Moors being known, [the cha-facere pugnam ex racter of the Moors being known,] to make battle according-to commodo, quoniam is novus hostis convenience, [advantageously,] since that new enemy accesserat. Interim, fit certior Româ had come-up (was added). Mean-time, he is made more-sure from Rome per litteras, provinciam Numidiam datam (esse) by letters, the province Numidia to have been given Mario. Nam acceperat antè, factum (esse) to Marius. For he had received (news) before, to have been made consulem. Quibus consul. [For he had before heard that he was made consul.] By which rebus percusus supra bonum atque honestum, things being struck beyond (what was) good or honourable, neque tenere lacrumas neque moderari (he was able) neither to hold (his) tears nor to govern linguam: egregius vir in aliis artibus, (his) tongue: an excellent man in other arts (qualities), pati ægritudinem nimis molliter.

 (he was able) to endure sorrow too softly (effeminately).
 Quam rem alii vortebant in superbiam; Which thing others did turn into pride; [did attribute to alii bonum ingenium pride;] others (said) (his) good ability [his honourable spirit] accensum-esse contumeliâ: multi, quod victoria to have been inflamed by the insult: many (said), because the victory jam parta eriperetur ex manibus: already obtained might be (was) snatched out-of (his) hands: cognitum satis nobis, illum excruciatum (esse) it has been known sufficiently to us, him to have been tormented magis honore Marii quam suâ injuriâ; neque more by the honour of Marius than by his-own injury; nor fuisse laturum tam anxiè, si provincia to have been about-to-bear (it) so solicitously, if the province adempta traderetur alii quām Mario. Igitur taken-away might be delivered to another than to Marius. Therefore impeditus eo dolore, et quia videbatur hindered by that grief, and because it did seem (the part) stultitiae curare alienam rem suo periculo, of folly to attend-to another's affair with his-own danger, mittit legatos ad Bocchum postulatum he sends ambassadors to Bocchus to request (that) "ne-fieret hostis Romano populo sine "he would not-become an enemy to the Roman people without caussā: eum habere magnam copiam societatis que cause: him to have a great opportunity of an alliance and amicitiae conjungendae, of-friendship to be joined, [of entering into alliance and friendship quæ esset potior bello: with the Roman people,] which might be better (than) war: quamquam confideret suis opibus, tamen, although he might (did) trust to his resources, however, debere non mutare incerta pro certis; to owe (he ought) not to change uncertain (things) for certain; omne bellum sumi facilè, cæterūm desinere every war to be taken-up easily, but to end ægerrumè; initium et finem ejus non esse in most-difficulty; the beginning and end of it not to be in potestate ejusdem, licere cuivis, etiam the power of the same (person), to be-lawful for any-one, even ignavo, incipere; deponi cùm victores for the cowardly, to begin (it); to be laid-aside when the conquerors velint: proinde consuleret sibi que suo may will: wherefore he should consult for himself and for his regno; neu misceret suas florentes res cum kingdom; nor should he mix his flourishing affairs with perditis Jugurthæ." Rex facit verba placidè satis the ruined (affairs) of Jugurtha." The king answers calmly enough ad ea: "Sese cupere pacem, sed misereri to those (words): "Himself to desire peace, but to pity fortunarum Jugurthæ; si eadem copia fieret of the fortunes of Jugurtha; if the same opportunity might be made illi, omnia conventura." Imperator to him, all (things) (should be) about-to-agree." The commander rursus mittit nuncios, contra postulata again sends messengers, against [in reply to] the requests Bocchi. Ille probare partim, abnuere alia. of Bocchus. He (willed) to approve partly, to refuse other (parts).

 Eo modo, nunciis missis que remissis sæpè In that manner, messengers being-sent and sent-back often ab utroque, tempus procedere, et bellum by each, the time (began) to advance, and the war trahi intactum ex voluntate Metelli. to be protracted untouched according-to the will of Metellus.
 At Marius, ut diximus suprà, factus consul But Marius, as we have said above, being made consul cupientissimâ plebe, postquam populus jussit by the most-eager common-people, after-that the people ordered provinciam Numidiam ei, jam antea infestus the province Numidia for him, already before hostile nobilitati; verò tum multus atque to the nobility; but then [he] (began) much (frequently) and ferox instare; modò lædere singulos, haughty to urge (them); now to injure (insult) individuals, modò universos: dictitare, "Sese cepisse now the whole: to say-often, "Himself to have taken consulatum spolia ex illis victis:" præterea alia the consulship (as) spoils from them overcome." besides other magnifica pro se, et dolentia illis; interim splendid (things) for himself, and grieving to them; mean-time habere prima, quæ erant opus bello: to have first, (those things) which were needful for war: postulare supplementum legionibus; arcessere to require a complement for the legions; to send-for auxilia à populis, et regibus, que sociis: præterea auxiliaries from peoples, and kings, and allies: besides accire quemque fortissimum ex Latio, plerosque to summon each bravest (man) out-of Latium, [the] most cognitos militiâ, paucos famâ, et known [to him] in warfare, [a] few by fame, and ambiendo cogere homines, stipendiis by canvassing to compel [to induce] men, (their) pays emeritis, proficisci secum. Neque (military duties) being served-out, to set-out with him. Nor senatus, quamquam erat adversus, audebat the senate, although it was hostile (to him), did dare abnuere illi de ullo negotio: cæterum etiam to refuse to him about any business: [thing:] but even laetus decreverat supplementum; joyful had decreed a complement; [a new levy of soldiers;] quia putabatur militiam plebi neque because it was thought warfare (to be) to the common-people neither volenti, willing, [because military service was thought to be disagreeable to the et Marius aut amissurus usum common people,] and Marius either about-to-lose the advantage belli aut studium vulgi. Sed ea res of the war or the zeal of the common-people. But that thing sperata (est) frustra. Tanta lubido eundi cum was hoped in-vain. So-great a passion of going with Mario invaserat plerosque: quisque Marius had seized most (of them): each (did think) sese fore locupletem prædâ; redditum himself to be about-to-be wealthy by the booty; about-to-return domum victorem: trahebant [and would return] home conqueror: they did draw (resolve) [they alia hujuscemodi animis; et did fancy] other (things) of-this-kind in (their) minds; and Marius arreverat eos non paullum suâ oratione.

 Marius had roused them not a little by his speech.
 Nam, postquam, omnibus quæ postulaverat For, after-that, all (things) which he had required decretis, vult scribere milites, advocavit being decreed, he wills to write (levy) soldiers, he summoned concionem populi, causâ hortandi, an assembly of the people, by cause (for the sake) of exhorting (them), et simul exagitandi nobilitatem, and at-the-same-time of harassing [inveighing against] the nobility, utì consueverat; deinde disseruit hoc modo:

as he had been accustomed; then he discoursed in this manner: “Ego scio Quirites, plerosque petere imperium “I know Romans, most (persons) to solicit power à vobis, et gerere, postquam adepti-sunt, from you, and to carry (it) on, after-that they have obtained (it), non iisdem artibus: primò esse industrios, not by the same arts (qualities): at first to be industrious, suplices, modicos, dehinc agere aetatem suppliant, moderate, afterwards to act (spend their) age per ignaviam et superbiam; sed videtur through sloth and pride; but (the thing) seems contrà mihi. Nam quo universa otherwise to me. For by what (by how much) the whole respublica est pluris, quam consulatus aut commonwealth is of more (consequence), than the consulship or prætura, eo illam debere the praetorship, by that (by so much) that to owe (ought) administrari majore curâ, quam hæc peti. to be administered with greater care, than these to be sought.

[That offices ought to be administered with greater care, than they are Neque fallit me, quantum negotii sought for.] Neither does it deceive me, how-much of business sustineam cum vestro maximo beneficio.

I may support with your greatest kindness. [How great a Parare bellum, et task your kindness has imposed on me.] To prepare war, and simul parcere aerario; cogere eos ad at-the-same-time to spare to the treasury; to compel these to militiam, quos nolis warfare, [to military service,] whom thou mayest be-unwilling offendere; curare omnia domi que foris; et to offend; to take-care-of all (things) at home and abroad; and agere ea inter invidos, occursantes, to act those (things) among the envious, the thwarting, factiosos, est, Quirites, asperius the factious, is, Romans, more-rough (more-difficult) (than) cpinione. Ad hoc, si alii supposition. [Is supposed.] To this (besides), if others deliquere, vetus nobilitas, fortia facta have transgressed, (their) ancient nobility, the brave deeds majorum, opes cognatorum et affinium, of (their) ancestors, the resources of relations and of kinsmen, multæ clientelæ, omnia hæc adsunt many patronages, all these (things) are-present præsidio: omnes spes sitæ mihi in memet; for a safeguard: all hopes (are) placed for me in myself; quas est necesse tutari virtute et innocentia: which it is necessary to defend by valour and by integrity: nam alia sunt infirma. Et, for other (qualities) [my other dependencies] are weak. And, intelligo illud Quirites, ora omnium esse I understand that Romans, the countenances of all to be conversa in me; æquos et bonos favere, turned upon me; the equal (just) and good to favour (me), quippe mea benefacta procedunt reipublicæ; because my benefits succeed for the state; [a faithful nobilitatem discharge of my duty is for the good of the republic;] the nobility quærere locum invadendi. Quò est to seek a place (opportunity) of attacking (me). Wherefore it is adnitendum mihi acriùs, uti vos neque to-be-striven to (by) me more-vigorously, that you neither capiamini, et illi sint frustra. may be taken, [ensnared,] and they may be in-vain (disappointed).

 Fui ita à pueritiâ ad hoc ætatis, ut I have been so from boyhood to this (period) of age, that habeam omnes labores, pericula consueta.
 I may have all labours, dangers accustomed. [That I am Est non consilium, accustomed to all labours and dangers.] It is not (my) design, Quirites, uti quæ faciebam ante vestra Romans, that what (things) I did do [before] (as) your beneficia gratuitò, benefits gratuitously, [before I received any reward from you,] deseram ea, mercede acceptâ. Est difficile I may desert those, a reward being received. It is difficult illis temperare in potestatibus, for those to govern in authorities, [to act with moderation in qui simulavâre sese probos per power,] who have pretended themselves honest through ambitionem; vertit in naturam jam ex ambition; it has turned into nature now from consuetudine mihi benefacere, qui egi omnem custom for me to act-well, who have acted (spent) all aetatem in optimis artibus. Jussistis (my) age in the best arts [pursuits]. You have ordered me gerere bellum cum Jugurtha; quam rem me to carry-on the war with Jugurtha; which thing nobilitas tulit ægerrumè. Reputate, quæso, cum the nobility has borne most-hardly. Consider, I pray, with vestris animis, num sit melius id mutari, si your minds, whether it may be better that to be changed, if mittatis quem ex illo globo nobilitatis ad hoc ye may send any out-of that band of the nobility to this, aut aliud tale negotium, hominem veteris prosapiæ, or other such business, a man of old stock, ac multarum imaginum, et nullius stipendii; and of many statues, and of no military-service; scilicet ut in tantâ re, ignarus omnium, forsooth that in so-great an affair, ignorant of all (things), trepidet, festinet, sumat aliquem monitorem he may tremble, may hurry, may take some admonisher sui officii ex populo. Evenit ita plerumque; of his duty out-of the people. It has happened so generally; ut is, quem vos jussistis imperare, quærat that he, whom you have ordered to command, may seek alium imperatorem sibi. At ego scio, Quirites, another commander for himself. But I know, Romans, qui postquam facti-sunt consules, cœperint (those) who after-that they were made consuls, may have begun legere acta majorum, et militaria to read the deeds of (their) ancestors, and the military præcepta Græcorum; præposteri homines! Nam precepts of the Greeks; the preposterous men! For est posterius tempore, prius re atque usu, it is later in time, (but) sooner in fact and experience, generè quām fieri.

to carry-on (an office) than to be made (an officer). [Qualifications and experience ought to precede the election of any one to the consul-ship, if it is to be advantageous to the republic.] Compare me nunc, Quirites, novum hominem, cum superbiā now, Romans, a new man, with the pride illorum. Quæ illi solent audire et legere, of them. What (things) they are accustomed to hear and to read, egomet vidi partem eorum; gessi alia; I-myself have seen part of them; I have carried-on others; quæ illi litteris ego didici ea what they (have learned) by letters I have learned those (things) militando. Nunc existumate vos facta an by serving-in-war. Now think ye (whether) deeds or dicta sint pluris. Contemnunt meam words may be of more (value). They despise my novitatem, ego, ignaviam illorum. Fortuna newness (obscurity), I, the inactivity of them. (My) fortune mihi, probra objectantur illis.

(is objected) to me, (their) disgraces are objected to them.

Quamquam ego existumo naturam omnium unam et Although I think the nature of all one and communem, sed quemque fortissimum common, but (I think) each bravest (man) generosissimum. Ac si posset jam quæri the most-noble. And if it might be able now to be inquired ex patribus Albini aut Bestiæ, ne from the fathers of Albinus or of Bestia, whether maluerint me an illos gigni ex se; they may have-rather me or them to be begotten of themselves; quid creditis responsuros, nisi, sese what believe ye (them) about-to-answer, unless, themselves voluisse liberos, quām optumos? Quod to have willed children, as the best (the best possible)? But si despiciunt me jure; faciant idem suis if they despise me by right; let them do the same to their majoribus; quibus nobilitas coepit ex virtute, ancestors; to whom (their) nobility has begun out-of valour, uti mihi. Invident meo honori; ergo invideant as to me. They envy to my honour; therefore let them envy labori, innocentiae, meis periculis etiam; to (my) labour, integrity, to my dangers also; quoniam cepi illum per hæc. Verum since I have received that (honour) by these. But (those) homines corrupti superbiā agunt ætatem men corrupted by pride act (spend) age [their life] ita, quasi contemnunt vestros honores; so, as-if they may despise [as if they despised] your honours; petunt hos, quasi vixerint honestè.

 they seek these (honours), as-if they may have lived honourably.
 Næ illi sunt falsi, qui expectant pariter Truly they are deceived, who expect equally diversissimas res, voluptatem ignavie, et the most-different things, the pleasure of inactivity, and præmia virtutis. Atque etiam cum faciunt verba the rewards of valour. And also when they make words apud vos aut in senatu, among you [when they speak before you] or in the senate, extollunt suos majores plerique oratione; putant they praise their ancestors in most-of the speech; they think sese clariores memorando fortia facta eorum; themselves more-illustrious by recording the brave deeds of them; quod est contrā. Nam quanto vita which is on-the-contrary. For by how-much the life illorum præclarior, tanto socordia horum of them (was) more-illustrious, by so-much the indolence of these (is) flagitiosior. Et profectò res habet se ita: more-criminal. And truly the thing has itself thus:
 gloria majorum est quasi lumen posteris, the glory of ancestors is as-if a light to (their) posterities, neque patitur bona neque mala eorum nor suffers the good nor evil (qualities) of them (to remain) in occulto. Ego, Quirites, patior inopiam hujusce in secret. I, Romans, suffer the want of this rei. Verum licet mihi thing. [Of having illustrious ancestors.] But it is lawful for me dicere meamet facta, id quod est multo præclarius.

 to say my own deeds, that which is by much more illustrious.
 Nunc videte quam iniqui sint. Quod Now see how unjust they may be (they are). What arrogant sibi ex alienâ virtute, concedunt they assume to themselves from others' valour, they grant non id mihi ex mea; scilicet, quia habeo not that to me out-of my-own; forsooth, because I have non imagines, et quia nōva nobilitas est not images (statues), and because a new nobility is mihi; quam certè est meliùs peperisse quam for me; which surely it is better to have produced than corrupisse acceptam. Evidem ego ignoro non, to have spoiled (it) received. Indeed I am ignorant not, si velint jam responderem mihi, orationem if they may will now to answer to me, a speech abundè facundam et compositam fore abundantly eloquent and composed (laboured) to be about-to-be illis. Sed, cùm in vestro to them. [Will be at their command.] But, when [amidst your maxumo beneficio lacerent me que vos most ample favour] they may tear (they revile) me and you maledictis omnibus locis, placuit non reticere, with reproaches in all places, it has pleased (me) not to be silent, ne quis duceret modestiam in conscientiam. lest any-one might lead (construct) moderation into consciousness.
 Nam quidem nulla oratio potest lædere me, ex For indeed no speech is able to injure me, according-to sententiâ mei animi. Quippe, est necesse vera the opinion of my mind. Because, it is necessary a true (speech) prædicet benè; vita que mei may declare well; [must speak well of me;] (my) life and my mores superant falsam. Sed quoniam manners overcome (are above) a false (one). But since vestra consilia accusantur, qui imposuistis your counsels are accused, who have placed (conferred) summum honorem et maximum negotium mihi; the highest honour and the greatest business to (on) me; reputate etiam atque etiam . . . num id revolve also and also (again and again) whether that sit pœnitendum. Possum non ostentare imagines may be to-be-repent. I am-able not to display statues neque triumphos aut consulatus meorum majorum nor triumphs or the consulships of my ancestors caussâ fidei;

 by cause (for the sake) of faith (proof); [in order to obtain your confiat si res postulet hastas, dence;] but if the thing may require (I can display) spears, vexillum, phaleras, alia militaria dona, præterea a standard, trappings, other military gifts, besides cicatrices adverso corpore. Hæ sunt meæ scars in opposite (front) body. These are my imagines, hæc nobilitas, non relicta statues, this (my) nobility, not left [to me] hæreditate, ut illa illis, sed quæ ego quæsivi by inheritance, as those to them, but which I have sought meis plurimis laboribus et periculis. Mea verba by my very-many labours and dangers. My words sunt non composita;
 are not composed; [they say my language is not polished;] facio id parvi; virtus ipsa ostendit I make (regard) that of little (consequence); virtue herself shows se satis; est opus illis artificio uti herself sufficiently; there is need to them with (of) artifice that tegant turpia facta oratione. Neque didici they may cover shameful deeds by speech. Nor have I learned Græcas litteras. Placebat parum dicere Greek letters (literature). It did please (me) little to learn eas, quippe quæ profuerunt nihil those (letters), forsooth which profited nothing to (their) doctoribus ad virtutem. At teachers to valour. [To make them brave men.] But doctus-sum illa multo optuma reipublicæ; I have been taught those (things) by much the best for the state; ferire hostem, agitare præsidia, metuere to strike an enemy, to agitate (mount) guards, to fear nihil, nisi turpem famam; pati hiemem et nothing, unless a base character; to suffer winter and æstatem juxtâ; requiescere humi; tolerare inopiam summer alike; to rest on the ground; to endure want et laborem eodem tempore. Ego hortabor milites and labour in the same time. I will exhort the soldiers his præceptis; neque colam illos arctè, by these precepts; neither shall I treat them strictly (parsimo-niously), myself richly; nor shall I make the labour illorum meam gloriam. Hoc est utile, hoc civile of them my glory. This is useful, this citizen-like imperium. Namque, cùm tute agas per authority. For, when thou-thyself mayest act by mollitatem, cogere exercitum softness (remissness), [in luxury and indulgence,] to force an army supplicio, id est esse dominum, by punishment, [to perform its duties,] that is to be a despot, non imperatorem. Vestri majores, faciendo hæc not a commander. Your ancestors, by doing these atque talia, celebravere que se que and like (things), have distinguished both themselves and rempublicam. Quis nobilitas freta, ipsa dissimilis the state. On whom the nobility relying, itself unlike moribus, contemnit nos æmulos illorum; et repetit in manners, despises us the rivals of them; and seeks omnes honores non ex merito, sed quasi debitum all honours not according to merit, but as-if due a vobis. Cæterùm superbissimi homines errant [from you]. But these most-haughty men mistake procul. Majores eorum reliquè illis omnia, far. The ancestors of them left to them all (things) quæ licebat, divitias, imagines, præclararam which it was lawful, riches, statues, an illustrious memoriam sibi; reliquère non virtutem; memory of themselves; they have left not virtue; neque poterant: ea sola neque datur neque nor were they able: that alone neither is given nor accipitur dono. Aiunt me sordidum et is received by gift. They say me (to be) mean and incultis moribus; quia exorno convivium with uncultivated manners; because I adorn a banquet parūm scite; neque habeo ullum histrionem neque little skilfully; neither have I any buffoon nor coquum pluris pretii quām villicum: quæ cook of more price than (my) steward: which (charges) lubet mihi, Quirites, confiteri. Nam accepi it pleases to me, Romans, to confess. For I have received ita, et ex meo parente et ex aliis sanctis (heird) so, both from my parent and from other reverend viris, munditias convenire mulieribus, laborem viris, men, refinements to suit to women, labour to men, que plus gloriæ quām divitiarum oportere esse and more of glory than of riches to behove (ought) to be omnibus bonis: arma, non supellectilem, esse to all good (men): arms, not furniture, to be decori. Quin, ergo, faciant id semper quod for ornament. But, therefore, let them do that always which juvat, quod æstumant carum: ament, delights (them), which they value dear: let them love, potent: ubi habuêre adolescentiam, ibi let them drink: where they have had (their) youth, there agant senectutem, in conviviis, dediti let them act (spend) old-age, in banquets, devoted ventri, et turpissimæ parti corporis; relinquant to the belly, and to the basest part of the body; let them leave sudorem, pulverem, et alia talia nobis, quibus sweat, dust, and other such (things) to us, to whom illa sunt jucundiora epulis. Verū est those (things) are more-pleasant (than) feasts. But it is non ita. Nam ubi turpissimi viri dedecoravêre not so. For when the basest men have disgraced se omnibus flagitiis, eunt ereptum præmia themselves with all infamies, they go to snatch-away the rewards bonorum. Ita luxuria et ignavia, pessumæ artes, of the good. Thus luxury and indolence, the worst arts injustissimè officiunt nihil illis, qui (qualities), most-unjustly injure nothing to those, who coluere eas; sunt cladi innoxiae have cultivated them; they are for destruction to the innocent reipublicæ. Nunc quoniam respondi illis, state. Now since I have answered to them, quantum mei mores, non flagitia illorum as-much-as my manners, not the infamies of them poscebant; loquar pauca de republicâ. did require; I shall speak a few (words) concerning the state.

 Primum omnium, Quirites, habete bonum animum First of all, Romans, have a good mind de Numidiâ; nam removistis omnia (spirit) concerning Numidia; for you have removed all (things) quæ tutata-sunt Jugurtham ad hoc tempus, which have protected Jugurtha to this time, (viz.) avaritiam, imperitiam, superbiam. Deinde exercitus avarice, unskilfulness, pride. Then the army ibi, est sciens locorum, there, is knowing of the places, [acquainted with the localities,] sed mehercule magis strenuus quam felix: nam but by-Hercules more brave than fortunate: for magna pars ejus attrita-est avaritiâ aut a great part of it has been wasted by the avarice or temeritate ducum. Quamobrem, vos, quibus by the rashness of the commanders. Wherefore, you, to whom militaris ætas est, adnitimini mecum, et capessite a military age is, strive with me, and take-in-hand rempublicam; neque metus ceperit the state; neither fear may have taken (let-it-take) quemquam any-one [neither let fear take possession of any one] ex from calamitate aliorum, aut superbiâ imperatorum. the misfortune of others, or from the pride of-commanders.

Egomet adero vobiscum in agmine, idem I-myself shall be-present with you on the march, the same (your) consultor in prælio, et socius periculi adviser in battle, and the companion of the danger [with you]; que geram me que vos juxtâ in omnibus and I shall conduct myself and you alike in all rebus. Et profecto, diis juvantibus, omnia things. And truly, the gods assisting, all (things) sunt matura, victoria præda, laus: si quæ are ripe, victory booty, praise: if which (things) essent dubia, aut procul, tamen, decet omnes might be (were) doubtful, or far-off, yet, it becomes all bonos subvenire reipublicæ. Etenim nemo good (men) to aid to the state. For no-one factus (est) immortalis ignaviâ: neque quisquam has been made immortal by indolence: nor any parens optavit liberis, uti forent æterni; parent has wished for (his) children, that they might be everlasting; magis uti exigerent vitam boni que honesti. rather that they might spend life (as) good and honest (men).

Dicerem plura, Quirites, si verba adderent virtutem I would say more, Romans, if words might add valour timidis: nam puto abundè dictum strenuis." to the fearful: for I think abundantly said for the brave."

Oratione hujuscemodi habitâ, postquam Marius A speech of this-kind being held, after-that Marius videt animos plebis arrectos, onerat naves sees the minds of the common-people roused, he loads ships properè commeatu, stipendio, armis, que aliis speedily with provision, with pay, with arms, and with other utilibus: jubet A. Manlium, legatum, useful (things): he orders Aulus Manlius, (his) lieutenant, proficisci cum his. Ipse, interea, scribere to set-out with these. Himself, (began) meanwhile, to write (levy) milites, non more majorum, neque ex soldiers, not in the manner of (our) ancestors, nor according-to classibus, sed uti libido cujusque erat, classes (tribes), but as the desire of every-one was, plerosque censos capite.

most (of them) registered by the head (nominal citizens). [Most Alii of them were of the sixth or poorest class of citizens.] Others memorabant id factum (esse) inopiâ bonorum, did relate that to have been done from want of good (men), alii per ambitionem consulis; quod others through the ambition of the consul; because celebratus-erat que auctus ab eo genere; he had been distinguished and increased by that kind (of people);

[because he owed his reputation and advancement to office principally to et quisque egentissimus that class of people;] and every most-needy (person) (was) opportunissimus homini quærenti potentiam; cui most-suitable to a man seeking power; to whom sua sunt neque curæ, quippe nulla his-own (things) are neither for a care, because (he has) none quæ, et omnia videntur honesta cum which (exist), and all (things) seem honourable with pretio. Igitur, Marius profectus in a price (reward). Therefore, Marius having set-out into Africam cum majore numero aliquanto quam Africa with a greater number by something than decretum-erat, advehitur Uticam paucis diebus. had been decreed, is borne to Utica in a few days.

Exercitus traditur ei à P. Rutilio legato.
 The army is delivered-up to him by Publius Rutilus the lieutenant.

Nam Metellus fugerat conspectum Marii; ne For Metellus had avoided the sight of Marius; lest videret ea quæ audita animus he might see those (things) which being heard (his) mind nequiverat tolerare. Sed consul, legionibus que had been unable to endure. But the consul, the legions and auxiliariis cohortibus expletis, proficiscitur in auxiliary cohorts being filled-up, sets-out into fertilem agrum, et onustum prædâ. Donat a fertile land, and loaded with booty. He presente omnia capta ibi militibus: dein aggreditur all (things) taken there to the soldiers: then he attacks castella et oppida parum munita naturâ et viris: the castles and towns little fortified by nature and by men: facere multa prælia, cæterum alia levia (he began) to make many battles, but other light (ones) aliis locis. Interim, novi milites in other (different) places. Mean-time, the new soldiers (began) adesse pugnæ sine metu; videre fugientes capi to be-present to battle without fear; to see the fleeing to be taken aut occidi; quemque fortissimum tutissimum: or to be slain; every bravest (man) the safest: libertatem, patriam, que parentes, et omnia alia liberty, country, and parents, and all other tegi armis: gloriam atque divitias (things) to be protected by arms: glory and riches quæri. Sic brevi spatio, to be sought (acquired) [thereby]. Thus in a short space (time), novi que veteres coaluere, et virtus omnium the new and the old (soldiers) coalesced, and the valour of all facta (est) æqualis. At ubi reges cognoverunt de was made equal. But when the kings knew of adventu Marii, abeunt diversi in difficiles the arrival of Marius, they depart different (apart) into difficult locos. Ita, placuerat Jugurthæ, speranti hostes places. Thus, it had pleased to Jugurtha, hoping the enemies mox effusos, posse invadi; Romanos, sicuti by-and-by scattered, to be-able to be attacked; the Romans, so-as plerosque, metu remoto, futuros laxiùs most (persons), fear being removed, about-to-be more-remissly que licentiùs. Interea, Metellus profectus and more-licentiously. Mean-time, Metellus having set-out Romam, accipitur lætissumis animis contra suam to Rome, is received with most-joyful minds against his spem: juxtâ carus plebi que patribus hope: equally dear to the common-people and to the fathers postquam invidia decesserat. Sed Marius after-that the odium had departed. But Marius (began) attendere pariter impigrè que prudenter res to observe equally actively and prudently the affairs suorum et hostium: cognoscere quid boni of his-own (men) and of the enemies: to know what of good esset utrisque, aut contrâ: explorare itinera might be to each, or otherwise: to reconnoitre the routes regum, antevenire consilia et insidias of the kings, to come-before (prevent) the designs and snares eorum: pati nihil remissum apud se, neque of them: to allow nothing negligent with himself, nor tutum apud illos. Itaque, aggressus safe with them [the kings]. Therefore, having attacked sæpè et Gætulos et Jugurtham agentes often both the Gætuli and Jugurtha acting (driving) prædas ex nostris sociis, fuderat itinere, booties from our allies, he had routed (them) on the march, que exuerat regem ipsum haud procul ab and had stripped the king himself not far from Cirtâ armis.

 Cirta from (of his) arms. [Compelled him to fly with loss of arms.] Quæ postquam cognovit modò gloriosa, Which (things) after-that he knew (to be) only glorious, neque belli patrandi, statuit nor (a means) of the war to-be-accomplished, he determined circumvenire singulas urbes, quæ erant to surround each-of the cities, which were opportunissimæ viris, aut loco pro hostibus, most-convenient in men, or in place (situation) for the enemies, et aduersum se; ita Jugurtham aut and against himself; thus Jugurtha either (would be) nudatum præsidiis, si pateretur ea, stripped from (of) the garrisons, if he should suffer those (things), aut certaturum prælio. Nam Bocchus sæpè miserat or about-to-contend in battle. For Bocchus often had sent nuncios ad eum, "velle amicitiam messengers to him, "to will [saying, that he wished] the friendship

Romani populi, ne timeret quid of the Roman people, (that) it might not-fear any (thing) hostile ab se." Exploratum-est parùm, ne hostile from himself." It has been discovered little, whether simulaverit id, quò improvisus he may have pretended that, in-order-that (being) unexpected accederet gravior, an mobilitate ingenii, he might come-on more-heavy, or from fickleness of disposition, solitus mutare pacem atque bellum. Sed being accustomed to change peace and war. But consul adire oppida que munita castella, the consul (began) to approach the towns and fortified castles, utì statuerat; avortere alia partim vi, as he had determined; to turn-away (alienate) others partly by force, alia metu, aut ostentando præmia ab hostibus. others by fear, or by displaying rewards from the enemy.
Ac primò gerebat mediocria, existumans And at-first he did carry-on moderate (things), thinking Jugurtham venturum in manus ob Jugurtha about-to-come into (his) hands on-account-of tutandos suos.
protecting his-own (people). [Would come in his power, by being forced Sed ubi accepit illum to protect his own people.] But when he received (heard) him abesse procul, et intentum alis negotiis, to be-distant far, and intent to (on) other affairs, visum-est tempus aggredi majora et magis aspera.

it seemed time to attempt greater and more rough

Erat magnum atque valens (difficult things). There was a great and prevailing (powerful) oppidum, nomine Capsa, inter ingentes solitudines; town, by name Capsa, among great deserts; conditor cuius memorabatur Libys Hercules. the founder of which was recorded [to be] the Libyan Hercules.

Cives ejus habebantur immunes apud Jugurtham, The citizens of it were held free with Jugurtha, levi imperio, et fidelissimi ob ea: (under) light government, and most faithful on-account-of those (things):

muniti aduersum hostes, non modo mœnibus, et fortified against enemies, not only by walls, and armis, atque viris, verūm etiam multò magis by arms, and by men, but also by-much more asperitate locorum. Nam præter by the roughness (difficulty) of the places. For except (the places) propinquā oppido, omnia vasta, inulta, near to the town, all (were) desert, uncultivated, egentia aquæ, infesta serpentibus, vis quarum wanting of water, infested by serpents, the violence of which (is) acrior inopiat cibi, sicuti omnium ferarum: ad more-sharp from want of food, so-as of all wild-beasts: to hoc, natura ipsa serpentium perniciosa, this (besides), the nature itself of serpents (being) destructive, accenditur magis siti quam aliâ re. is inflamed more by thirst than by (any) other thing.
Maxima cupido potiundi ejus invaserat A very-great desire of possessing of it [Capsa] had seized Marium, cum propter usum belli, Marius, as-well on-account-of the use (convenience) of the war, tum quia res videbatur aspera: et then (as) because the thing did seem rough: (arduous): and Metellus ceperat oppidum Thalam magnâ gloriâ, Metellus had taken the town Thala with great glory, situm que munitum haud dissimiliter; nisi quod situate and fortified not differently; unless that aliquot fontes erant non longè à mœnibus apud some fountains were not far from the walls at Thalam: Capsenses utebantur unâ jugi Thala: the Capsenses did use one continual (ever-flowing) aquâ modò, atque eâ intra [one never-failing spring of] water only, and that within oppidum, cæterâ pluviâ. Id the town, the rest [they used was] rain (water). That tolerabatur facilius, eò, que ibi et in omni was endured more easily, therefore, both there and in all Africâ, quæ agebat inultius procul à mari, Africa, which did act (live) more-rudely far from the sea, quia Numidæ vescebantur plerumque lacte because the Numidians did feed generally with (on) milk et ferinâ carne, neque quærebant salem, neque and with wild flesh, nor did they seek salt, nor alia irritamenta gulæ. Cibus erat illis other incitements of the throat (luxury). Food was to them aduersum famem atque sitim, non lubidini neque against hunger and thirst, not for pleasure nor luxuriæ. Igitur, omnibus exploratis, consul, for luxury. Therefore, all (things) being reconnoitred, the consul, credo, fretus Diis (abl.), nam poterat non I believe, relying on the Gods, for he was able not providere satis contra tantas difficultates consilio: to provide sufficiently against so-great difficulties by counsel: quippe tentabatur etiam inopiâ frumenti, because he was tried [threatened] also with want of corn, quod Numidæ student pabulo pecoris magis because the Numidians study for the food of cattle more quam arvo, than for the land, [because the Numidians are more occupied with et contulerant jussu regis cattle, than with tillage,] and they had carried [by order of the king] in munita loca quodcunque natum-fuerat: autem into fortified places whatsoever had been produced: but ager aridus, et vacuus frugum è tempestate; the land (was) dry, and empty of fruits in that time; nam erat extreum aestatis; tamen, exornat for it was the last of summer; however, he furnishes (himself) providenter satis pro copiâ rei: providently enough according-to the opportunity of the thing: attribuit omne pecus, quod fuerat prædæ he assigns all the cattle, which had been for booty superioribus diebus, agendum auxiliaribus in the former days, to-be-acted (driven) by the auxiliary equitibus; jubet A. Manlium, legatum, ire horsemen; he orders Aulus Manlius, (his) lieutenant, to go cum expeditis cohortibus ad oppidum Laris, ubi with the light-armed cohorts to the town of Laris, where locaverat stipendum et commeatum: que dicit se he had placed pay and provision: and he says himself venturum eodem, prædabundum, post paucos about-to-come to the same (place), plundering, after a few dies. Sic suo incepto occultato, pergit ad days. Thus his undertaking being concealed, he proceeds to flumen Tanam. Cæterum distribuerat quotidie in the river Tana. But he had distributed daily on itinere pecus exercitui per centurias, item æqualiter the march cattle to the army by hundreds, also regularly turmas;

(by) companies; [by companies of infantry, and proportionably by troops et curabat, uti utres fierent ex of cavalry;] and did take-care, that bladders might be made out-of coriis: simul, et lenire inopiam frumenti, hides: at-the-same-time, both to mitigate the want of corn, et omnibus ignaris, parare quæ forent mox and all (being) ignorant, to prepare what might be by-and-by usui: denique, cum ventum-est ad flumen sexto for use: finally, when it was come to the river in the sixth die, maxima vis utrium effecta (est). Ibi day, a very-great force (quantity) of bladders was completed. There castris positis levi munimento, jubet milites the camps being placed with a slight defence, he orders the soldiers capere cibum, atque esse paratos, uti egredierentur to take food, and to be prepared, that they should go-out cum occasu solis; omnibus sarcinis abjectis, with the setting of the sun; all the baggages being cast-away, onerare que se et jumenta modò aquâ.
to load both themselves and the beasts-of-burden only with water.
Dein, postquam tempus visum (est), egreditur Then, after-that the time seemed (fit), he goes-out castris; que itinere facto totam noctem, from the camps; and the march being made the whole night, consedit: facit idem proximâ. Dein he sat-down (encamped): he does the same on the next. Afterwards pervenit tertiatâ, multo ante adventum he arrived on the third (day), by much before the coming lucis, in tumulosum locum, intervallo non of light (day), into a hilly place, in an interval (of) not amplius duum millium ab Capsâ; que opperitur more (than) of two miles from Capsa; and waits ibi quam-occultissime potest cum omnibus copiis. there as-secretly-as he is able with all the forces.

 Sed ubi dies cœpit, et multi Numidæ, metuentes But when day began, and many Numidians, fearing nihil hostile, egressi (sunt) oppido, jubet repente nothing hostile, came-out from the town, he orders suddenly omnem equitatum et velocissimos pedites tendere all the cavalry and the swiftest infantry to proceed cursu ad Capsam, et obsidere portas: deinde, in a race (haste) to Capsam, and to block-up the gates: afterwards, ipse intentus sequi properè, neque sinere himself prepared (began) to follow speedily, nor to permit milites prædare. Quæ, postquam [nor did he permit] the soldiers to plunder. Which (things), after that oppidanæ cognovere, trepidæ res, ingens metus, the townsmen knew, the fearful things, great fear, improvisum malum, ad hoc pars civium an unforeseen evil, to this (besides) part of the citizens extra mœnia in potestate hœstium, coëgere without the walls in the power of the enemies, compelled (them) ut facerent deditioñem. Cæterum oppidum that they should make a surrender. But the town incensum (est); puberes Numidæ interfici; omnes was set-on-fire; the adult Numidians killed; all alii venumdati; præda divisa militibus. Id the others sold; the booty divided to the soldiers. That facinus contra jus belli admissum (est) non crime against the right (law) of war was committed not avaritiâ, neque scelere consulis; sed quia from avarice, nor by the wickedness of the consul; but because locus opportunus Jugurthæ, difficilis aditu the place (was) convenient for Jugurtha, difficult in access nobis: genus hominum mobile, infidum, to us: the kind of men (was) fickle, faithless, coërcitum antè neque beneficio neque metu. restrained before neither by kindness nor by fear.

Postquam Marius, magnus et clarus anteà, After-that Marius, great and illustrious before, patravit tantam rem sine ullo incommodo accomplished so-great a thing without any inconvenience suorum, cœpit haberi major atque of his-own (troops), he began to be accounted greater and clarior: omnia non benè consulta more-illustrious: all (things) not well planned trahebantur in virtutem. Milites habiti were drawn (construed) into valour. The soldiers held modesto imperio, et simul locupletes, in moderate authority, and at-the-same-time wealthy, (began) ferre ad cœlum; Numidæ timere to bear (extol him) to heaven; the Numidians (began) to fear (him) magis quam mortalem; postremò, omnes socii atque more than mortal; lastly, all the allies and hostes credere, aut divinam mentem esse illi, aut enemies to believe, either a divine mind to be to him, or cuncta portendi nutu deorum. all (things) to be foreboded by the nod of the gods. [By the will of Sed, ubi ea res evenit bene, consul the gods.] But, when that thing happened well, the consul pergit ad alia oppida: capit pauca, Numidis proceeds to other towns: he takes a few, the Numidians repugnantibus; corruptit igni plura deserta resisting; destroys by fire more deserted propter miserias Capsensium: omnia on-account-of the misfortunes of the Capsenses: all (things) complentur luctu atque cæde. Denique, are filled with mourning and with slaughter. Finally, potitus multis locis, (abl.) ac plerisque having possessed many places, and most (of them) in cruento exercitu, aggreditur aliam rem, non with a bloodless army, he attempts another thing, not eâdem asperitate quâ Capensium, with the same roughness (danger) with which (the affair) of the Capsenses, cæterūm haud secus difficultem. Namque haud but not otherwise (less) difficult. For not longè à flumine Muluchâ, quod disjungebat regnum far from the river Mulucha, which did separate the kingdom Jugurthæ que Bocchi, erat saxeus mons inter of Jugurtha and of Bocchus, there was a stony mountain between cæteram planitiem, satis patens, the rest-of [in the midst of] a plain, sufficiently opening (wide), mediocri castello, editus in-immensum, uno [on top,] with a moderate castle, elevated immensely, one perangusto aditu relicto: nam omnis natura very-narrow approach being left: for all the nature (of the (erat) præceps, velut opere atque consulto. place) was steep, as-if by work and by design.

 Quem locum Marius intendit capere summâ Which place Marius resolves to take with the highest (utmost) vi, quod thesauri regis erant ibi: sed ea res force, because the treasures of the king were there: but that thing gesta (est) melius forte quam consilio. Nam was carried-on better by chance than by counsel. For satis magna vis virorum atque (there was) a sufficiently great force of men and armorum, et frumenti castello, et fons aquæ, of arms, and of corn in the castle, and a fountain of water, locus importunus aggeribus que turribus, et aliis the place troublesome by ramparts and by towers, and by other machinationibus;
 engines; [the place unfit for mounds and towers, and other engines of war;] iter castellanorum admodum angustum, the road of the castle-defenders very narrow, præcimum utrimque: vineæ agebantur cut-across on-either-side: mantelets were acted (put in motion) frustrâ cum ingenti periculo. Nam cum eæ in-vain with great danger. For when those processerant paullò, corrumpebantur igni aut had advanced a little, they were destroyed by fire or lapidibus: milites neque consistere pro by stones: the soldiers (were able) neither to stand before opere, propter iniquitatem loci; neque the work, on-account-of the unevenness of the place; nor administrare inter vineas sine periculo: quisque to manage between the mantelets without danger: every optumus cadere aut sauciari; metus best (man) (continued) to fall or to be wounded; fear augeri cæteris. At Marius, multis diebus et to be increased to the rest. But Marius, many days and laboribus consumptis, anxius trahere labours being wasted, solicitous (began) to draw (ponder) cum suo animo, ne omittaret inceptum, with his mind, whether he should omit the undertaking, quoniam erat frustra; an opperiretur fortunam, since it was in-vain; or he should wait-for fortune, quâ (abl.) usus-fuerat sæpè prosperè. which he had used (experienced) often successfully.

 Quæ, cùm æstuans, agitaret Which (things), when boiling (perplexed), he might (did) deliberate multos dies que noctes, quidam Ligus, gregarius-miles many days and nights, a certain Ligurian, a common-soldier ex auxiliariis cohortibus, egressus castris out-of the auxiliary cohorts, having gone-out from the camps aquatum, animadvertisit cochleas repentes inter to water, perceived snails creeping among saxa, haud procul ab latere castelli, quod erat the stones, not far from the side of the castle, which was avorsum præliantibus; quarum cùm turned-away from (those) fighting; of which [snails] when peteret unam atque alteram, dein plures, he might (did) seek one and another, then more, studio legundi, egressus-est paullatim propè ad from a desire of gathering, he went by-degrees nearly to summum montis. Ubi, postquam intellexit the highest (point) of the mountain. Where, after-that he perceived solitudinem, vortit animum a desert, [deserted place,] he turned (conceived) a mind visundi ignara more humanæ cupidinis. of going-to-see unknown (things) in the manner of human desire.

Et fortè grandis ilex coaluerat in eo loco And by chance a large holm-oak had grown-up in that place inter saxa, modò paullulum prona, dein among the rocks, now (in part) a little bent, then inflexa, atque aucta in altitudinem, quò natura curved, and increased into height, whither nature fert cuncta gignentium; ramis cujus carries all of growing (things); to the branches of which modò, nisus, modò eminentibus saxis, one-time, having leaned, one-time to the projecting rocks, Ligus perscribit planitiem castelli; quòd the Ligurian writes-out (observes) the plain of the castle; because cuncti Numidæ aderant intenti præliantibus. all the Numidians were-present intent to (those) fighting.

Omnibus exploratis quæ ducebat All (things) being examined which he did lead (deem) fore usui mox, regreditur eâdem, to be about-to-be for use by-and-by, he returns by the same (way), non temerè, utì ascenderat, sed tentans et not rashly, as he had ascended, but trying and circumspiciens omnia. Itaque adit Marium looking-round-on all (things). Therefore he goes-to Marius properè; edocet acta; hortatur “tentet quickly; informs (the things) done; exhorts (that) “he may attempt castellum ab eâ parte, quâ ipse ascenderat the castle from that part, by which himself had ascended castellum; pollicetur sese ducem itineris que the castle; he promises himself the guide of the journey and periculi.”

Marius misit ex of the danger.” Marius sent (some) out-of (those) presentibus cum Ligure cognitum promissa present with the Ligurian to know the promises ejus; quorum utì ingenium cujusque erat, ita of him; of whom as the disposition of each was, so nunciavâre rem difficult aut facilem. Tamen they announced the thing difficult or easy. However animus consulis paullum arrectus. Itaque the mind of the consul (was) a little excited. Therefore delegit ex copiâ tubicinum et cornicinum he chose out-of the plenty (number) of trumpeters and bugle-men quinque quâam velocissimos, et quatuor centuriones five as most-swift, and four centurions cum his, qui forent præsidio; que jubet omnes with these, who might be for a guard; and orders all parere Liguri; et constituit proximum diem to obey to the Ligurian; and appoints the-next day ei negotio. Sed ubi tempus visum (est) for that business. But when the time seemed (proper) ex præcepto, omnibus paratis que according-to instruction, all (things) being prepared and compositis, pergit ad locum. Cæterùm illi, qui arranged, he proceeds to the place. But they, who præerant centuriis, prædocti ab duce, were-over to the centuries, previously-instructed by the guide, mutaverant arma que ornatum, capite atque had changed (their) arms and uniform, the head and pedibus nudis, uti prospectus que nisus per feet (being) naked, that the view and climbing through saxa foret facilius; gladii et scuta (among) the rocks might be more-easy; (their) swords and shields super terga; verùm ea (were placed) upon (their) backs; but those (shields were) Numidica ex coriis, gratiâ ponderis; Numidian (made) out-of hides, by favour (on account) of the weight; et simul quod and at-the-same-time in-order-that (the things) struck-against streperent leviùs. Igitur Ligus prægrediens, might sound more-lightly. Therefore the Ligurian going-before, vinciebat laqueis saxa, et si quæ radices did tie with ropes the rocks, and if any roots eminebant vetustate, allevati quibus milites did project from age, lifted by which the soldiers ascenderent faciliùs; interdum levare might ascend more-easily; sometimes (he began) to lighten (assist) manu timidos by the hand the fearful insolentiâ itineris; from the unusualness of the way; mittere singulos (plur.) inermes præ se, ubi to send each unarmed before himself, when ascensus erat paullò asperior; deinde ipse sequi the ascent was a little more-rough; then himself to follow cum armis illorum, tentare potissimum quæ with the arms of them, to try very-particularly what videbantur dubia nisui; ac ascendens did seem doubtful for leaning (climbing); and ascending sæpiùs eâdem, que descendens, dein statim very-often by the same (way), and descending, then immediately digrediens, addere audaciam cæteris. Igitur, stepping-aside, to add boldness to the rest. Therefore, fatigati diu que multùm, perveniant tandem in being fatigued long and much, they arrive at-length into castellum, desertum ab eâ parte, quod omnes the castle, deserted from (on) that part, because all aderant advorum hostes, sicuti aliis diebus. were-present against the enemies, so-as in other days.

 Ubi Marius cognovit ex nunciis, quæ When Marius knew from messengers, what (things) Ligus egerat, quamquam habuerat Numidas the Ligurian had acted, although he had had the Numidians intentos prælio toto die, tum verò engaged to (on) the battle in the whole day, then truly cohortatus milites, ipse et egressus extra having exhorted the soldiers, himself also having gone out without vineas, testudine actâ, the mantelets, a penthouse-engine being acted (put in motion), [the soldiers forming a testudo with their shields, over their heads and on their (cœpit) succedere, et simul terrere sides,] began to advance, and at-the-same-time, to affright hostem tormentis que sagittariis, et the enemy with shooting-engines and with archers, and funditoribus eminùs. At Numidæ, vineis with slingers at-a-distance. But the Numidians, the mantelets Romanorum subversis, item incensis sæpè antea, of the Romans being overthrown, also burned often before, tutabantur non sese mœnibus castelli; sed did defend not themselves in the walls of the castle; but (continued) agitare dies que noctes pro muro; maledicere to be-active days and nights before the wall; to rail Romanis, ac objectare vecordiam Mario; to the Romans, and to object-often insanity to Marius; minari servitium Jugurthæ nostris militibus; to threaten the slavery of Jugurtha to our soldiers;

[and to threaten our soldiers, that they would become the slaves of esse feroce secundis rebus. Interim, Jugurtha,] to be fierce in favourable things. Mean-time, omnibus Romanis que hostibus intentis all the Romans and the enemies (being) intent to (on) prælio, his certantibus pro gloriâ atque imperio, the battle, these [fighting] for glory and authority, illis pro salute, magnâ vi utrumque, signa those for safety, with great force on-either-side, the signs (cooperunt) canere repente à tergo; (trumpets) (began) to sing (sound) suddenly from the rear; ac mulieres et pueri primò, qui processerant visum and the women and boys first, who had gone-forth to see fugere; deinde uti quisque erat proximus (began) to flee; then as every-one was nearest muro; postremò, cuncti armati que inermes. to the wall; lastly, all the armed and unarmed.
Ubi quod accidit, Romani instare, When which (thing) happened, the Romans (began) to press-on, fundere eò acriùs, ac tantummodo sauciare to rout therefore more-vigorously, and only to wound plerisque; dein vadere super corpora most (of them); then to proceed over the bodies occisorum, avidi gloriæ, certantes petere murum; of the slain, greedy of glory, contending to seek the wall; neque præda morari quemquam omnium. nor plunder (was able) to delay any-one of all.

Sic temeritas Marii correcta forte, invenit Thus the rashness of Marius being corrected by chance, found (acquired) gloriam ex culpâ. Cæterum, dum ea res geritur, glory from fault. But, whilst that thing is carried-on,

L. Sulla quæstor venit in castra cum magno Lucius Sylla (as) quæstor came into the camps with great (much) equitatu; quod relictus-erat Romæ, uti cavalry; because [he] had been left at Rome, that cogeret ex Latio, et à sociis. Sed he might collect [them] out-of Latium, and from the allies. But quoniam res admonuit nos tanti viri, since the thing (subject) has reminded us of so-great a man, visum-est idoneum dicere paucis de natura it has seemed proper to say in a few (words) about the nature que cultu ejus. Nam neque sumus (disposition) and education [habits] of him. For neither are we dicturi de rebus Sullæ alio loco; et about-to-say of the affairs of Sylla in another place; and

L. Sisenna persecutus optumè et diligentissimè Lucius Sisenna having followed-up best and most-diligently omnium, qui dixere eas res, videtur of all (those), who have said (treated) those things, seems mihi locutus ore parùm libero.

to me having spoken with a mouth little (by no means) free.

Igitur
[His relation seems to me to have but little political freedom.] Therefore Sulla fuit nobilis patriciæ gentis, familiâ Sylla was a noble (man) of patrician nation (family), the family extinctâ propè ignaviâ majorum, eruditus being extinct nearly by the indolence of (his) ancestors, skilled juxtâ atque doctissimè Græcis atque Latinis alike and most-learnedly in Greek and in Latin litteris, ingenti animo, cupidus voluptatum, sed letters, with a great mind, desirous of pleasures, but cupidior gloriæ; esse luxurioso otio; more-desirous of glory; (he was able) to be in luxurious ease;

tamen voluptas nunquam [luxurious when at leisure;] however pleasure never remorata (est) ab negotiis, nisi quod potuit retarded (him) from (his) affairs, unless that it was-able consuli honestiùs de uxore : to be consulted more honourably about (his) wife : [unless he had consulted his own character more in matrimonial affairs :] (he was) facundus, callidus, et facilis amicitiâ; incredibilis eloquent, crafty, and easy in friendship; an incredible altitudo ingenii ad negotia simulanda; depth of ability to affairs to-be-dissembled; [of concealing largitor multarum rerum, ac maxumè his affairs;] a bestower of many things, and chiefly pecuniæ; atque felicissimo omnium ante of money; and (being) most-fortunate of all before civilem victoriam, fortuna fuit nunquam super the civil victory, (his) fortune was never above (his) industriam; que multi dubitavêre esset industry; and many have doubted (whether) he might be (he was) fortior an felicior. Nam habeo incertum more-brave or more-fortunate. For I have (it) doubtful pudeat magis an pigeat disserere (whether) it may shame [more] or may grieve (me) to discuss quæ fecerit posteâ. Igitur what (things) he may have done (he did) afterwards. Therefore postquam Sulla venit in Africam atque in castra after-that Sylla came into Africa and into the camps Marii, cum equitatu, uti dictum-est supra, of Marius, [with the cavalry,] as has been said above, (being) rudis anteâ et ignarus belli, factus-est solertissimus unskilled before and ignorant of war, he became most-intelligent omnium in paucis tempestatibus.

 [the most skilful soldier] of all in a few seasons.

Ad-hoc appellare milites [In a short time.] Besides (he was accustomed) to address the soldiers benignè; dare beneficia multis rogantibus, ipse kindly; to give benefits to many asking, himself (dare) aliis per se; invitus accipere; sed (to give) to others by himself; unwilling to receive (any); but reddere ea properantiùs, quam mutuum æs; to return those more-quickly, than borrowed brass (a loan); ipse repetere ab nullo: laborare id magis, himself to ask-again from no-one: to labour-for that more (rather), ut quām-plurimi deberent illi: agere joca, atque that as-many-as-possible should owe to him: to act jests, and seria cum humillimis; adesse multus in serious (matters) with the humblest; to be present much in operibus, in agmine, atque ad vigilias: neque the works, on the troop (march), and at the watches: nor interim lædere famam consulis, aut cujusquam mean-time to injure the character of the consul, or of any boni, quod prava ambitio solet: good (man), which corrupt ambition is accustomed (to do): tantummodo neque pati alium priorem only neither to suffer (any) other former [to be before consilio neque manu; antevenire plerosque. him] in counsel nor in hand (action); to outstrip most.

Quibus rebus et artibus, [He excelled most others.] By which things and arts (qualities), factus (est) brevi carissimus Mario que militibus.
 he became shortly most-dear to Marius and to the soldiers.

At postquam, Jugurtha amiserat oppidum Capsam But after-that, Jugurtha had lost the town Capsa que alias munitos locos, et utiles sibi, et and other fortified places, and useful to himself, and simul magnam pecuniam, mittit nuncios ad at-the-same-time great money, he sends messengers to Bocchum, adduceret copias quam-primum Bocchus, (that) he should lead-up (his) forces as-soon-as-possible in Numidiam: tempus prælii faciundi adesse. into Numidia: the time of battle to-be-made to be-at-hand.
 Quem, ubi accepit cunctari, dubium belli; Whom, when he received (heard) to delay, doubtful of the war, atque trahere rationes pacis: corrumpit and to draw (to devise) reasons of peace: he corrupts (bribes) rursus, ut anteā, proximos ejus donis, que again, as before, the nearest (friends) of him by gifts, and pollicetur tertiam partem Numidiæ Mauro ipsi, si promises a third part of Numidia to the Moor himself, if

Romani expulsi Africâ, aut suis the Romans (should be) driven-out from Africa, or his-own finibus integris, bellum compositum-foret. territories (being) entire, the war might have been arranged.

[Or peace being so made with the Romans, that he (Jugurtha) should lose Bocchus, illectus eo præmio, accedit no territory.] Bocchus, allured by that reward, comes-to Jugurtham cum magnâ multitudine. Ita exercitu Jugurtha with a great multitude. Thus the army amborum conjuncto, invadunt Marium jam of both being united, they attack Marius now proficiscentem in hiberna, decimâ parte diei setting-out into winter-quarters, the tenth part of the day vix reliquâ, rati noctem, quæ jam scarcely (being) left, having thought the night, which now aderat, fore munimento sibi was-at-hard, to be about-to-be for a defence to themselves victis; et si viciissent, nullo being conquered; and if they might have conquered, (to be) no impedimento, quia erant scientes locorum: obstruction, because they were knowing of the places: contrâ, utrumque casum [acquainted with the locality:] on-the-other-hand, each chance fore difficiliorem Romanis in tenebris. to be about-to-be more-difficult to the Romans in the darknesses.

Igitur consul cognovit simul, ex multis, de Therefore the consul knew at-the-same-time, from many, of adventu hostium, et hostes ipsi aderant; the arrival of the enemies, and the enemies themselves were-at-hand; et priusqnam exercitus quivit instrui, aut and before-that the army was-able to be arrayed, or colligere sarcinas, denique, antequam to collect the baggages, finally, before-that (it was able) accipere signum aut ullum imperium, Mauri atque to receive a signal or any command, the Moorish and Gætuli equites incurruunt in nostros non Gætulian horse rush against our (men) not acie, neque ullo more prælii, sed catervatim, in line (of battle), nor in any manner of battle, but in-troops, uti fors congregaverat quosque. Omnes qui as chance had collected every (troop). All who trepidi improviso metu, ac tamen memores fearful from the unforeseen terror, and however mindful virtutis, aut capiebant arma, aut defensabant ab of valour, either did take arms, or did protect from hostibus alios capientes; pars ascendere the enemies others taking (them); part (began) to mount (their) equos, ire obviam hostibus: pugna fieri magis horses, to go towards to the enemies: the battle to become more similis latrocino quam prælio: equites, pedites like to a robbery than to a fight: horse, foot permixti sine signis, sine ordinibus, cædere mingled without standards, without ranks, to slaughter alios, obtruncare alios; circumvenire ab tergo others (some), to maim others; to surround from the rear multos pugnantes accerrumè contra adversos: many fighting most-vigorously against (those) opposite: neque virtus, neque arma tegere neither valour, nor arms (were able) to cover (protect) (them) satis; quod hostes erant plures numero et sufficiently; because the enemies were more in number and circumfusi undique. Denique, veteres Romani que poured-round on-every-side. Finally, the veteran Romans and novi, et scientes belli ob ea the new (recruits), and (those) knowing of war on-account-of those facere orbes, si locus aut casus (things) (began) to make rings, if the place or chance conjunixerat quos: atque ita tecti atque instructi had united any: and thus protected and arrayed ab omnibus partibus, simul, sustentabant from all parts, at-the-same-time, they did support vim hostium. Neque fuit Marius territus aut the force of the enemies. Neither was Marius affrighted or magis demisso animo quam antea, in eo tam more with cast-down mind than before, in that so aspero negotio; sed vagari passim cum rough a business; but (he began) to hover every-where with suâ turmâ, quam paraverat magis ex his-own troop, which he had prepared (raised) rather out-of fortissumis quam familiarissumis; ac modò the bravest than the most-intimate; and one-time succurrere suis laborantibus, modò invadere to aid to his-own (men) labouring, one-time to attack manu hostes, ubi obstiterant with (his) band the enemies, where they had opposed confertissimi; consulere militibus, most-dense; to advise to the soldiers, [to aid his soldiers by quoniam poterat non imperare, omnibus fighting.] since he was able not to command, all conturbatis. Que jam dies consumptus-erat, cum, being disordered. And now the day had been spent, when, tamen, barbari remittere nihil, atque however, the barbarians (began) to relax nothing, and instare acriùs, uti reges præceperant, to press-on more-vigorously, as the kings had ordered, rati. noctem pro se. Tum having thought the night for themselves (in their favour). Then Marius trahit consilium ex copiâ Marius draws (takes) counsel from the plenty (condition) rerum; atque occupat duos colles propinquos inter of things; and seizes two hills near among se, uti esset locus themselves, [near to one another,] that there might be a place receptui suis. In uno quorum parùm ample for a retreat for his (men). In one of which little extensive castris, erat magnus fons aquæ: (not large enough) for camps, was a great fountain of water: alter opportunus usui, quia editus et the other (was) convenient for use, because (it was) raised and præceps magnâ parte: egebat munimento paucâ. steep in great part: did want with fortification in few Cæterùm jubet

 (in small part). [Required but little fortification.] But he orders

Sullam agitare noctem cum equitibus apud Sylla to agitate (spend) the night with the cavalry at aquam. Ipse contrahit in unum dispersos the water. Himself draws together into one (body) the scattered milites, hostibus conturbatis neque minus : soldiers, the enemies being disordered neither (not) less : dein subducit cunctos pleno gradu in collem. then he withdraws all in full pace unto the hill.
 Ita reges, coacti difficultate loci, deterrentur Thus the kings, compelled by the difficulty of the place, are deterred prælio: neque, tamen, sinunt suos abire from battle: nor, however, do they permit their (men) to depart longius, sed utroque colle circumdato multitudine, farther, but each hill being surrounded by the multitude, effusi, consedêre. Dein crebris ignibus factis, scattered, they sat-down. Then frequent fires being made, barbari lætari suo more, exsultare, the barbarians (began) to rejoice in their manner, to exult, strepere vocibus plerumque noctis: et to roar with voices most of the night: and (their) duces ipsi feroce; quia fugere non, generals themselves (were) fierce; because they fled not, agere ut pro victoribus.
 (they began) to act as for conquerors. [As if they were conquerors.] Sed cuncta ea facilia visu Romanis, But all those (things were) easy to be seen by the Romans, ex tenebris et editioribus locis, que erant out-of the darknesses and the higher places, and were magno hortamento. Verò Marius confirmatus for great encouragement. But Marius being encouraged plurimùm imperitiâ hostium, jubet very-much by the ignorance of the enemies, orders quam-maximum silentium haberi; ne quidem the greatest-possible silence to be kept; not indeed (even) signa canere, uti solebant the signs (trumpets) to sing (to sound), as they were accustomed per vigilias; deinde ubi lux adventabat, through the watches; then when light (day) did approach, hostibus jam defessis, ac captis somno paullo the enemies now being wearied, and taken with sleep a little antè, de-improviso vectigales tubicines before, (he orders) suddenly the tributary trumpeters omnes simul, item cohortium, turmarum, all together, also (those) of the cohorts, of companies, legionum, canere signa, [of the troops of horse,] of legions, to sound the signs (trumpets), milites tollere clamorem, atque erumpere portis.

 the soldiers to raise a shout, and to burst forth from the gates.
 Mauri atque Gætuli, exciti repente ignoto The Moors and Gætulians, roused suddenly by the unknown et horribili sonitu, poterant neque fugere, neque and horrible sound, were-able neither to flee, nor capere arma, neque facere aut providere quidquam to take arms, nor to do or to provide any omnino; ita vecordia quasi ceperat (thing) at-all; thus madness as-it-were had taken (seized) cunctos terrore, formidine strepitu, clamore, nullo all with terror, with dismay by the noise, by shout, none subveniente, nostris instantibus tumultu. assisting, our (men) pressing-on with tumult.
 Denique omnes fusi (sunt), que fugati; arma Finally all were routed, and put-to-flight; (their) arms et pleraque militaria signa capta; que plures and most-of the military standards taken; and more interempti (sunt) eo prælio, quam omnibus were destroyed in that battle, than in all superioribus. Nam fuga impedita (est) somno et the former. For flight was hindered by sleep and insolito metu. Dein Marius proficiscitur in by unusual fear. Then Marius sets-out into hiberna, uti cooperat, que decreverat agere winter-quarters, as he had begun, which he had resolved to act in maritimis oppidis, propter commeatum; (spend) in the maritime towns, on-account-of provision; neque tamen factus (est) socors aut insolens victoriâ; nor however was he made inactive or haughty by victory; sed incedere quadrato agmine pariter but (continued) to march in a squared troop (array) equally atque in conspectu hostium. Sulla curabat and (as) in sight of the enemies. Sylla did take-care cum equitatu apud dextimos, A. Manlius (commanded) with the cavalry at (on) the right, Aulus Manlius cum funditoribus et sagittariis, præterea cohortes with the slingers and archers, besides the cohorts Ligurum in sinistrâ parte; locaverat of the Ligurians (commanded) in the left part; he had placed tribunos primos et extremos cum expeditis tribunes first and last with the light-armed manipulis. Perfugæ minumè cari, et divisions. Deserters (persons) by-no-means dear, and scientissimi regionum, explorabant iter most-skilful of the countries, did reconnoitre the march hostium. Consul simul providere of the enemies. The consul at-the-same-time (continued) to provide omnia, quasi nullo imposito; all (things), as-if no-one being placed-over (the men); adesse apud omnes, laudare, increpare to be-present at (with) all, to praise, to chide (those) merentes. Ipse armatus que intentus item cogebat deserving. Himself armed and prepared also did compel milites; neque munire castra secus the soldiers; nor (did he cease) to fortify the camps otherwise atque facere iter;

 and (than) to make the march; [he fortified his camps with the same mittere cohortes ex care that he had made his march;] to send cohorts out-of legionibus excubitum in portâ, auxiliarios equites the legions to watch in the gate, the auxiliary cavalry pro castris; præterea locare alios super vallum before the camps; besides to place others above the rampart in munimentis, ipse circuire vigilias, non in the fortifications, himself to go-about the watches, not diffidentiâ futuri quæ from distrust of future (completion of) what he might have (had) imperavisset, quām utī labos exæquatus cum ordered, as that the labour being equalled with imperatore esset militibus volentibus. the commander might be to the soldiers willing. [That the commander sharing in the toils of the soldiers, they might the more willingly

Et sanè Marius coercerbat exercitum bear them.] And truly Marius did restrain (his) army magis pudore, quām malo illo et aliis more by shame, than by evil (severity) in that (time) and in other temporibus Jugurthini belli; quod multi aiebant times of the Jugurthine war; which many did say fieri per ambitionem; pars quòd habuisset to be done through ambition; part(said) because he might have held voluptati à pueritiâ consuetam duritiam, et alia for pleasure from boyhood (his) accustomed hardihood, and other quæ cæteri vocant miserias. Nisi tamen (things) which the rest call miseries. Unless (but) however respublica gesta (est) benè atque decorè, pariter the state was carried-on well and becomingly, equally ac sævissimo imperio. Igitur citi and (as) in the most-cruel authority. Therefore speedy speculatores ostendunt sese simul spies show themselves at-the-same-time undique haud longè ab oppido Cirta, quarto from-every-side not far from the town Cirta, in the fourth die; quâ re hostis intelligitur adesse. Sed day; by which thing the enemy is understood to be-at-hand. But quia redeuntes diversi, alias ab because returning different, the one (from one, the other) from aliâ parte, atque omnes significabant idem; another part, and all did signify (prove) the same consul incertus quonam modo instrueret (thing); the consul doubtful in what manner he should arrange aciem, nullo ordine commutato, paratus the line (of battle), no order being changed, prepared advorsum omnia opperitur ibidem. Ita against all (things) he waits in-the-same-place. Thus spes frustrata (est) Jugurtham, qui distribuerat hope disappointed Jugurtha, who had divided (his) copias in quatuor partes, ratus aliquos ex forces into four parts, having thought some out-of omnibus æquè venturos hostibus ab tergo. all equally about-to-come to (on) the enemies from the rear.

 Interim Sulla, quem hostes attigerant primùm, Mean-time Sylla, whom the enemies had reached first, cohortatus suos, ipse que alii invadunt having exhorted his (men), himself and the others attack Mauros turmatim et equis confertis the Moors by-troops and with horses crowded quam-maxumè; cæteri manentes in loco as-much-as-possible; the rest remaining in (their) place (began) tegere corpora ab jaculis emissis to cover (protect) (their) bodies from the javelins sent eminùs, et obtruncare, si qui venerant from-a-distance, and to massacre, [such,] if any [as] had come in manus. Dum equites præliantur eo into (their) hands. Whilst the cavalry fight in that modo, Bocchus cum peditibus, quos filius ejus, manner, Bocchus with the infantry, which the son of him, Volux, adduxerat, neque adfuerant in priore Volux, had led-up, nor had they been-present in the former pugnâ, morati in itinere, invadunt postremam battle, having delayed on the march, attack the last [rear] aciem Romanorum. Marius agebat tum apud line of the Romans. Marius acted then at (with) primos, quòd Jugurtha ibi cum plurimis. the first, [in front,] because Jugurtha [was] there with very-many.
 Dein Numida, adventu Bocchi cognito, Then the Numidian, [Jugurtha,] the arrival of Bocchus being known, convertit clàm. cum paucis ad pedites; ibi turns secretly with a few (men) to the infantry; there exclamat Latinè, nam didicerat loqui he cries-out Latinly, [in Latin,] for he had learned to speak (that apud Numantiam, "Nostros pugnare language) at Numantia, "Our (men) to fight frustrâ; Marium interfectum (esse) paullo antè 'n-vain; Marius to have been slain a little before suâ manu:" simul ostendere by his-own hand:" at-the-same-time (he began) to show (his) gladium oblitum sanguine, quem cruentaverat sword smeared with blood, which he had stained-with-blood in pugnâ, nostro pedite occiso impigre in the battle, our foot-soldiery being slain actively (bravely) satis.

enough. [Which he had stained with the blood of one of our foot-soldiers, Quod ubi milites accepêre quickly slain.] Which when the soldiers received (heard) torrentur magis atrocitate rei quam they are affrighted more by the dreadfulness of the thing than fide nuncii; que barbari simul by the faith (belief) of the messenger; and the barbarians at-the-same-time tollere animos, et incedere (began) to raise (their) minds (spirits), and to advance acriùs in percuslos Romanos. Que jam more-vigorously against the astonished Romans. And now aberant paullum à fugâ, cum Sulla, iis they were-distant little from flight, when Sylla, those profligatis advorsum quos ferat, rediens, incurrit being routed against whom he had gone, returning, rushes-on Mauris ab latere. Bocchus avertitur statim. to the Moors from the flank. Bocchus is turned immediately.

At dum Jugurtha cupit sustentare suos et retinere But whilst Jugurtha desires to support his-own and to retain victoriam jam propè adeptam, circumventus ab the victory now nearly obtained, being surrounded by equitibus dextrâ sinistrâ, omnibus occisis, the cavalry on the right (and) left, all being killed, (he) solus vitabundus erumpit inter tela hostium. alone about-escaping bursts-forth between the darts of the enemies.

Atque Marius interim, equitibus fugatis, accurrit And Marius mean-time, the cavalry being put-to-flight, runs-up auxilio suis, quos acceperat jam to aid to his (men), whom he had received (heard) [now] pelli. Denique hostes jam fusi (sunt) to be repulsed. Finally the enemies now were routed undique. Tum horribile spectaculum in on-every-side. Then (was) a horrible sight in patentibus campis; sequi, fugere; occidi, the open plains; (they were seen) to follow, to flee; to be killed, capi; equi atque viri afficti; ac multi, to be taken; horses and men dashed-down; and many, vulneribus acceptis, posse neque fugere, wounds being received, (were seen) to be able neither to flee, neque pati quietem; modò niti, ac nor to endure rest; one-time to lean (to stand-up), and statim concidere: postremò, omnia quā immediately to fall-down: lastly, all (places) where visus erat, constrata telis, armis, cadaveribus; the view was, were strewed with darts, with arms, with dead-bodies; et humus infecta sanguine inter ea. Postea and the ground. stained with blood between them. Afterwards loci consul jam victor haud dubiè, of place (after this event) the consul now conqueror not doubtfully, pervenit in oppidum Cirtam, quò profectus arrived into the town Cirta, whither having set-out initio intenderat. Edò legati in the beginning he had determined (to arrive). Thither ambassadors veniunt à Boccho post quintum diem, quām come from Bocchus after the fifth day, than (since) barbari pugnaverant male iterum; qui petivère the barbarians had fought badly again; who sought ab Mario verbis regis, "Mitteret from Marius in the words of the king, (that) "He would send duos quām-fidissimos ad eum: velle [two] (persons) as-faithful-as-possible to him: to will disserere cum iis de suo commodo et de to discuss with them about his-own advantage and about (that) Romani populi." Ille statim jubet L. Sullam et of the Roman people." He immediately orders Lucius Sylla and A. Manlium ire. Qui, quamquam ibant acciti: Aulus Manlius to go. Who, although they did go sent-for:

tamen, placit facere verba apud however, it pleased (them) to make words (a speech) at (to) regem, uti aut flecterent avorsum ingenium, the king, that either they might bend a disinclined disposition, aut accenderent vehementius cupidum or might inflame (it) more-earnestly (being) desirous pacis. Itaque Sulla, facundiæ cujus of peace. Therefore Sylla, to the eloquence of whom concessum (est) à Manlio, non ætati, locutus (est) it was yielded by Manlio, not to age, spoke pauca verba hujuscemodi: "Rex Bocche, magna a few words of this-kind: "King Bocchus, great lætitia est nobis, cum dii monuere te talem gladness is to us, when the gods have advised thee such virum, uti aliquando malles pacem a man, that some-time (at length) thou shouldst prefer peace quam bellum; neui commaculares te optumum than war; nor shouldst stain thyself a very-good (man) miscendo cum Jugurthâ, pessimo omnium: simul, by mingling with Jugurtha, the worst of all: at-the-same-time, demeres nobis acerbam necessitudinem thou shouldst take from us the bitter necessity persequi pariter te errantem, et illum to pursue (punish) equally thee erring, and him sceleratissimum. Ad hoc, visum (est) melius most-guilty. To this (besides), it seemed better Romano populo, inopi jam à principio, querere to the Roman people, poor already from the begining, to seek amicos quam servos; que rati (sunt) tutius imperitare friends than slaves; and they thought safer to rule volentibus quam coactis. Vero nulla amicitia (them) willing than compelled. But no friendship (is) opportunior tibi nostrâ: primùm, quod more convenient to thee (than) ours: firstly, because absumus procul; in quo minimum offendæ, we are-distant far; in which (case) the least of offence (is), par gratia, ac-si [there is the least cause of offence, but of] equal favour, as-if adessemus: dein, quòd habemus parentes we might be-at-hand: then, because we have (people) obeying (us) abundè; satis amicorum fuit neque nobis, abundantly; (but) enough of friends has been neither to us, neque cuiquam omnium. Atque, utinam hoc nor to any-one of all. And, O-that this placuisset tibi à principio! profectò, might have pleased to thee from the beginning! certainly, accepisses multo plura bona ad hoc thou mightest have received by much more good (things) to this tempus, quam percessus-es mala. Sed quoniam time, than thou hast suffered evil. But since fortuna regit pleraque humanarum rerum, cui fortune rules most of human things, to which scilicet placuisse experiri et nostram forsooth she has pleased to try [that you try] both our vim et gratiam; nunc quando licet per illam, force and favour; now when it is-lawful through her, festina atque perge uti cœpisti. Habes multa hasten and proceed as thou hast begun. Thou hast many atque opportuna quòd superes and convenient (means) in-order-that thou may'st exceed faciliùs errata officis. more-easily (the things) erred-in by kindnesses. [By kind services.]

Postremò, demitte hoc in tuum pectus, Romanum Lastly, send-down this into thy breast, the Roman populum nunquam victum-esse beneficiis. Nam people never to have been overcome by favours. For tute scis quid valeat bello." Bocchus thyself knowest what it may prevail in war." Bocchus (answered) placidè et benignè ad ea; simul facit calmly and kindly to those (words); at-the-same-time he makes pauca verba pro suo delicto: a few words for his transgression: [and spoke briefly in ex-

"Se cepisse arma non tenuation of his transgression:] "Himself to have taken arms not hostili animo, sed ob tutandum with a hostile mind, but on-account-of protecting (his) regnum: nam nequivisse pati eam partem kingdom: for to have been-unable to endure that part Numidiæ, unde expulerit (perf. sub.) Jugurtham of Numidia, whence he may have expelled (he expelled) Jugurtha vi, factam suam jure belli, vastari à by force, being made his-own by the right of war, to be ravaged by Mario: præterea, legatis missis Romam anteā, Marius: besides, ambassadors having been sent to Rome before, repulsum (esse)

to have been rejected [that he was rejected] from friendship:

cæterū omittere vetera, ac missurum but to omit old (matters), and (to be) about-to-send legatos tum ad senatum, si [that he was about to send] ambassadors then to the senate, if liceret per Marium." Dein, copiâ it might-be-lawful through Marius." Afterwards, opportunity factâ, animus barbari flexus (est) ab amicis, being made, the mind of the barbarian was bent by friends, quos Jugurtha, legatione Sullæ et Manlii cognitâ, whom Jugurtha, the embassy of Sylla and of Manlius being known, metuens id quod parabatur, corruperat fearing that which was prepared, had corrupted (bribed) donis. Interea, Marius, exercitu composito in by gifts. Mean-time, Marius, the army being arranged in hibernaculis, proficiscitur cum expeditis cohortibus, winter-stations, sets-out with the light-armed cohorts, et parte equitatûs, in sola loca, obsessum and with part of the cavalry, into lonely places, to besiege regiam turrim, quod Jugurtha imposuerat omnes a royal tower, where Jugurtha had placed all perfugas præsidium. Tum Bocchus rursus, seu deserters (as) a garrison. Then Bocchus again, either reputando quæ venerant sibi duobus by reflecting what (things) had come (happened) to himself in two præliis, seu admonitus ab aliis amicis, quos Jugurtha battles, or advised by other friends, whom Jugurtha reliquerat incorruptos, de legit quinque ex omni had left unbribed, chose five out-of all copiam necessariorum; fides quorum the plenty (number) of connexions; [friends;] the faith of whom et cognita (est), et ingenia erant validissima. both was known, and the abilities were most-able.

Jubet eos ire legatos ad Marium; ac dein, He orders those to go (as) ambassadors to Marius; and then, si placeat, Romam: permittit ipsis licentiam if it may please (him), to Rome: he allows to them the liberty rerum agendarum, et belli componendi quocunque of things to-be-acted, and of the war to-be-arranged in whatsoever modo.

manner. [He gave them full power to negotiate and bring the war to a

Illi proficiscuntur maturè ad close in any manner.] They set-out early (soon) to hiberna Romanorum. Deinde, circumventi the winter-quarters of the Romans. Afterwards, being surrounded que spoliati à Gætulis latronibus in itinere, and plundered by Gætulian robbers on the journey, profugint pavidi sine decore ad Sullam, they escape fearful without ornament [of office] to Sylla, quem consul proficiscens in expeditione reliquerat whom the consul setting-out on the expedition had left pro prætore. Ille habuit eos non pro vanis for prætor. He had (treated) them not for vain hostibus, uti meriti-erant, sed accurate et (fickle) enemies, as they had deserved, but carefully and liberaliter. Quâ re barbari et rati (sunt) liberally. By which thing the barbarians both thought famam avaritiae Romanorum falsam, et Sullam the report of the avarice of the Romans false, and Sylla amicum in sese ob munificentiam. friendly unto themselves on-account-of (his) liberality.
Nam etiam tum largitio erat ignota multis; nemo For even then bribery was unknown to many; no-one putabatur munificus, nisi pariter volens: omnia was thought . liberal, unless equally willing: all dona habebantur in benignitate. gifts were held in kindness. [As the result of kindness.]

Igitur patefaciunt mandata Bocchi Quæstori; Therefore they lay-open the commands of Bocchus to the Quæstor; simul petunt ab eo, uti adsit at-the-same-time they request from him, that he may-be-present (as) fautor que consultor sibi: extollunt a favourer and an adviser to themselves: they praise in (their) oratione copias, fidem, magnitudinem sui regis, speech the forces, faith, greatness of their king, et alia, quæ credebant aut esse utilia aut and other (things), which they did believe either to be useful or benevolentiae;
 (the part) of benevolence; [or tending to conciliate his good will;] dein Sullâ pollicito omnia, docti quo then Sylla having promised all (things), being taught in what modo facerent verba apud Marium, item manner they should make words at (before) Marius, also apud senatum, at the senate, [they should address Marius, and also the senate,] opperiuntur ibidem circiter quadraginta dies. Postquam they wait there about forty days. After-that Marius, negotio infecto quò Marius, the business being undone [unsuccessful] whither (to which) intenderat, redit Cirtam, factus certior he had aimed, returns to Cirta, being made more-sure [being in-de adventu legatorum, jubet que illos formed] of the arrival of the ambassadors, he orders both them et Sullam, que item L. Bellienum prætorem, venire and Sylla, and also Lucius Bellienus the prætor, to come Uticâ, præterea omnes senatorii ordinis undique; from Utica, besides all of senatorial rank from-every-side; quibuscum cognoscit mandata Bocchi, in with whom he knows (considers) the commands of Bocchus, in quibus potestas eundi Romam fit which [assembly the] power of going to Rome is made [granted] legatis; et inducæ postulabantur interea to the ambassadors; and truces were requested mean-time ab consule. Ea placuêre Sullæ et from [the] consul. Those (things) pleased to Sylla and plerisque: pauci decernunt ferocius; scilicet, ignari to the most: a few determine more fiercely; forsooth, ignorant humanarum rerum, quae, semper fluxae et mobiles, of human things, which, always evanescent and fickle, mutantur in-adversum. Cæterum tres Mauri, are changed contrarily. But three Moors, omnibus impetratis, profecti (sunt) Romam cum all (things) being obtained, set-out to Rome with Cn. Octavio Rufo, qui quæstor apportaverat Cnaeus Octavius Rufus, who (as) quæstor had brought stipendum in Africam; duo redeunt ad regem. the pay [to Africa]; two return to the king.

 Bocchus lubens accepit ex his cum Bocchus being-pleased received (heard) from these as-well cætera, tum maxumè benigitatem et studium the-rest, then (as) chiefly the kindness and zeal Sullæ. of Sylla. [Bocchus, among the rest, heard with pleasure chiefly of the Que Romæ kindness and zeal of Sylla, in forwarding their mission.] And [at Rome] respondetur hoc modo legatis ejus, it is answered in this manner to the ambassadors of him, petentibus amicitiam et fœdus, postquam seeking friendship and a treaty, after-that deprecati-sunt “regem errasse, et they deprecated (lamented) “the king to have erred, and lapsum (esse) scelere Jugurthæ:” “Senatus to have slipped by the wickedness of Jugurtha.” “The senate et Romanus populus solet esse memor and Roman people is accustomed to be mindful beneficij et injuriæ; cæterum facit gratiam of kindness and of injury; but it makes favour (forgiveness) delicti Boccho, quoniam pœnitet: of (his) transgression to Bocchus, since it repents (him): fœdus et amicitia dabuntur, cum meruerit.” a treaty and friendship shall be given, when he shall have deserved Quibus rebus cognitis, Bocchus petivit (them).” Which things being known, Bocchus requested per litteras à Mario, uti mitteret Sullam by letters (a letter) from Marius, that he would send Sylla ad se; arbitratu cuius consuleretur to himself; by the arbitration of whom it might be consulted de communibus negotiis. Is missus (est) cum about (their) common affairs. He was sent with præsidio equitum atque peditum, Baleariorum a guard of horse and of foot, of Balearian funditorum; praeterea sagittarii et Peligna cohors slingers; besides archers and a Pelignian cohort cum velitaribus-armis ière causâ itineris with light-arms went by cause (for the sake) of the journey properandi; neque muniti (sunt) secus to-be-hastened; nor were they protected otherwise (less) his, atque aliis armis ad vorsum tela with these, and (than) with other arms against the darts hostium, quod ea sunt levia. Sed denique of the enemies, because those are light. But finally quinto die, Volux, filius Bocchi, ostendit sese on the fifth day, Volux, the son of Bocchus, shows himself in itinere repente in patentibus campis cum non on the journey suddenly in the open plains with not amplius mille equitibus; qui euntes temere more (than) a thousand horsemen; who going rashly et effusè, efficiebant Sullæ que omnibus (in disorder) and dispersedly, did cause to Sylla and to all aliis et numerum ampliorem vero, et hostilem the others both a number larger (than) truth, and hostile metum.

 fear. [Which caused their numbers to appear greater than they really were to Sylla and the rest, and to excite fear of an approaching enemy.] Igitur quisque expedire se; tentare arma Therefore every-one (began) to prepare himself; to try (his) arms atque tela, intendere; and darts, [to-bend] [his mind to the approaching engagement;] aliquantus timor, sed amplior spes, quippe (there was) some fear, but greater hope, inasmuch as victoribus, et ad vorsum eos quos vicerant to conquerors, and against those whom they had conquered sēpē. Interim equites præmissi exploratum, often. Meantime the cavalry sent-before to reconnoitre, nunciant rem quietam, uti erat. Volux adveniens announce the affair quiet, as it was. Volux coming-up appellat quæstorem, se missum (esse) ob viam addresses the quæstor, (and says) himself to have been sent toward illis à patre Boccho, et simul præsidio. to them by (his) father Bocchus, and at-the-same-time for protection.

 Deinde eunt conjuncti sine metu eum et proximum Then they go united without fear that and the next diem. Pòst ubi castra locata (sunt), et day. Afterwards when the camps were placed (pitched), and erat vesper diei. Maurus incerto it was the evening of the day, the Moor [Volux] with uncertain vultu pavens accurrit repente ad Sullam, que countenance trembling runs-up suddenly to Sylla, and dicit, "Cognitum (esse) sibi ex speculatoribus says, "To have been known to himself from scouts Jugurtham abesse haud procul, simul rogat Jugurtha to be-distant not far, at-the-same-time he entreats atque hortatur profugeret clam secum and exhorts (that) he would escape privately with him noctu." Ille feroci animo negat, "se pertimescere by night." He with fierce mind denies, "himself to fear-much Numidam toties fusum; credere satis virtuti the Numidian so-often routed; to trust sufficiently to the valour suorum; etiam si certa pestis adesset, of his (men); even if certain destruction might be-at-hand, mansurum potius quam quos ducebatur, (to be) about-to-remain rather than (those) whom he did lead, proditis, parceret turpi fugâ incertæ vitæ, being betrayed, he should spare by base flight to an uncertain life, ac forsitan interititæ paullo pòst morbo." and perhaps about-to-perish a little after by disease." Caeterum monitus ab eodem, uti proficiscerentur But being admonished by the same, that they should set-out noctu, approbat cōsilium; ac statim jubet by night, he approves the plan; and immediately orders milites cōnatos esse in castris; que creberrimos the soldiers having supped to be in the camps; and very-frequent ignes fieri, dein primā vigiliā egredi silentio. fires to be made, then in the first watch to go out in silence.

Que jam omnibus fessis nocturno itinere,
And now all being fatigued with the nightly march, Sulla pariter cum ortu solis metabatur Sylla equally (together) with the rising of the sun did measure castra; cum Mauri equites nunciant Jugurtham camps; when the Moorish cavalry announce Jugurtha consedisse ante eos, intervallo circitèr to have sat-down (encamped) before them, in a distance about duūm millium. Postquam quod auditum-est, of two miles. After-that which (thing) was heard, tum verò ingens metus invadit nostros; then truly great fear seizes our (men); (they began) credere se proditos à Voluce, et circumventos to believe themselves betrayed by Volux, and surrounded insidiis. Ac fuère qui with snares. And there were (those) who would (did) dicerent (imp. sub.) vindicandum manu, say (the thing) to be avenged by hand, [that he (Volux) neque tantum scelus ought to be immediately punished] nor so-great guilt relinquendum inultum apud illum. At Sulla, to-be-left unrevenged at (with) him. But Sylla, quamquam existumabat eadem, tamen prohibet although he did think the same (things), however prohibits Maurum ab injuriā; hortatur suos, (protects) the Moor from injury; encourages his (men), “utī gererent fortem animum; pugnatum (esse) “that they should carry a brave mind; to have been fought sæpè antè benè paucis strenuis advorsus often before well with a few brave (men) against multitudinem; quanto minus pepercissent a multitudine; by-how-much less they might have spared sibi in prælio, fore tanto tutiores; to themselves in battle, to-be-about-to-be by-so-much more safe; nec decere quemquam, qui armaverit manus, nor to become any-one, who may have armed (his) hands, petere auxilium ab inermis pedibus, in maximo to seek aid from (his) unarmed feet, in the greatest metu, vertere nudum et cæcum corpus ad fear, (and) to turn (his) naked and blind body to hostes." Deinde obtestatus maximum Jovem, ut the enemies." Then having attested the greatest Jupiter, that adesset testis sceleris atque perfidiae he would be-present a witness of the guilt and of the treachery Bocchi, jubet Volucem abire castris, quoniam of Bocchus, he orders Volux to depart from the camps, since faceret hostilia. Ille lacrumans he might (did) do hostile (acts). He weeping (began) orare "ne-crederet ea; nihil to entreat (that) "he would not-believe those (things); nothing factum (esse) dolo, ac magis calliditate Jugurthæ; to have been done by deceit, and more by the craft of Jugurtha; cui speculanti videlicet suum iter to whom watching forsooth his journey might have (had) cognitum-esset. Cæterum quoniam been known. But since he [Jugurtha] might (did) haberet (imp. sub.) neque ingentem multitudinem, have neither a great multitude, et spes que opes ejus and the hopes and resources of him [Jugurtha] might (did) penderent (imp. sub.) ex suo patre, credere depend from his [Volux's] father, to believe illum ausurum nihil palam, cum ipse filius him about-to-dare nothing openly, when himself (his) son adesset (imp. sub.) testis; quare might be (was) present (as) a witness; wherefore videri optimum factu transire palam per media to seem best to be done to pass openly through the middle castra ejus; sese solum iturum cum camps of him [Jugurtha]; himself [Volux] alone about-to-go with Sullâ, Mauris vel præmissis, vel relictis Sylla, the Moors either being sent-before, or being left ibidem." Ea res probata (est), ut in tali negotio; there." That thing was approved-of, as in such a business; ac profecti statim, transeunt incolumes, and having set-out immediately, they pass-over safe, Jugurthâ dubio atque hæsitate, quia Jugurtha (being) doubtful and hesitating, because accesserant de-improviso. Deinde they had approached unexpectedly. Afterwards per ventum-est paucis diebus, quò intenderant it was arrived in a few days, whither they had determined ire. Ibi quidam Numida, nomine Aspar, agebat to go. There a certain Numidian, by name Aspar, did act multùm et familiariter cum Boccho, præmissus much and familiarly with Bocchus, being sent-before (as) orator ab Jugurthâ, postquam audierat a pleader [agent] by Jugurtha, after-that he had heard Sullam accitum, et speculatum subdolè consilia Sylla sent-for, and to watch craftily the designs Bocchi; præterea Dabar, filius Mussugradæ, ex of Bocchus; besides Dabar, son of Mussugrada, out-of gente Masinissæ, cæterùm impar materno the nation (family) of Masinissa, but unequal by the maternal genere, nam pater ejus ortus-erat ex concubinâ; race, for the father of him had sprung from a concubine; carus que acceptus Mauro ob multa dear and accepted (esteemed) to the Moor on-account-of many bona ingenii, quem Bocchus expertus good (qualities) of understanding, whom Bocchus having experienced esse fidum Romanis multis tempestatibus antè, to be faithful to the Romans in many occasions before, mittit illicò nunciatum ad Sullam, "Sese sends immediately to announce to Sylla, "Himself (to be) paratum facere quæ Romanus populus vellit; prepared to do what (things) the Roman people might will;

 ipse deligeret diem, locum, tempus colloquio; himself might choose the day, place, time for a conference;

sese habere omnia consulta integra cum illo; himself to have all deliberations entire with him;
 neu pertimesceret nor he might fear [that he had kept every thing to be deliberated with him, so that he might not fear] the ambassador of Jugurtha: quò communis res gereretur licentiùs; and in-order-that the common affair might be carried-on more freely; nam nequivisse caveri aliter ab insidiis for to have been-unable to be guarded otherwise from the snares ejus. Sed ego comperior Bocchum attinuisse of him. But I find Bocchus to have detained Romanos et Numidam simul spe the Romans and the Numidian at-the-same-time with the hope pacis, magis Punicā fide, quām ob ea, of peace, rather with Punic faith, than on-account-of those quæ prædicabat; que solitum (esse) (things), which he did declare; and to have been accustomed volvere multūm cum suo animo, traderet to revolve much with his mind, (whether) he should deliver Jugurtham Romanis, an Sullam illi; libidinem Jugurtha to the Romans, or Sylla to him; desire suassisse advorsum nos, metum pro nobis. to have persuaded (him) against us, fear for us.
 Igitur Sulla respondit, se locuturum pauca Therefore Sylla answered, himself about-to-speak a few (words) coram Aspare, cætera occultè, aut nullo, aut before Aspar, the rest secretly, either no-one, or quām-paucissumis presentibus; simul edocet as-few-as-possible being present; at-the-same-time he informs quæ responderentur. Postquam (him) what (things) should be answered. After-that congressi (sunt), sicuti voluerant, dicit se missum they met, so-as they had willed, he says himself being sent à consule venisse, quæsitus ab eo, by the consul to have come, to inquire from him, (whether) foret agitatus pacem an bellum. Tum he might be about-to-transact peace or war. Then rex, uti fuerat præceptum, jubet redire, post the king, as had been instructed, orders (him) to return, after decimum diem, ac decrevisse nihil etiam nunc, the tenth day, and to have determined nothing even now, sed responsorum illo die. Deinde ambo but about-to-answer in that day. Then both digressi (sunt) in sua castra. Sed ubi plerumque departed into their camps. But when most noctis processit, Sulla arcessitur occultè à of the night advanced, Sylla is sent-for secretly by Boccho; fidi interpres tantummodo adhibentur Bocchus; faithful interpreters only are applied ab utroque. Præterea, Dabar internuncius, (retained) by each. Besides, Dabar the inter-messenger, sanctus vir, jurat ambobus ex a holy (upright) man, swears to both according-to (their) sententiâ; ac rex statim incipit sic. Ego opinion; and the king immediately begins thus. I nunquam ratus-sum fore, uti maximus never thought (the thing) to be about-to-be, that the greatest rex in hâc terrâ, et opulentissimus omnium, quos king in this land, and the most-wealthy of all, whom novi, deberem gratiam privato homini. Et I have known, should owe a favour to a private man. And Hercule, Sulla, ante te cognitum, egomet tuli by Hercules, Sylla, before thee being known, I-myself have brought opem ultrò multis aliis orantibus; indigui assistance voluntarily to many others begging (it); I have wanted nullius. Ego lætor id, quod cæteri of none. I rejoice that, which the rest (of the world) solent dolere, imminutum (esse). Fuerit are accustomed to grieve, to have been diminished. It will have been pretium mihi eguisse aliquando tuæ amicitiae; a price (a reward) to me to have wanted [at length] of thy friendship; quâ habeo nihil carius apud meum animum.

 (than) which I have nothing dearer at (in) my mind Adeò licet experiri id; sume, utere arma, viros, Thus it is lawful to try that; take, use arms, men, pecuniam, postremò quicquid lubet animo; et money, lastly whatever it pleases to (thy) mind; and putaveris gratiam nunquam redditam thou shalt have thought (think) the favour never returned tibi, quoad vives; erit semper integra to thee, as-long-as thou shalt live; it shall be always entire apud me; denique, voles nihil with me; finally, thou shalt will [thou shalt want] nothing frustrà, me sciente. Nam, ut ego existumo, in-vain, I knowing (it). For, as I think, (it is) minus flagitosum regem vinci armis, quàm less disgraceful a king to be conquered by arms, than munificentia. Cæterùm accipe paucis by liberality. But receive (hear) in a few (words) de vestrâ republicâ, cuius missus-es concerning your state, of which thou hast been sent huc curator. Ego neque feci bellum Romano hither (as) manager. I neither have made war to the Roman populo, neque volui unquam factum; tutus-sum people, nor have I willed (it) ever made; I have defended meos fines aduersum armatos armis. Omitto my borders against armed (men) by arms. I lay-aside id; quando placet vobis ita, gerite bellum cum that; since it pleases to you thus, carry-on the war with Jugurthâ, uti vultis. Ego non-egrediar flumen Jugurtha, as you will. I shall not-go-without the river Mulucham, quod fuit inter me et Micipsam, Mulucha, which has been between me and Micipsa, neque sinam Jugurtham intrare id. Præterea, si nor will I suffer Jugurtha to enter that. Besides, if petiveris quid dignum que me que thou shalt have sought any (thing) worthy both me and vobis, (abl.) abibis haud repulsus. Sulla disseruit you, thou shalt depart not rejected. Sylla discoursed breviter et modicè ad ea pro se; multis briefly and moderately to those (words) for himself; in many (words) de pace et communibus rebus. Denique, patefecit about peace and the common affairs. Finally, he disclosed regi, "Senatum et Romanum populum non to the king, "The senate and Roman people not habituros in gratiâ, quod polliceatur (pres. sub.), about-to-have in favour, what he may promise (does promise), quoniam valuissent amplius armis; aliquid since they might have prevailed more by arms; some faciendum, quod videretur retulisse illorum, (thing) to-be-done, which might seem to have concerned of them, magis quam suâ, adeo id esse in promptu, more than his-own (interest), thus that to be in readiness quoniam haberet copiam (easily done), since he might (did) have power Jugurthæ, quem si tradidisset Romanis, of Jugurtha, whom if he might have (had) delivered to the Romans, fore, ut plurimum deberetur illi; to be about-to-be, that very-much should be-due to him; amicitiam, fœdus, partem Numidiæ, quam friendship, a treaty, the part of Numidia, which he might (did) peteret (imp. sub.) nunc, adventuram tunc solicit now, about-to-come-to (him) then ultrò." Rex primò negitare affinitatem, voluntarily." The king firstly (began) to deny-often [that] affinity, cognationem, præterea fœdus intervenisse; kindred, besides a treaty to have intervened [existed bead hoc metuere, ne usus tween them]; to this (besides) to fear, lest having used fluxâ fide averteret animos an unsteady faith [bad faith] he might turn-away the minds of (his) popularium, quîs et Jugurtha carus et countrymen, to whom both Jugurtha (was) dear and Romani essent invisi. Denique, fatigatus the Romans might be (were) hateful. Finally, being importuned sæpiùs, lenitur; et promittit se facturum more-frequently, he is softened; and promises himself about-to-do omnia ex voluntate Sullæ. Cæterùm all (things) according-to the will of Sylla. But constituant quæ visa (sunt) utilia ad pacem they settle what (things) seemed useful to peace simulandam, cujus Numida, defessus bello, to-be-feigned, of which the Numidian, wearied by the war, (was) avidissimus. Ita dolo composito, digrediuntur. most-eager. Thus the plot being arranged, they separate.

 At rex postero die appellat Asparem, But the king on the following day calls Aspar, legatum Jugurthæ, que dicit cognitum (esse) the ambassador of Jugurtha, and says (it) to have been known ex Sullâ, per Dabarem, bellum posse componi from Sylla, through Dabar, the war to be-able to be arranged conditionibus: quamobrem exquireret sententiam by conditions: wherefore he should seek the opinion sui regis. Ille, latus, venit in castra Jugurthæ. of his king. He, glad, came into the camps of Jugurtha.
 Deinde eductus cuncta ab illo, itinere Then being instructed all (things) by him, the journey properato, redit ad Bocchum post octavum being hastened, he returns to Bocchus after the eighth diem, et nunciat ei, Jugurtham cupere facere day, and announces to him, Jugurtha to desire to do omnia, quæ imperarentur; sed fidere all (things), which might be commanded; but to trust [but that parum Mario: pacem conventam cum he trusted] little to Marius: the peace agreed-on with Romanis imperatoribus fuisse frustrâ sæpè antè. the Roman commanders to have been in-vain often before.
 Cæterùm si Bocchus vellet, consultum ambobus, But if Bocchus might will, to consult for both, et ratam pacem, daret operam, ut and a stable peace, he should give (his) assistance, that veniretur unà in colloquium ab omnibus, it might be come together into a conference by all, quasi de pace; que [that all should meet in conference,] as-if about the peace; and ibi traderet Sullam sibi: cùm there he should deliver Sylla to himself: when he might (did) haberet talem virum in potestate, tum fore, have such a man in (his) power, then to be about-to-be uti fœdus fieret jussu senatūs que that a treaty might be made by command of the senate and Romani populi; neque nobilem hominem of the Roman people; neither a noble man relictum-iri in potestate hostium, non suā to be about-to-be-left in the power of enemies, [not by his ignavirā, sed ob rempublicam. Maurus indolence, [or fault], but] on-account-of the commonwealth. The Moor ipse, volvens hæc diu secum, tandem himself, revolving these (things) long with himself, at-length promisit. Cæterūm comperimus parum promised. But we have discovered little (whether) cunctatus (est) dolo, an verē. Sed ut regiæ he delayed by deceit, or truly. But as royal voluntates plerumque vehementes, sic wills (are) generally vehement, so (they are) mobiles; ipsæ sæpè advorsæ sibi. Postea fickle; themselves often opposite to themselves. Afterwards tempore et loco constituto, uti veniretur in a time and place being appointed, that it might be come into colloquium de pace, Bocchus appellare Sullam a conference about peace, Bocchus (began) to address Sylla modò, legatum Jugurthæ modò; habere now, the ambassador of Jugurtha now; to have (treat them) benignè; polliceri idem ambobus. Illi kindly; to promise the same (thing) to both. They (began) esse pariter læti, ac pleni bonæ spei. Sed eā to be equally glad, and full of good hope. But in that nocte, quæ fuit proxima antè diem decretum night, which was the next before the day decreed colloquio, Maurus, amicis adhibitis, for the conference, the Moor, (his) friends being applied (called-in), ac voluntate immutatā, cæteris remotis, and (his) will being changed, the rest being removed, ipse dicitur agitavisse multa secum, varius himself is said to have pondered much with himself, changeable pariter vultu corporis atque animo: quæ equally in the look of (his) body and in mind: which scilicet, ipso tacente, patefecisse forsooth, himself being-silent, (tended) to have disclosed occulta pectoris. Tamen, postremò, jubet the hidden (things) of the beast. However, lastly, he orders Sullam arcessiri; et tendit insidias Numidæ Sylla to be sent-for; and stretches (lays) snares for the Numidian ex sententiâ ejus. Deinde ubi dies advenit, according-to the opinion of him. Then when the day came, et nunciatum-est ei Jugurtham abesse haud and it was announced to him Jugurtha to be-distant not procul, procedit obvius, quasi causâ far, he proceeds opposite (towards), as-if by cause (for the sake) honoris, cum paucis amicis et nostro quæstore, of honour, with a few friends and our quæstor, [Sylla,] in tumulum facillum visu insidiantibus. unto a hillock very-easy to be seen to (those) lying-in-wait.

Numida accedit eòdem cum plerisque suis The Numidian approaches to the same (place) with most-of his necessariis inermis, ut dictum-erat; ac friends unarmed, as had been said (appointed); and statim signo dato, invaditur undique [immediately] a signal being given, he is attacked from-every-side simul ex insidiis. Cæteri obtruncati (sunt): together from the ambuscades. The rest were slaughtered: Jugurtha traditur vinctus Sullæ, et deductus Jugurtha is delivered-up bound to Sylla, and was conducted ab eo ad Marium. Per idem tempus, by him to Marius. Through (during) the same time, pugnatum (est) malè advorsum Gallos ab nostris it was fought badly against the Gauls by our ducibus Q. Cæpione, et M. Manlio. Quo metu generals Quintus Cæpio, and Marcus Manlius. From which fear omnis Italia contremuerat. Que illi et all Italy had trembled. And those (Romans) and Romani inde, usque ad nostram memoriam habuêre the Romans thence, until to our memory held sic; omnia alia esse prona (the matter) thus; all other (things) to be inclined (yielding) suæ virtuti; certare cum Gallis pro salute, non pro to their valour; to contend with the Gauls for safety, not for gloriâ. Sed postquam nunciatum (est) bellum glory. But after that it was announced the war confectum (esse) in Numidiâ, et Jugurtham adduci to have been finished in Numidia, and Jugurtha to be led vincutum Romam, Marius, absens, factus-est bound to Rome, Marius, (though) absent, was made consul, et provincia, Gallia decreta (est) ei; que consul, and the province, Gaul was decreed to him; and is triumphavit consul magnâ gloriâ Januariis he triumphed (as) consul with great glory in the Januarian calendis. Ex eâ tempestate, spes atque opes calends. From that time, the hopes and resources civitatis sitæ in illo. of the state (were) placed in him.

THE END.

HAMILTON AND LOCKE AND CLARK'S S Y S T E M
OF
CLASSICAL INSTRUCTION.
PUBLISHED BY CHARLES DESILVER, 714 CHESNUT ST., PHILADELPHIA.

We do amiss to spend seven or eight years merely scraping together so much miserable Latin and Greek as might be learned otherwise easily and delightfully in one year.—MILTON.

---

|                                                                                                                                                              |               |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------|
| VIRGIL: interlinea translation by Hart and Osborne—1 vol. royal 12mo, half Turkey .....                                                                      | Price, $1.50 |
| CÆSAR: interlinear translation by Hamilton and Clark—1 volume, royal 12mo, half Turkey .....                                                                 | Price, $1.50 |
| HORACE: interlinear translation by Stirling, Nuttall, and Clark—1 vol. royal 12mo, half Turkey .....                                                         | Price, $1.50 |
| CICERO: interlinear translation by Hamilton and Clark—1 volume, royal 12mo, half Turkey .....                                                                | Price, $1.50 |
| SALLUST: interlinear translation by Hamilton and Clark—1 vol. royal 12mo, half Turkey .....                                                                  | Price, $1.50 |
| CLARK'S PRACTICAL AND PROGRESSIVE LATIN GRAMMAR: adapted to the Interlinear Series of Classics, and to all other systems—1 vol. royal 12mo, half Turkey..... | Price, $1.00 |

The plan of this Grammar is altogether of a practical nature; for, while the scholar is learning the declensions and conjugations, he has them exemplified in lessons extracted from the Classics. Where this method has been properly applied, a more rapid and thorough knowledge of the elements of Latin has always been the result.

IN PREPARATION:

OVID: interlinear translation by Hamilton and Clark.

XENOPHON'S ANABASIS: interlinear translation by Hamilton and Clark.

HOMER'S ILIAD: interlinear translation by Hamilton and Clark.

To be followed by School Editions of the other Classic Writers, on the same plan.

The plan of these works is not new. It is merely the adaptation of the experience of many of the best and most inquiring minds in educational pursuits—methodising what was vague and loose. When the Latin tongue was the only language of diplomacy and scientific international communication, to acquire a knowledge of it was considered of more importance than now. This method was then recommended by Cardinal Wolsey, John Ascham, Latin Secretary to Queen Elizabeth, and by the best Latin scholar and writer of his time, John Milton; and in testimony of it John Locke says:—“When, by this way of interlining Latin and English one with another, he has got a moderate knowledge of the Latin tongue, he may then be advanced a little further. Nor let the objection that he will then know it only by note, fright any one. This, when well considered, is not of any moment against, but plainly for, this way of learning a language. The languages are only to be learned by note; and he that speaks them well has no other rule but that.” In teaching classes by oral dictation, these works present advantages that no others do.

C. DESILVER, PUBLISHER, PHILADELPHIA.

ABSTRACTS

From Reviews, Notices, and Recommendations of the Interlinear Series of Latin Classics, published by CHARLES DESILVER, No. 714 Chestnut St., Philadelphia.

---

From the New York Daily Times

The use of interlinear translations of the Classics has the sanction of common sense, and has been warmly recommended by such men as Cardinal Wolsey, Erasmus, Roger Ascham, John Milton, John Locke, and Sidney Smith.

We believe, with Sidney Smith, that this system, "the time being given, will make better scholars; and, the degree of scholarship being given, a much shorter time will be needed."

Charles Desilver, the Philadelphia publisher, has commenced issuing a series of Greek and Latin Classics, with interlinear translations, greatly superior to any we have yet seen.

---

From Eliza D. Willard, New York, Correspondent of the Boston Atlas.

Permit me to propose to all amateur students of the Greek and Latin Classics, from Maine to California, a vote of thanks to Mr. Charles Desilver, of Philadelphia, for the interlinear translations, which he is now issuing.

Having myself spent five weary years at Greek and Latin, I think I may pretend to venture an opinion in favour of the new system, that is, to the general class of students, but with teachers, quite old enough.

---

From the Daily Delta, New Orleans.

CÆSAR. — A more admirable literal translation of every word in Cæsar's great work, it would be impossible to meet with.

It must serve as the best possible work for the Latin student.

HORACE. — A new edition, carefully revised and collated by Thomas Clark. Too much praise cannot be given for the conscientious manner in which the task has been performed.

---

From the Bulletin, New Orleans.

VIRGIL AND HORACE, INTERLINEAR. — These two books should be in the hands of every scholar. They are gotten up in superior style, and would adorn any library.

Valuable Books for School Libraries.

LORD'S HISTORY. A MODERN HISTORY,

FROM THE TIME OF LUTHER TO THE FALL OF NAPOLEON. BY JOHN LORD, A.M.
LECTURER ON HISTORY.

A gentleman who has been listened to and eulogized as a lecturer on history, by Dr. Chalmers, and scores of other eminent men in Great Britain, and whose lectures are just now attracting much admiration in our own city, has no occasion for newspaper praise. It would be difficult to imagine how a volume like the present could be used as a class-book in a public institution without imparting benefits rarely experienced in kindred studies. Indeed we know no other compend covering the same ground equal to it; and it will be found as interesting and instructive in the family as in schools. No District School should be without it.—Newark, N. J. Advertiser.

(38)

HISTORICAL SERIES.

LORD'S HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES

A New History of the United States of America,

FOR THE USE OF SCHOOLS.

BY JOHN LORD, A. M.,

AUTHOR OF A MODERN HISTORY FROM THE TIME OF LUTHER TO THE FALL OF NAPOLEON.

This work is written in the attractive style for which the author is ~~so~~ noted, and is admirably calculated to produce in the minds of pupils who shall use it a love for the study.

It is beautifully illustrated with numerous fine Engravings, and contains an excellent coloured Map of the United States, and several additional maps showing the position of various battle-fields and noted places in our history.

N O T I C E S.

From the Philadelphia American Courier.

This may very safely be pronounced a much needed and at the same time a most admirably executed volume for the schools of the country, and for which we unhesitatingly predict great popularity and an immense demand. The great leading facts in our national history are presented in plain, well expressed terms, without verboseness or ambiguity, by one who has proved himself to be an able scholar, a just historian, and a patriot of enlarged, liberal views. It is just the work to give the youthful mind right and lasting impressions of the history of the country.

From the New York Evening Mirror.

It is not only an excellent School History, but an excellent general history, that may be perused with profit by readers of all ages and acquirements.

From the Philadelphia City Item.

This book will supply a deficiency long acknowledged in school literature. We doubt if any other man in the country is so well calculated to write this history. Mr. Lord is a great favourite of ours. His style is eminently lucid, vigorous, and comprehensive. We think we can, without fear of contradiction, pronounce him a master of the English tongue. With a wealth of language known to but few, he is singularly simple in his choice of words. His sentences are direct and to the point, and his matter is always the gist of the story. These are rare qualifications, and almost indispensable in a historian. We shall be mistaken if this work is not at once hailed with acclamation as by far the best school history in the United States yet published. It should at once be introduced into our Public Schools.

WORKS ON THE NATURAL SCIENCES.

PARTICULAR ATTENTION IS INVITED TO
Charles Desilver's
SCHOOL PUBLICATIONS
UPON THE NATURAL SCIENCES.

AMONG THEM ARE
JOHNSTON'S SERIES.

JOHNSTON'S TURNER'S CHEMISTRY.
A MANUAL OF CHEMISTRY,

ON THE BASIS OF DR. TURNER'S ELEMENTS OF CHEMISTRY, CONTAINING, IN A CONDENSED FORM, ALL THE MOST IMPORTANT FACTS AND PRINCIPLES OF THE SCIENCE. DESIGNED AS A TEXT-BOOK IN COLLEGES AND OTHER SEMINARIES OF LEARNING.

A NEW EDITION.
BY JOHN JOHNSTON, A. M.,
Professor of Natural Science in Wesleyan University.

JOHNSTON'S TURNER'S ELEMENTARY CHEMISTRY
FOR THE USE OF COMMON SCHOOLS. One Vol. 18mo.

•

(25)

JOHNSTON'S SERIES.

---

JOHNSTON'S NATURAL PHILOSOPHY.

REVISED EDITION.

ENLARGED AND IMPROVED.

A Manual of Natural Philosophy,

COMPILED FROM VARIOUS SOURCES, AND DESIGNED AS A TEXT-BOOK IN HIGH SCHOOLS AND ACADEMIES.

BY JOHN JOHNSTON, A.M.,

PROFESSOR OF NATURAL SCIENCE IN THE WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY.

---

The above valuable series of books were prepared by JOHN JOHNSTON, A.M., Professor of Natural Science in the Wesleyan University, Middletown, Ct. The Chemistry is the standard text-book of many of the leading Colleges and prominent Medical Institutions of the country. The Elementary Chemistry, very recently published, has been adopted in many High Schools and Academies, in all parts of the country.

The present edition of Johnston's Natural Philosophy will be found much enlarged and improved. Exact in its definitions, original in its illustrations, full and familiar in explanation, the publishers are assured it will require only to be examined to be approved. It has been recently recommended by the Board of Education of the State of New Hampshire for the use of the Common Schools of the State; it has also been adopted in the High School of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and in many Academies and Schools in various sections of the country.

A few notices of the series, from among many which have been received are appended

(26)

MANESCA'S FRENCH GRAMMAR;
Or the Serial and Oral Method of Teaching Languages:—Adapted to the French.

BY L. MANESCA.

SERIAL AND ORAL METHOD.

MANESCA'S FRENCH READER.

Prepared for the use of Students who have gone through the Course of Lessons contained in the method; to which is added,

A TABLE OF THE FRENCH VERBS,

Arranged and classified on a new plan, calculated to facilitate greatly their acquisition. By L. MANESCA.

EXTRACTS OF NOTICES OF MANESCA'S FRENCH GRAMMAR.

From the New York Daily Tribune.

This is no doubt one of the most rational and effective manuals for the teaching of languages that has ever been prepared; any person, with an ordinary degree of attention, may, with its aid, be certain of obtaining a sound, practical knowledge of the French in a short time. The Serial and Oral method was discovered by JOHN MANESCA, who devoted a life of profound philosophical investigation to the subject of teaching languages. The result of his labours was the creation of the system in question. Various imitations have been made of his matchless method, and it has become more widely and popularly known under other names than his own. The most successful imitation is that made by OLLENDORFF, of Paris, a German teacher, into whose hands the system fell by accident, a few years since, and who appropriated it as an invention of his own.

From the New York Evening Post.

This appears to us a very able work, arranged with great order and method, and admirably adapted to the end it has in view. "I call the method, the Serial," says the author in the preface, "because the elements of our language are distributed and classified in a series, that is, in a naturally progressive and connected order, conformable to the nature of language and to the laws of acquisition of the understanding." The elements are arranged, each in its proper place, forming one great chain of connected and dependent links. With the aid of this Serial arrangement the student is led on by easy steps, from the simpler to the more complex part of the language, and acquires it without the vexatious labour, growing out of the artificial difficulties which false systems create. The term Oral indicates that the method communicates a knowledge of the spoken language.

The oral exercises have been prepared, and are introduced for the purpose of communicating this knowledge. The serial and oral method is the same in principle as that which nature employs in teaching the child its mother tongue, but being adapted to a maturer age, the series of which the language is composed, is condensed and greatly abridged, so that an amount of language can, in a few months, be acquired by the student, which the child requires years to learn.

HISTORICAL SERIES.

---

PINNOCK'S HISTORICAL SERIES.

---

PINNOCK'S ENGLAND.

REVISED EDITION.

PINNOCK'S IMPROVED EDITION OF DR. GOLDSMITH'S HISTORY OF ENGLAND FROM THE INVASION OF JULIUS CÆSAR TO THE DEATH OF GEORGE THE II.

WITH A CONTINUATION TO THE YEAR 1845:

WITH QUESTIONS FOR EXAMINATION AT THE END OF EACH SECTION;

RESIDES A VARIETY OF VALUABLE INFORMATION ADDED THROUGHOUT THE WORK,

Consisting of Tables of Contemporary Sovereigns and eminent Persons, copious Explanatory Notes, Remarks on the Politics, Manners and Literature of the Age, and an Outline of the Constitution.

ILLUSTRATED WITH NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTH AMERICAN, CORRECTED AND REVIS'D FROM THE THIRTY-FIFTH ENGLISH EDITION.

By W. C. TAYLOR, LL. D., OF TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN, Author of a Manual of Ancient and Modern History, &c &c.

(9)

SCHOOL LIBRARY BOOKS.

---

PINNOCK'S FRANCE,

HISTORY OF FRANCE AND NORMANDY, FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES TO THE REVOLUTION OF 1848,

WITH QUESTIONS FOR EXAMINATION AT THE END OF EACH SECTION,

BY W. C. TAYLOR, LL. D., OF TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN,

Author of a Manual of Ancient and Modern History, &c. &c., and Editor of Pincock's Improved editions of Goldsmith's Greece, Rome, and England.

ILLUSTRATED WITH NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS.

TWENTY-FIFTH AMERICAN FROM THE THIRD ENGLISH EDITION.

---

PINNOCK'S ROME,

REVISED EDITION,

PINNOCK'S IMPROVED EDITION OF DR. GOLDSMITH'S HISTORY OF ROME, TO WHICH IS PREFIXED

AN INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF ROMAN HISTORY, AND A GREAT VARIETY OF INFORMATION THROUGHOUT THE WORK,

ON THE MANNERS, INSTITUTIONS, AND ANTIQUITIES OF THE ROMANS;

WITH QUESTIONS FOR EXAMINATION AT THE END OF EACH SECTION.

SIXTY-FIFTH AMERICAN, FROM THE TWENTY-THIRD LONDON EDITION, IMPROVED

BY W. C. TAYLOR, LL. D.,

WITH NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS BY ATHERTON AND OTHERS.

---

PINNOCK'S GREECE,

REVISED EDITION,

PINNOCK'S IMPROVED EDITION OF DR. GOLDSMITH'S HISTORY OF GREECE, REVISED, CORRECTED, AND VERY CONSIDERABLY ENLARGED,

BY THE ADDITION OF SEVERAL NEW CHAPTERS, AND NUMEROUS USEFUL NOTES.

WITH QUESTIONS FOR EXAMINATION AT THE END OF EACH SECTION.

FOORTY-FIFTH AMERICAN, FROM THE NINETEENTH LONDON EDITION, IMPROVED

BY W. C. TAYLOR, LL. D.,

WITH NUMEROUS ENGRAVINGS, BY ATHERTON AND OTHERS.

Pincock's Series have been recommended by several State Superintendents for the School Libraries of their respective States, and great numbers of them have been sold for that purpose. The present editions of the Histories of England, Greece and Rome, were revised by the eminent Historian, W. C. TAYLOR, LL.D., of Trinity College, Dublin, who is also the author of the History of France. The different volumes of the series are handsomely illustrated and substantially bound.

(40)

HISTORICAL SERIES.

---

HISTORICAL SCHOOL PUBLICATIONS

OF

CHARLES DESILVER.

---

LORD'S HISTORY.

A Modern History,

FROM THE TIME OF LUTHER TO THE FALL OF NAPOLEON

FOR THE USE OF SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES

BY JOHN LORD, A.M.,

LECTURER ON HISTORY.

---

Of the fitness of Mr. Lord to prepare such a history, some opinion was formed from a perusal of the English and American testimonies at his Historical Lectures, a few of which are appended.

MATHEMATICAL WORKS.

---

VIRGINIA MILITARY INSTITUTE

MATHEMATICAL SERIES,

BY COL. FRANCIS H. SMITH,

SUPERINTENDENT OF THE VIRGINIA MILITARY INSTITUTE.

---

INTRODUCTION TO SMITH AND DUKE'S ARITHMETIC.

BY FRANCIS H. SMITH, A.M.

---

AMERICAN STATISTICAL ARITHMETIC.

DESIGNED FOR ACADEMIES AND SCHOOLS.

BY FRANCIS H. SMITH, A.M.

Superintendent and Professor of Mathematics in the Virginia Military Institute; late Professor of Mathematics in Hampden Sydney College, and formerly Assistant Professor in the United States Military Academy, West Point;

AND R. T. W. DUKE,

Assistant Professor of Mathematics in the Virginia Military Institute.

THIRD EDITION.

---

KEY TO SMITH AND DUKE'S AMERICAN STATISTICAL ARITHMETIC.

PREPARED BY WILLIAM FORBES,

Assistant Professor of Mathematics in the Virginia Military Institute.

---

SMITH'S ALGEBRA.

AN ELEMENTARY TREATISE ON ALGEBRA,

PREPARED FOR THE USE OF THE CADETS OF THE VIRGINIA MILITARY INSTITUTE, AND ADAPTED TO THE PRESENT STATE OF MATHE-MATICAL INSTRUCTION IN THE SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, AND COLLEGES OF THE UNITED STATES.

BY FRANCIS H. SMITH, A.M.

This work is designed to present as complete an Elementary course of Algebra, as the time devoted to the study of Mathematics in the Colleges of our country will allow; while it will be equally within the comprehension of the pupil of the High School or Academy.

SARGENT'S STANDARD SPEAKER.

---

JUST PUBLISHED,

In one demi-octavo volume of 558 pages.

THE STANDARD SPEAKER,

CONTAINING

Extracts in Prose and Poetry,

FOR DECLAMATION IN SCHOOLS, ACADEMIES, LYCEUMS, COLLEGES.

EWLY translated or compiled from celebrated Orators, Authors, and popular Debaters, ancient and modern.

A TREATISE ON ORATORY AND ELOCUTION,

WITH NOTES EXPLANATORY AND BIOGRAPHICAL.

BY EPES SARGENT.

---

This work has been compiled with great care, and contains a majority of new pieces. It is far more comprehensive than any similar work, and is adapted for use not only as a Speaker, but to the general reader, as a collection containing many new, rare, and elegant extracts.

From among a great number of commendatory notices received from essayists, the press, and teachers of elocution, a few are subjoined.

---

From E. P. WHIPPLE, Esq., the well-known Essayist and Critic.

We have no hesitation in saying that this is the best compilation of the kind, in the variety and in the comprehensiveness of its selections, which has been made on either side of the Atlantic. The various pieces are selected with great judgment from a long array of celebrated orators and writers. A good portion of the work is devoted to extracts from late speeches in France, England, and America, which have never before appeared in a collection of the kind; and the works of the great masters of eloquence, Chatham, Burke, Pitt, Fox, Grattan, Emmett, Shiel, and Webster, have been carefully studied for new specimens. The original translations from the French are admirably executed, and add a novel feature to the work. The amount of editorial labor expended on the whole compilation must have been very great — greater, we think, than that of any other Speaker.

The introductory treatise on Oratory and Elocution is a model of condensation, full of matter, clear, sensible, and available in every part. Not only is the volume admirably adapted to serve its primal purpose as a Speaker, but to the general reader it will be found to be a most stimulating and attractive book, better than any work of "elegant extracts" we have seen.

(19)

SARGENT'S STANDARD SPEAKER.

---

From the Knickerbocker (N. Y.) Magazine.

While he (the compiler) has retained all the indispensable masterpieces, and restored many that have been omitted from the collections the last twenty years, he has given an amount of fresh, new, and appropriate matter, that will astonish and delight the youthful prize-seeking orators of our academies and schools. He has translated from Mirabeau and Victor Hugo a number of speeches of appropriate length, that will become as familiar as the "Give me liberty or give me death" speech of Patrick Henry.

---

From E. S. Dixwell, Esq., Late Principal of the Public Latin School, Boston.

The volume seems to me to be a very valuable one, and to contain more available matter than any book of the kind I ever saw. Beside the old standard pieces, you have given us a great many new ones, and, to my surprise, have put a new vigor into some of the old translations, which makes them quite new and redolent of their originals.

---

From the Lowell Courier.

The whole range of ancient and modern oratory, pulpit, forensic, or occasional, as well as of poetry, dramatic, lyrical, or epic, has been explored, and the choicest gems from each brought together into this literary casket. The volume should be on the table of every friend of elegant letters, as a collection of rare and beautiful extracts, to be read and read again.

---

From the Boston Daily Advertiser.

The volume deserves to be, what its title claims, a "STANDARD SPEAKER."

---

From the New York Express.

The Standard Speaker is one of the most superbly executed works that ever emanated from the American press, and is the best book for the purposes for which it was designed, ever issued in the language. It must become a standard school-book, wherever reading and elocution are taught.

---

From the New York Home Journal.

The chimerical "systems," through which a short cut to the attainment of good elocution is promised, are set down at their true value. All the available information on the subject is here summed up. The principal department is the Senatorial; and this is much more full and satisfactory than anything of the kind that has yet appeared in any elocutionary collection.

---

It is adapted to the wants of the whole Union, and not of a section.—New Orleans Picayune.

X

---

SARGENT'S SELECTIONS IN POETRY.

---

SELECTIONS IN POETRY, FOR EXERCISES AT SCHOOL AND AT HOME.

EDITED BY EPES SARGENT.

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY BILLINGS AND OTHERS.

This beautiful collection has been received with scarcely less enthusiasm than the well-known "Standard Speaker," compiled by the same author.

NOTICES OF THE PRESS.

From the Home Journal.

"Many a school will be enlightened, and many a fireside enlivened by the perusal of these pure and beautiful effusions of the muse."

From the Boston Traveller.

"The editor, with an observant and practised eye, seems to have ranged the whole field of periodical literature, and to have culled therefrom a rare collection of unfading flowers. The volume is an excellent one for the use of schools, and no less valuable as a table and literary companion."

From the Boston Journal.

"Every piece in the book is a gem. British and American collections of poetry have been rifled of their choicest sweets, to make up the contents."

From Godey's Lady's Book.

"The selections are most judicious, chaste and numerous, and the illustrations beautiful."

From a Roxbury (Mass.) Paper.

"We certainly know of no collection of English poetry that at all approaches this in value."

From the Boston Commonwealth.

"The artists, in the illustrations which adorn this book, have shown a true appreciation of the thoughts of the poets."

From the Cambridge (Mass.) Chronicle.

"We believe this to be the best collection of English poetry that can be found in any single volume, of similar size."

(28)

JUN 22 1965

